Big Crowd Has Fine Time at Firemen's Ball

The Firemen Have Their Usual Large Attendance At The Annual Ball

GOOD TIME IS REPORTED

I was a huge success from every standpoint, was the Annual Firemen's Ball, held on Monday evening of this week, with a crowd in attendance that overflowed the opera house. One hundred twenty-eight dance tickets were sold, which, with the donations, etc., will bring the receipts of the evening up to around two hundred and fifteen dollars. The boys, after deducting the expenses of the evening, expect to clear about $125 to $150.

With the Melody Boys' Orchestra from Iowa Falls to furnish the music, the floor was crowded with couples enjoying the dances. Scores of spectators watched the enjoyment. Lunches were served on the stage thruout the evening, which was taken advantage of by many. The evening was ideal, and many people were in attendance from towns around at this winter's fete.

The Firemen's Annual Ball is always one of the most enjoyable affairs of the winter season, and the one held Monday night was pronounced the best ever, with the largest attendance and the best time enjoyed. The boys are to be congratulated upon the success of their endeavor, and they certainly have the best wishes of the entire community in anything which they may undertake.

JUDGE WRIGHT NOT A CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION

Monitor: Judge R. M. Wright of Fort Dodge who was in Clarion yesterday to hold a short session of court, definitely decided not to be a canidate for re-election. He requests that support be given to the younger man, Clarence M. Hanson, also of Fort Dodge, who is an active canidate.

In a statement to the public Judge Wright says:

In a very restricted sense, I have been a canidate to succeed myself as judge of this judicial district; but I have never intended to be a canidate, unless I could receive the unanimous support of the people of my own county and have no competition. If there had been no opposition, I would gladly have given to the public the best service that in me lies and the best of my strength and ability but under no conceivable circumstanes whatsoever, will I consent to go into a contest or fight for the nomination. I, therefore, at this time anounce that I am not a canidate for renomination, and I now ask you to give your cordial support to the young man who is a canidate. He is a worthy young man, and in my opinion will make a good judge. In withdrawing, I desire to say to the public of Webster county and to the people of this judicial district that I feel that I have been greatly honored by being sent to the legislature of Iowa for three terms and by being nominated and elected four times as judge of the Eleventh Judicial District of Iowa, and this, practically without opposition except as to my first nomination for judge. I assure you that I deeply appreciate the honors that you have conferred upon me, and I thank you. I have, however, one wish in the premises, and that is this: that Mr. E. P. Tinkham be appointed by my successor as his shorthand reporter.

The coming January term of court will be my last term of court in Webster county; and I hope to make it a good business term.

Gratefully yours,
R. M. WRIGHT.

OBITUARY

W. H. WHITE

William Henry White was born in Galena, Illinois, June 9th, 1861 and died at the home of his son, W. C. White, at Fort Dodge on December 24th, 1921. At Galena he grew to manhood and then with his parents moved to Plattsville, Wisconsin, where he attended the Wisconsin State Normal School. Afterwards he attended the Bailey Business College at Dubuque, graduating in the spring of 1881.

In March 1883 he came to Belmond with his parents and became engaged with his father in the general mercantile business, continuing this business after his father's death until August 1920. He was also agent for the Wells Fargo Express Company for twenty-two years.

He was married to Phoebe Anna Rick, of Centerville, Iowa, March 4, 1888 and to this union were born two sons, William Clair, of Fort Dodge and Joseph Starr, of this city, who succeeded his father in the express business.

Although the deceased had not been in the best of health for several months his death came as a shock to his family and friends. Mr. White was well known, having been one of the pioneer business men of this city. He was honest and upright and although a man of a quiet and unassuming character his niche in life was felt by his interesting personality. In his boyhood he was taught the love of God and although making no big demonstration of this fact, those who were with him through his last days found wrapped up in his heart that devine love which was manifested in his unselfishness and praise for all that was done for him. He possessed a keen sense of humor and a fine appreciation of the higher arts, being a lover of music. This was a source of much enjoyment to him as he was a master of many instruments.

Mr. White will not only be missed by his family, but by his friends and former associates.

And thus closes another life
And yet—we would not call him to this strife,
His soul is at rest.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to all who by words and deeds expressed their sympathy in our recent bereavement caused by the sickness and death of our beloved husband and father, and also for the beautiful floral offerings.

Polmateer, uncle of the bride, residing south of Belmond. The Independent extends its best wishes.

The editor was numbered among the missing Wednesday, being on the sick list, and was unable to obtain the latest developments in the dispute between the Belmond Telephone Company and the farmers. We hope to give our readers further fact on the case next week. The impression seems by some that the Farm Bureau is fighting the Telephone Company, whereas such is not the case; the disagreement, as the Independent understand it, being entirely between the farmers and the Company.

Our friend, "Local Citizen," seemed to have been slightly—a'hem—mistaken last week, or else he is playing it safety first, as witnessed by his following contribution:

"Now Mary just got madder than thunder,
Because of her dress I made such a blunder;
When she read it she raved and she tore—
I stayed in the basement that night and kept the furnace warm—
Now I've got to get Mary good natured,
So I'll just buy her something new;
To have her stand around storming—
That will never do.

President Hunt Answers Article In Homestead

Mis-Statements Made By Homestead Are Answered By Farm Bureau Head

DOES NOT MINCE WORDS

To County Farm Bureau Presidents, County Agents and others addressed:

Regarding the article by Dante Pierce criticising Mr. Cunningham and myself for having anything to do with the Iowa Finance Corporation, I wish to say that I can draw only on conclusion, namely, that Mr. Pierce wants to discredit the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, and at the same time kill the Iowa Finance Corporation. In this desire he is evidently receiving encouragement from certain other interests who fear that the farmers are going to have a finance corporation, enabling them to secure some independence in future marketing plan.

Mr. Pierce says in substance that we are against the War Finance Corporation. There is no truth in that statement. We did object that the War Finance Corporation was not getting new money to some farmers whom we thought might make good use of it and who were in a position to offer sufficient security for the loan. For the purpose of getting new money to these farmers, Mr. Cunningham went to Washington and secured from Mr. Meyer and his War Finance Committee a promise of money when the Iowa Credit Corporation had completed its sale of stock up to one million dollars. Mr. Meyer gave Mr. Cunningham a letter stating definitely what he would do when the Iowa Finance Corporation had completed sale of stock as contemplated. In this letter Mr. Meyer said that the Iowa Credit Corporation with a million dollars of capital should enjoy a credit up to twelve times its capital stock. In other words, up to twelve million dollars.

In quoting from this letter Mr. Pierce was absolutely unfair and misrepresented, taking a part of two paragraphs in the Meyers letter and making it appear that no definite promise was made. I am enclosing copy of the letter from Mr. Meyer so that you can see exactly what he did say, and by comparing with the Pierce article you will be able to see how Pierce manipulated the letter to carry out his purpose.

Mr. E. H. Cunningham, Vice-President Iowa Farm Credit Corporation, 410 Observatory Bldg., Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Sir: Referring to your interview with the Board of Directors of th War Finance Corporation I am authorized by the directors to advise you that, when you have completed your cash capital stock subscriptions to the total amount of one million as now contemplated the Board will be pleased to entertain applications from your Company. The War Finance Corporation will be prepared to consider business involving a liberal extension of financial assistance to your Corporation, proportionate to its capital and in accordance with the character of the business propositions submitted, having due regard to the management of your company, which appears to be substantial.

It is not the policy of the War Finance Corporation to make contracts in advance with any company as to the exact volume of business it may be prepared to consider, but it is in accordance with established commercial and financial practice, in the case of live stock loans for such corporations as the Iowa Farm Credit Corporation to be able to command credit to the extent of eight to twelve times its paid in capital stock, dependent, as above stated, on the character of the business and management.

The problem of the War Finance Corporation is how to make its resources effective in relieving the agricultural situation. With the enlargement of the capital in your Corporation, as now contemplated our Board feel that your organization may be a most helpful instrument in assisting the War Finance Corporation to carry out the purposes intended by the Congress when it passed legislation in aid of the agricultural interests of the country.

Very truly yours,
Signed: Eugene Meyer, Jr.
Managing Director.

"HOMESTEAD"—"I quote portions of Mr. Meyer's letter, verbatim: It is addressed to Mr. Cunningham, under date of November 25, 1921:

"Referring to your interview with the Board of directors of the War Finance Corporation, I am authorized by the directors to advise you that, when you have completed your cash capital stock subscription to the total amount of one million dollars as now contemplated, the Board will be pleased to entertain applications from your company.

"It is not the policy of the War Finance Corporation to make contracts in advance with any company as to the exact volume of business it may be prepared to consider."

I might say further that Mr. Cunningham was one of the first to ask for Iowa when it became known that the War Finance Act was going to be operative for the benefit of agriculture. He made a statement to Mr. Meyer showing that Iowa was badly in need of financial aid and insisted that the farmers of our state receive their just share of the billion dollar appropriation provided for to get War Finance money for the farmers of Iowa, it shows very poor grace in Mr. Pierce to say that we are striving to kill the War Finance Corporation in order that the Iowa Credit Corporation might function.

With reference to the salesmen for the Iowa Credit Corporation being ex-associate packing stock salesmen, I wish to say that the officers in charge of the Corporation have affidavits from every one now employed to the effect that they had nothing to do with the selling of associate packing house stuff. You may know that the law passed last year regulating the sale of corporation stock in Iowa provides that the stock salesmen before they are allowed to solicit stock in this state are required to make an affidavit as to their previous occupation. Unless they make a satisfactory statement to the Secretary of State they are not issued a permit to enter into this line of work, so Mr. Pierce is evidently wrong in his statement that these salesmen were previously engaged in the sale of associate packing house stuff.

Mr. Pierce would have his readers believe that Mr. Cunningham and myself are large stockholders, and presumably drawing large salaries as officers of the Iowa Credit Corporation. In that connection allow me to make the statement that Mr. Cunningham has subscribed for $1,000 of Iowa Credit Corporation stock. I have subscribed for $1,000 of this stock. Neither of us have received a dollar in the way of salaries from the Iowa Credit Corporation, and do not expect to receive any salary from this source in the future. Neither have we in any way been connected with the sale of its stock. I might say further that the officers now engaged in looking after the affairs of the Iowa Credit Corporation are not drawing a salary, nor will they draw a salary under the present agreement until the Credit Corporation is a going concern. The only salary connected with the employees of the office of this Iowa Credit Corporation at the present time consists of one stenographer.

Mr. Pierce would have you believe that only $142,600.00 of stock have been sold to date, and draws the conclusion that two years will elapse before the one million dollar mark is reached. This statement is misleading and untrue. The records in the office of the Iowa Credit Corporation show that there has been to date $525,000.00 of stock subscribed for. Not all this stock has been paid up in cash, but it is sold and will be paid for when the million dollar point is reached. Most people understand that stock issued, which accounts for the showing at the Secretary of

THE NEW YEAR

The Old Year is gone, we are standing upon
The threshold that lead to the new;
But the measure of things which the New Year brings
Depends on the work that we do.
So [illegible] whatever be-

We will put forth our [illegible] finest
[illegible]
Success shall attend [illegible] last.
But [illegible] and it's

Though [illegible]

Yet [illegible]
We'll [illegible]

May the bright New Year with its promise and cheer
Find each of us glad it's begun;
Let us labor to win [illegible]
So long as there's work to be done.

LOCAL ADS TO BE CASH

Beginning this week, all "local" advertising in the Independent will be cash in advance. "Local" ads are "readers," run among the news matter of the paper. This will hold on all local ads outside of those with whom the Independent has a steady account.

We are making this change for several reasons, among them being the fact that they are a great deal of trouble in keeping track of, in entering them on the books from week to week and making the many changes which they necessitate, and by making them cash in advance it cuts down on the amount of book work necessary to keep them straight on our records. The 20 cent local requires as much attention as does the $20 ad. Another reason is that they are so often phoned in, and then forgotten by the party in a week or so, and upon presentation of the bill they cannot remember how they happen to owe it, or think they have paid it, and things become balled up all around. The Independent has on its books today seventy-five dollars in old local ads, which money could just as well have been paid in advance and a lot of work and trouble saved all around.

Locals will be accepted over the phone, but we must ask that the cost be sent in before publication. It is easy to find the cost: Figure six words to the line, whether the word is "California" or "it," and figure each line at 10 cents. If mailed, please enclose stamps or cash. A great many papers have adopted the cash-in-advance plan on this class of advertising and have found it worth while. All dailies operate under it in their classified columns, unless the customer is one with whom they have had or are starting an account. We trust our readers will help us in observing this, and we thank them in advance, assuring you that we will give you the very best service.

MEMORIAL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

We extend our hearts and hands to all to help make this a happy New Year. Come and we will do our best to make life's load a little lighter and at any time you are in need of a helping hand remember that we are here to help in every way within our power.

The first services of the new year were well attended and full of interest. We were nearly up to the mark set for an average attendance for the year. The school is now thoroly organized for efficient work. We urge every man who has no Bible school connection to come and join our Men's Bible Class. We are going to have some good times together and we would like to have you with us. Sabbath school begins at 10:00 a. m. and our morning worship at 11:00. The evening services at 7:30 and Miss Mildred Parsons will be the leader next Sunday. Thursday evening at 7:00 we are intending to start a Bible Study Class which is open to all.

The annual church meeting last Tuesday will be long remembered by all who were there. Rev. Johnson's address was right up to date and while realizing the difficulties of our times was nevertheless full of hope and inspiration. The reports showed all departments of the church in a flourishing condition. We hope to be able to carry the inspiration of this day through the whole year. If you have not been in the habit of attending church, surprise your friends by starting in next Sabbath. Come with us and we will do you good.

In Clarion, the phone service charges are at the highest peak in the history of the exchange. The last raise came with the promise on the part of the company that the employes would realize the benefit of the increase, but the writer has talked to some of these same employes and has yet to learn where any sum equal to the increased rental charges are being paid to local employes. Possibly the need for extra dividends and extension, not to mention increased salaries for officials, is getting the bulk of the raise.

Some of the towns over Iowa which are served by the Bell and affiliated companies, are already demanding lower rates. The News believes that the patrons of the exchange in Clarion would back our city council in an effort to put the rates nearer the pre-war basis than they are at present.—News.

POST-HOLIDAY REFLECTIONS

The holidays are over and it's difficult for me
To get my work accomplished in the way that it should be.
My purse is flat and empty, pay day is a week away
And how I'll ever live till then is more than I can say.
I did my shopping early and I did my swapping late
I stood in line for hours at the "Parcels Mailed Here" gate;
Now the dizzy days are over and oh gee, how hard it is
To forget the celebration and to settle down to biz.
It strikes me that the U. S. A. is feeling just the same,
We've all been playing Santa Claus and how we liked the game!
For several years we hit it up in one grand spending spree
And then the coin gave out and oh, the difference to me!
So we must simply learn, as we have learned before
That when we're daily earning less, we can't be spending more;
And a lesson in economy is what we chiefly need
For the big Joy Ride is over and we're down to second speed.

CONDITIONS IN GERMANY

Conditions Are Serious, Says George Herman, of Marshalltown

Marshalltown Times Republican: It was a changed Germany that George Herman, former councilman of this city, found in an eight months' stay in his native land. It is a Germany in which he would have no desire to live; a Germany where the common people at the present time are having a hard time to earn enough to eat, and many find themselves undernourished.

Mr. Herman has just reached home from his extended stay in the former empire. He visited principally in Bavaria, his native state, but spent some time in the different important centers.

Even though he found many things to remind him of the many changes that have taken place in the forty-one years since he came to this country. Mr. Herman considered Germany today the best country in Europe. It excels in that almost everybody is doing something and are not afraid to work. To be true, the common people earn but little, and what little they earn does not buy very much, but they are employed and managed to get enough to eat, except in the extreme cases of the very poor.

The collapse of the German mark is the big discouraging feature just now. Common labor is being paid ten marks an hour, or five cents in American money, and German laborers work an eight hour day. This will buy food for an average family but it will not also buy clothes.

A man's suit costs today from 800 to 1,000 marks. A shirt is worth 130 marks. A pair of common baby's shoes cost from fifty to 100 marks. Herman himself bought a suit of clothes, paying or it 1,300 marks. At the value of the mark at that time the suit cost him in American money, $21. The same suit here, quality and workmanship equal, would cost $80.

Other wearing apparel is on the same high plane, and it is not to be wondered that the German laborer earning 80 marks a day cannot spend much for luxuries. If he wants a cigaret he must pay forty pfenigs, or about one-fourth of a cent in American money. A package would cost him fifty marks, or the better part of a day's wages, and he cannot afford that. Herman says that he saw more cigarets bought singly than in packages. A stein of Bavarian beer, and real beer, too, costs two marks, or one cent in our money. The trouble is, however, to get the two marks for beer.

Mr. Herman says that the government owned railroads in Germany are a great handicap to the country at the present time. There are so many pensioners that the government treasury is being kept drained to meet the pension rolls. Then Herman says, there are about five men on every job, doing the work that one ought to do.

Mr. Herman says that if the combination of German and American capital, now trying to buy from the government the railroads, can negotiate their deal, he thinks that it will be the solution of the German problem. The government can get some money through the sale to pay its debt to the allies, and with the railroads being operated by a private corporation more American money could be circulated in the country. The value of the mark could be raised, and confidence restored.

Mr. Herman says that Germany is "one big robbers' roost." Everybody fears the collapse of the government and is profiteering. Farmers who made money during the war and have it now, even though it will not buy much, are buying mercrandise to convert their worthless marks into tangible assets in the event that the government goes broke. He saw in one store a farmer buy bolt after bolt of cloth, in fact so much that the store refused to sell him more.

Mr. Herman made a special effort to find out the feeling in Germany as to the loss of the kaiser. He found by talking to people in all walks of life only three men who expressed the wish that the kaiser was again in power. These three, he learned afterward were former high army officers.

Mr. Herman says that the people are all glad that the kaiser was dethroned. They felt sorry when they first were informed by the newspapers that the emperor was going to abdicate. Then they learned that he had fled to Holland two weeks before, and taking his fortune with him. When they reflected on the fact that, in order to help "win the war" they had given up all their silver and gold during the war, it did not set well to think that Wilhelm had gone and and taken his gold and silver with him. This caused a revulsion of feeling that is very apparent. Herman says one can call the kaiser anything he cares to and meet with sympathy.

Mr. Herman also says that while the people are not satisfied, apparently with the present government, he thinks it is due mainly to the fact that there are so many political parties. "There are twenty-two parties that I heard of," said Herman. "If a shoemaker gets an idea into his head he goes out and starts a party."

In the cities, especially Berlin, Mr. Herman says that one sees but little signs of hard times unless he gets into the very poor quarters. The night life is as gay as either in New York or Chicago, and there is much display of wealth and finery. The cafes and theatres are filled nightly, there is music everywhere, and it appears as though all the people were rolling in wealth.

Mr. Herman is glad to be home, and glad that he is not to be classed with some of the many Americans who have been in Germany this last summer, and who went there with the expectation of remaining there. He said he saw a few who went back to Germany because they were peeved over the prohibition laws of this country who would give anything now could they get enough money to pay their passage back to the United States.

M. & ST. L. IS DERAILED

The engine, mail and baggage car, chair car and front trucks of the coach ahead of the Pullman sleeper on the northbound M. & St. L. passenger, No. 6, running two hours late, were derailed in the yards here Monday morning at about 6 o'clock when the train struck a defective switch located at the Eighth street crossing.

The engine and coaches kept right side up and were not damaged to any extent, but the track was torn up for more than 100 feet. Passengers were given a good scare but no one was injured.

The wrecking crew from Marshalltown arrived on the scene at 9 o'clock and after ten hours of work succeeded in placing everything in order. The damage is estimated at $1,000. It was what might be termed a "lucky wreck." The cause of the accident is unknown but the supposition is that some red handed individual had tampered with the switch.—Hampton Recorder.

IOWA CORN TO PLANT ARMEMIAN FIELDS

Iowa's champion seed corn is to be used in planting the fields of far-off Armenian and the Bible lands to bring an end to the famine conditions existing in those countries today.

Announcement of plans for shipping a number of carlaods of Iowa seed corn to the Armenian famine zone for spring planting was made here today by Governor N. E. Kendall, state chairman of the Near East Relief movement.

"If we can get our good old Iowa corn planted in the soil of those countries we will have gone a long way toward ending the famine conditions which are claiming thousands of lives every week over there at the present time," Governor Kendall said.

The farmers and farm organizations of every county in the state are to be asked immediately to cooperate in preparations for a seed corn campaign, to be inaugurated the first of the year by the Near East Relief Workers. Gifts of seed corn, large or small, are to be sought from all farmers in the state. The corn is to be delivered to the nearest elevator, marked as seed corn, and it will be hauled from there to the seaboard for shipment, free of charge, through a special arrangement made with the railroads.

Workers are to continue their gift corn campaign through the state, for donations of corn which will be used for food in the famine zones. More than half of the counties of Iowa have now raised their quotas, state director C. A. Montanus said today.

The free annual dinner and election of officers took place at the Rowan Congregational church last Friday afternoon with a large attendance. The dinner was one of the best that the ladies have given, and the reports of all the departments of the church showed a marked gain for the year of 1921. We are looking forward and working for a better showing for the year of 1922. This means that we will boost and work.

Our Sunday School is a growing institution, and we need more children and workers. Parents, we invite you to send your children to our Sunday School, and if possible for you, we would like you to come with them. HUMBOLDT FIRMS ARE ALL GOOD ADVERTISERS

The LuVerne News comments on the fact that the Humboldt papers are full of advertising, and that they carry no Fort Dodge or other out-of-town advertising because they are patronized at home. The news feels that if the LuVerne merchants would advertise liberally it could also refuse the out-of-town advertising.

Every newspaper man hates to admit that he can't get enough business at home, but has to carry out-of-town advertising to make his paper pay. And still, he has to do it.

It is a side of newspapering that few merchants consider. They do not realize that there is always someone anxious to buy newspaper space, and what they refuse to buy someone else is anxious to buy.

The Republican turns down many advertisements every year. One Fort Dodge business house has several times offered this paper an order for 1,000 inches at thirty cents an inch—$300. At one time we turned down an order guaranteeing never less than a half page, and from that up to two pages weekly, at twenty-five cents an inch. In fact, the copy for the two pages was forwarded this office, but was not inserted, though nearly every paper in the county published outside of Humboldt gave it admission to the papers.

There are several towns in this vicinity that are worrying about their home paper taking out-of-town advertising, when the fact is that the editor has to take this outside advertising or quit his business.

Why not give the local paper sufficient business to warrant its refusing the out-of-town business?—Humboldt Republican.

A Letter of Interest to Our School Patrons

Meservey Cannot Collect Tuition Unless New Building Is Guaranteed

VOTERS READ CAREFULLY

There seems to be some difference of opinion in regard to matters concerning the status of our school. The last legislature passed a law raising the amount of tuition that school districts who do not maintain an approved high school are required to pay for pupils who attend schools that are approved from eight dollars per month per pupil to twelve dollars per pupil. This bill is known as Senate File 293 and was passed by a vote of 36 to 2 in the state senate. Below we give an extract from a letter written to the secretary of the School Board under the date of Sept. 20, 1921, which is on file at his office.

"The State Department cannot continue the school at Meservey on the four year approved list for tuition purposes after January 1, 1922 unless bonds have been voted for the erection of a new building.

I am sure that your community will come to a realization of the need of a new building when it realizes that under the law the school can no longer collect tuition and that any child living in the Meservey district can attend any approved school in the state of Iowa at the expense of the Meservey district. At the present time I understand that the tuition will amount to more than $100 per month, consequently your community ought to be able to see the need for voting for this new building in the immediate future.

The State Department stands ready to give whatever assistance it can in providing for the right kind of housing facilities for the school children of the Meservey district. Will the Secretary please notify the Department whenever bonds have been voted so that the school may be reinstated.

Most cordially yours,
P. E. McClenahan,
Superintendent of Public Instruction
(Signed) Geo. A. Brown,
Inspector of Consolidated Schools

This letter is published at the request of a farmer patron of the school and the original may be read by anyone who cares to do so.

In addition for the information of the patrons we may state here that the Meservey school did not receive state aid this year. This had been received for a number of years previous.

MUST HAVE BEEN M. & ST. L.

Fred Menzel returned from his visit at Auburn last Thursday. He reports that he was delayed in returning on account of a railroad wreck somewhere down the line, and we have never known him to tell anythig but the truth so that goes, altho the newspapers appear to have overlooked mentioning the fact.

Miss Sylvia Bloom is visiting her friends here for a few days before she returns to her school duties at Northwestern College.

MESERVEY SCHOOL NOTES

Prof. Swain, of Cedar Falls, will give an address, accompanied with stereoptican slides, Tuesday evening, the tenth of January. This entertainment will be free.

The semester examinations will be given in two weeks. All classes are reviewing for finals in this semester.

Some new classes will be formed at the beginning of next semester. New classes will be formed in bookkeeping, Business, English, Business Arithmetic and Community Civics and Patriotism.

Everyone is invited to come out to hear Prof. Swain. He is a very interesting speaker.

He brings a lantern and no admittance.

A test was made in the high school last Tuesday. A statement had been made that only a small per cent of school children could repeat the Lord's Prayer. Thirty-three out of thirty-nine of the Meservey school can repeat it and only four in the grammar room that could not, giving a very large percentage in favor of those who know the prayer. A large percentage knew in substance the Ten Commandments. I am not so sure that eighty--seven per cent of those making this criticism can do as well.

A kindly word should be said for the teachers for the endeavor and purpose and well prepared Christmas programs.

The High School gave their programs in the morning in the manner of Christmas stories and talks. The grammar room at 10:30 a. m., and the lower grades in the afternoon.

Surely Meservey school should be congratulated upon the high class of work the teachers have done. These programs were pure, full of history, and inspiring.

Secretary, Board of Directors.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E Jones spent Christmas at the Walton home at Thornton.

DO YOU REMEMBER 'WAY BACK WHEN—

Editor Meservey Register:

Dear Sir—I notice by the Mason City Times that there was a fire in Swaledale today; that a grain elevator burned and a whole lot of grain, salt, cement, etc., with it. I also notice by the paper that Swaledale had just bought a new fire apparatus but it was of no avail. It also says that the bucket brigade saved the town.

Now, Mr. Editor, what would become of our town (I mean the buildings) if we should happen to have another accidental fire here?

We all know that the town is bonded for $4,000.00, which is drawing interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum. Now, I do not know how much of that sum has been spent; neither do I know how much more has been spent by a promise to pay; but one thing I do know, and that is, if we should happen to have a fire in town now, that we would have no protection at all.

Now, fellow citizens, do you not think that it is about time to look into this, take the matter in hand and make the engine pump, and the waterworks work. What have we got the two big tanks, the building, the water mains, hydrants, hose, etc. for? Is it to make a show? We all know that a jail in a small town will never pay a dividend, if you could build one for $25. It seems here that all that is to be looked after is a fire-proof jail (which was not mentioned in the proceedings for the bonds for the water works.)

Fellow citizens, which shall we do—lock the door after the colt is stolen, or shall we go to work and make our servants (the Mayor and council) make an accounting, and if they are unable to finish the water works, let us (the people) take it in our own hands and I am confident it will be finis[illegible].

LYCEUM COURSES NOT PAYing

Most towns that have put on a Lyceum course this winter are running behind and the receipts will not pay the bill and as usual those that put up the guarantee will have to foot the bill. We were quite lucky not to have contracted for a course this winter, altho some pretty fine looking feminine advance agents were here and tried to land us on a contract of that kind but failed.

RAILWAY HEADS OPPOSE REDUCTION

Efforts of railway companies to postpone giving effect to the grain and hay rate reductions recently ordered by the interstate commerece commission are declared by Des Moines traffic men to be responsible for a hearing to be held before the commission in Washington, December 14th. This hearing, at which Iowa will be represented by Judge J. H. Henderson, council for the board of railway commissioners, is ostensibly called to consider proposals advanced by the railways for reduction on a wider list of agricultural commodities than that covered in the western grain and hay case. In reality, say traffic men here, the subject to be considered is the desire of the railways to decrease the amount of the reductions already ordered.

In approving the plea of the complainants for reductions in the western hay and grain case, the interstate commerce commission refrained from ordering the railroads to put the reductions in effect on a given date because a definite order would have required thirty days' notice. It was thought that, in view of the urgency of western agricultural needs, the object could be attained more speedily by leaving the matter to the free action of the railroads. They were desired, but not ordered, to publish reductions ranging from twelve per cent upwards not later than November 20. This they failed to do. Finally at the solicitation of the original complaintants, the commission issued a definite order for reductions to be made, but this does not become effective until December 27.

Meantime the railroads had advanced the proposition to the commission that the whole western grain question should be reconsidered. They suggested, says E. G. Wylie, freight commissioner for the interstate commerce commission, that they would do bigger things for the agricultural interest, if premitted a general ten percent reduction on a wide list of commodities in the place of the considerable larger reductions ordered on a restricted list. This exchange, Mr. Wylie asserts, would be a poor one from the standpoint of Iowa, because the additional commodities the railroads would include in their reductions are comparatively unimportant.

"What the western states particularly desired has not as yet been vouchsafed to them," said Mr. Wylie. "They sought reductions which would go in effect with the least possible delay, so that the benefit would be felt on shipments of this crop. When the commission asked the railroads to publish the lower tariffs by November 20, it was thought this object had been achieved. It is true that some of the western states' represenatives suggested a binding order would be preferable. Still, in general, it was believed the railroads would comply with the commission's formal request, and so strong was this belief that the grain markets moved upward in conformity with it.

"In view of this fact, the failure of the railroads to publish the lower tariffs November 20 can only be construed as breach of moral, if not of a legal obligation.

"Nobody desires to deal unjustly with the great transportation lines of the country, but they should be according no special advantage over other actitivies. They are entitled to a fair return upon their captial investment, but that fair return must be measured by the returns accruing to other business in the conditions which at the time prevail. It is preprosterous to insist that the common carriers of the United States shall enjoy an income appoximating six per cent while those who originate the traffic they carry are prosecuting their business at a material loss."

NEW DOG TAX LAW

Any person in the state of Iowa owning or harboring a dog, male or female, must apply to the county auditor of their respective county for a license of ownership for said animal and said application must be made before the 15th day of January next and every year thereafter. A fee of one dollar for each male or spayed female dog, and three dollars for each female dog, must accompany the application.

Blanks for applying for license can be secured at the auditor's office, on which must be stated the breed, sex, age, color and markings of such dog, the name and address of the owner, and the same shall be signed in the presence of some person qualified to administer an oath. The fee of this service is fixed by law at twenty-five cents.

Upon receipt of the application accompanied by the required fee, the auditor will issue a license for the current year together with a metal tag. Such tag must be affixed to a substantial collar and shall at all times be kept on the dog for which license is issued.

All dogs running at large after January 15 not so licensed and without collar and tag are to be deemed "wild" dogs and it will be the duty of any peace officer to kill same wherever found. The law also specifies that any dog, licensed or not found worrying, maiming or killing any domestic animal or fowl, may be killed by any person.

It shall be deemed a misdemeanor for any person other than the owner or authorized agent to remove the tag from any dog and a penalty of not to exceed $40 attaches or a 30 day jail sentence.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS ENTERTAINS

On Tuesday evening, December 27 Mrs. Muller's Sunday School class met at the home of Evelyn and Thelma Thomas for a social evening spent in the nature of a surprise farewell to the members who were to leave the class, being promoted to another. The business of the year was completed, after which a pleasant time was had by all present. Refreshments consisting of sandwiches, salad, coffee, ice cream and cake were furnished by different members of the class, and served in two courses. A feature of the evening's entertainment was the "fond farewell" bestowed by the teacher upon each of the members of the class, per special request. Thus ended a happy evening.

ANTI-SALOON ON JOB IN EVERY COUNTY

Ninety-nine county committees of the Anti-Saloon League, one for each county in Iowa, are to be named shortly after the first of January under the new state-wide prohibition enforcement program announced here this morning by league officials.

The organization which will be formed in each county by state headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League will include some of the best citizens of each community, State Superintendent R. N. Holsaple said today. When completed it will provide the the most thorough dry network ever planed since the great fight was made in this state against the saloons some years ago. The first county committees will be named by the state headquarters within the coming week, Holsaple stated.

The county committees will have the following functions:

1. Report all violations of liquor lows in their communities.
2. Check up to see that cases are prosecuted after reports have been made.
3. Institute cases in court in the name of the Anti-Saloon League when local athorities fail to prosecute.
4. Furnish added legal help in prosecutions where county attorneys or other authorities desire it.
5. Where courts assess ridiculously low fines in liquor violation cases, the local committees, thought the state headquarters, will carry the cases before the higher courts to see that proper penalties are imposed.

Special investigators will probably be used by some of the county committees in cases where conditions are especially bad, the state league headquarters announced.

FARM BUREAU NEWS ITEMS

By the new revenue bill which President Harding signed on Nov. 23, the transportation tax is repealed. Section 500 specifically repeals the 3 per cent on freight charges, the 1 per cent tax on express shipments, the 8 per cent tax on pipe line transportation, the 8 per cent tax on passenger fares, the 8 per cent tax on Pullman tickets, and also the special stamp tax on parcel post shipments. No change has been made in the tax on telegraph and telephone messages.

The transportation taxes have been paying into Uncle Sam's pocket about $300,000,000 annually. The portion of this charge which the farmer had to bear was not less than $105,000,000. Lightening this tax burden makes it just that much easier for the farmer to climb back to prosperity.

The treasury department, in its decision No. 3255, holds that the tax on freight will apply if a freight bill is prepaid before January 1st regardless of when the shipment reaches destination, but that in case of shipments moving "collect" no tax will be assessed if the shipment arrives on or after January 1st. The transportation department of the American Farm Bureau Federation advised shipping associations not to prepay freight on shipments moving just prior to January 1st. If the terms of sale are f. o. b. point of origin, the shipper instructed the consignee to pay the freight and deduct freight charges from the invoice.

The tax on transporation should not be confused with the surcharge of 50 per cent on pullman tickets, sometimes called a 50 per cent surtax. This surcharge accrues to the railroads, not to the United States Government, and is continued in force.

Help Grain Growers

The American Farm Bureau Federation's committee on relationship with the U. S. Grain Growers, Inc., appointment of which was authorized by the executive committee at the annual meeting, conferred last week with the officials of the farmers grain marketing company. The farm Bureau committee offered to render every assistance possible, financial and otherwise to promote the managerial welfare and successful organization of the U. S. Grain Growers in all sections of the country. The Grain Grower's officials accepted the proffer of assistance. This means that several of the state farm bureau federations will probably lend their funds to promote organization work, upon the assurance that the plans and expenditures have the approval of the American Farm Bureau Fereration.

Returning from Clarion last Thursday evening, the Dr. Christensen and Dr. Sams cars collided with somewhat interesting results. Dr. Christensen was driving north and met the Sams car coming east. Apparently Mr. Jacobs, driver of the Sams car did not see the Christensen car until they were almost together. He then pulled his car suddenly to one side and the rear end swung across the path of the Christensen car. Without the use of instruments, drugs or anesthetics, the rear end of the Sams car was nearly amputated. No bill for professional services will be presented.—Eagle Grove Eagle.

GETS BID OF $2.60 FOR ROAD PAVING

Garner Signal: The paving letting at Algona yesterday brought the best bids on country road work that have been made in this section of the country in a long time. There were many bidders present and the bids show that they are anxious to secure contracts. Three bids were under the mark of $2.60, and these bidders were the Empire Construction Co., who did the city work in Garner and who now have the big grading contract in Kossuth the Pickus Company of Sioux City who did the work between Britt and Hutchins last summer, and the Bryant Asphalt Co. These three bids were taken under consideration by the board of supervisors last evening and all other bids were rejected. The bid of the Henkel Construction Co., who did the work between Garner and the County line this past season was but a fraction of a cent above $2.60.

Whether the board would let the contract under any of the bids submitted was not decided last evening when they adjourned. The three bids retained were to be considered. A petition had been filed with the board asking for the paving, and yesterday a remonstrance was filed. County Auditor Jacobs and Supervissor Meyer of Britt attended the letting. The outcome of this letting undoubtedly will have some effect on the decision of the board in Hancock County as to whether they call for bids on the paving of the road from Garner to the Kossuth County line to connect with the proposed Kossuth County paving.

TAX LAWS FOR THE NEW YEAR

Collector of Internal Revenue, Lars Blandine, has issued the following statement from his office in Dubuque:

Enactment of new revenue legislation has brought to the offices of collector of internal revenue a flood of inquiries regarding various provisions. The Revenue Act of 1921 became effective November 23, 1921, unless otherwise provided for.

To advoid error in the peparation of their returns and late difficulties with the Bureau of Internal Revenue; tax payers are advised to carefully note the changes and when they become effective.

The excess profits tax is repealed as of January 1, 1921. The rates for 1921 are unchanged.

The surtax for the calendar year 1921 are unchanged, and range from 1 per cent on the amount of net income between $5,000 and $6,000 to 65 per cent the amount of the net incomes in excess of $1,000,000. For the calendar year 1922 the surtax rates range fom 1 per cent on the amount of net income between $6,000 and $10,000 to 50 per cent on the amount by which the net income exceeds $200,000.

The exemption allowed for a dependent is increased from $200 to $400. Married persons living with husband or wife and heads of families are allowed a personal exemption of $2,500 (instead of $2,000) unless the net income is in excess of $5,000, in which case the personal exemption is only $2,000. The act provides that in no case shall the reduction of the personal exemption from $2,500 to $2,000 operate to increase the tax which would be payable if the exemption were $2,500 by more than the amount of net income in excess of $5 000. This is to overcome the disparity in the case of two tax payers, one of whom is just within the lower $2,000 exemption and the other just within the higher $2,500 exemption.

Single persons and married persons not living with husband or wife, are allowed an exemption of $1,000. Nonresident aliens are allowed a single exemption of $1,000. Persons having gross income for 1921 of $5,000 or over are required to make a return, regardless of the amount of net income.

Provision is made for the repeal as of Jan. 1st, 1922, of the tax on stockholders of a personal service corporation as such. After that date such corporations are to be taxed in the same manner as other corporations.

The income tax on coporations for the calendar year 1922 and thereafter is increased from 10 to 12 1-2 per cent. The $2,000 exemption heretofore allowed corporations is to be granted only on those corporations whose net income is $25,000 or less.

Many persons are under the impression that the taxes on ice cream, soft drinks, etc., monthly returns of which are required, have been repealed with the enactment of the new act. These taxes remain in force until the end of the calendar year 1921.

No change is made in the tax on admissions except that after January 1st, 1922, there will be no tax where admission is 10c or less. Effective Jan. 1st, 1922, the following taxes are also abolished: on musical instruments, sporting goods, chewing gum, portable electric fans, thermos bottles, fur articles, pleasure boats and pleasure canoes, (unless sold for more than $100,) toilet articles, medicines and numerous articles of apparel.

On and after January 1, 1922, the tax on various works of art is reduced from 10 per cent to 5 per cent, the tax on candy from 5 per cent to 3 per cent and the tax on carpets, rugs, trunks, valises, purses, fans, etc., from 10 per cent of sales price in excess of specified amounts to 5 per cent of sales price in excess of specified amounts.

The tax on parcel post packages is elimated, effective Jan.1, 1922.

The new act provides that no taxpayer be subjected to unnecessary examinations or investigations, and only one inspection of his books of account shall be made each taxable year unless the taxpayer requests otherwise, or the commissioner notifies the taxpayer in writing that an additional inspection is necessary.

The period for filing returns on the calendar year basis is from January 1 to March 15, 1922. This year, as last, the tax may be paid in full at the time of filing the return or in four installments, due on or before March 15, June 15, September 15, and December 15.—Recorder

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is the skipper, Neils Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

About ten o'clock next morning the little vessel completed taking on her cargo, the lines were cast off, and the homeward voyage was begun. Messrs. Gibney and McGuffey were seated on the stern bitts as the Maggie came abreast the Point Montara fog signal station, when Mr. Gibney observed a long telescope poking out the side window of the pilot house, and following the direction in which the telescope was pointing he made out a large bark standing in dangerously close to the beach. In fact, the breakers were tumbling in a long white streak over the reefs less than a quarter of a mile from her.

In an instant all was excitement aboard the Maggie. "That looks like an elegant little pick-up. She's plumb deserted," Scraggs shouted to his navigating officer. "I don't see any distress signals flyin' an' yet she's got an anchor out while her canvas is hangin' so-so."

"If she had any hands aboard, you'd think they'd have sense enough to clew up her courses," the mate answered.

At this juncture, Mr. Gibney and McGuffey, unable to restrain their curiosity, and forgetful of the fact that they were pirates with very sore feet, came running over the deckload and invaded the pilot house. "Gimme that glass, you sock-eyed salmon, you," Gibney ordered Scraggs, and tore the telescope from the owner's hands. "Hum—m—m! American bark Chesapeake. Starboard anchor out; yards braced a-box; royal an' to'-gallan'-s'ls clewed up; courses hangin' in the buntlines an' clew garnets, Stars-an'-Stripes upside down."

He lowered the glass and roared at Neils Halvorsen, who was at the wheel, "Starboard your helm, Squarehead. Don't be afraid of her. We're goin' over there an' hook on to her. I should say she is a pick-up!"

Mr. Gibney had abdicated as a pirate and assumed command of the S. S. Maggie. With the memory of a scant breakfast upon him, however, Captain Scraggs was still harsh and bitter.

"Git out o' my pilot house an' aft where the police can find you when they come lookin' for you," he screeched. "Don't you give no orders to my deckhand."

"Stow it, you ass. Yonder's a prize, but it'll require imagination to win it; consequently you need Adelbert P. Gibney in your business, if you're contemplatin' hookin' on to that bark, snakin' her into San Francisco bay, an' libelin' her for ten thousand dollars' salvage. You an' Mac an' The Squarehead here have sailed this strip o' coast too long together to quarrel over the first good piece o' salvage we ever run into. Come, Scraggsy. Be decent, forget the past, an' let's dig in together."

The new navigating officer drew Captain Scraggs aside and whispered ... can't make it up with these Smart Alecks, Scraggs. They got it on us, but if we can send you an' Halvorsen, McGuffey and Gibney over to the bark, you can get some sail on her an' what with the wind helpin' us along, the Maggie can tow her all right."

Mr. Gibney saw by the hopeful, even cunning, look that leaped to Scraggs' eyes that the problem was about to be solved without recourse to the Gibney imagination, so he resolved to be alert and not permit himself to be caught out on the end of a limb. "Well, Scraggsy?" he demanded.

"I guess I need you in my business, Gib. You're right an' I'm always wrong. It's a fact. I ain't got no more imagination than a chicken."

"Spoken like a man—I do not think. Scraggs, for once in my life I have you where the hair is short. I'm willin' to dig in an' help out in a pinch, but it's gettin' so me an' Mac can't trust you no more. We're that leery of you we won't take your word for nothin', since you fooled him on the new boiler an' me on the paint; consequently, we're off you an' this salvage job unless you give us a clearance, in writin', statin' that we are not an' never was pirates, that we're good, law-abidin' citizens an' aboard the Maggie as your guests, takin' the trip at our own risk. When you sign such a paper, with your crew for witnesses, I'll demonstrate how that bark can be salvaged. My imagination's better'n my reputation, Scraggsy, an' I ain't workin' it for nothin'!"

"Gib, my dear boy. You're the most sensitive man I ever sailed with. Can't you take a little joke?"

"Sure, I can take a little joke. It's the big ones that stick in my craw an' stifle my friendship. Gimme a fountain pen an' a leaf out o' the log book an' I'll draw up the affydavit for your signature."

Scraggs complied precipitately with this request, whereupon Mr. Gibney spread his great bulk over the chart case and with many a twist and flip of his tongue on the up and down strokes, produced this remarkable document:

"At Sea, Off Point Montara,
"aboard S. S. Maggie,
"of San Francisco.
"June 4, 19—.

"This is to certify that A. P. Gibney, Esq., and Bart McGuffey, Esq., is law-abidin' sitisens of the U. S. A. and the constitootion thereof, and in no way pirates or such; and be it further resolved that the said parties hereto are aboard said American steamer Maggie this date on the special invite of Phineas P. Scraggs, owner, as his guests and at their own risk.

"Witness my hand and seal:"

Captain Scraggs signed without reading and the new mate and Neils Halvorsen appended their signatures as witnesses. Mr. Gibney thereupon folded this clearance paper into the tiniest possible compact ball, wrapped it in a piece of tinfoil torn from a package of tobacco, to protect it from his saliva, tucked it in his cheek and with a sign for McGuffey to follow him, started crawling over the cargo aft. By this time the Maggie was within a hundred yards of the distressed bark and was ratching slowly backward and forward before her.

"In all my born days," quoth Mr. Gibney, speaking a trifle thickly because of the document in his mouth, "I never got such a wallop as Scraggs handed me an' you last night. I don't forget things like that in a hurry. Now that we got a vindication o' the charge o' piracy again us, I'm achin' to get shet of the Maggie an' her crew; so if you'll kindly peel off all of your clothes with the exception, say, of your underdrawers, we'll swim off to that bark an' give Phineas P. Scraggs an exhibition of real sailorizin' an' seamanship."

"What's the big idee?" McGuffey demanded cautiously.

"Why, we sail her in ourselves—me an' you an' glom all the salvage for ourselves. T'ell with Scraggs an' the Maggie an' that new mate an' engineer. I'm off'n 'em for life."

Pop-eyed with excitement and interest, B. McGuffey, Esquire, stood up, and with a single twist shed his cap and coat. His shirts followed. Both he and Gibney were already minus their shoes and socks. To slip out of their faded dungarees was the work of an instant. Strapping their belts around their waists to hold up their drawers, the worthy pair stepped to the rail of the Maggie.

"Hey, there? Where you goin', Gib? I give you that clearance paper on condition that you was to tell me how to salvage that there bark."

"I'm just about to tell you, Scraggs. You don't touch a thing aboard the Maggie. You leave her out of it entirely. You just jump overboard, like me an' Mac will in a jiffy, swim over to the bark, climb aboard, and sail her in to San Francisco bay. When you get there you drop anchor an' call it a day's work." He grinned broadly. "One o' these bright days, Scraggs, when me an' Mac is just wallerin' in salvage money, drop around to see us an' we'll give you a kick in the face. Farewell, you boobs," and he dove overboard.

"Ta-ta," McGuffey cried in his tantalizing falsetto voice; and followed his leader into the briny deep.

CHAPTER VI.

The tide was still at the flood and the two adventurers made fast progress toward the Chesapeake. Choosing a favorable opportunity as the vessel dipped, they grasped her martingale, climbed up on the bowsprit, and ran along the bowsprit to the to-gallan'-fo'castle. On the deck below a dead man lay in the scuppers, and such a horrible stench pervaded the vessel that McGuffey was taken very ill and was forced to seek the rail.

"Scurvy or somethin'," Mr. Gibney announced, quite calmly. "There should be chloride of lime in the mate's storeroom—I'll scatter some on these poor devils. Too close to port now to chuck 'em overboard. Anyhow, Bart, me an' you ain't doctors, nor yet coroners or undertakers, so you'd better skip along an' build a fire under the donkey aft. Matches in the galley, of course."

He trotted down to the main deck and prowled aft. On the port side of her house he found two more dead men, and a cursory inspection of the bodies told him they had died of scurvy. He circled the ship, came back to the fo'castle, entered, and found four men alive in their berths, but too far gone to leave them. "I'll have you boys in the Marine hospital tonight," he informed the poor creatures, and sought the master's cabin. Lying on his bed, fully dressed, he found the skipper of the Chesapeake. The man was gaunt and emaciated.

The freebooter of the green-pea trade touched his wet forelock respectfully. "My name is Gibney, sir, an' I hold an unlimited license as first mate of sail or steam. I was passin' up the coast on a good-for-nothin' little bumboat, an' seen you in distress, so me an' a friend swum over to give you the double O. You're in a bad way, sir."

"Two hundred and eighty-seven days from Hamburg, Mr. Gibney. Our vegetables gave out and we drank too much rain water and ate too much fresh fish down in the Doldrums. Our potatoes all went rotten before we were out two months. Naturally, the ship's officers stuck it out longest, but when we drifted in here this morning, I was the only man aboard able to stand up. I crawled up on the to'-gallan' fo'castle and let go the starboard anchor. I'd had it cock-billed for three weeks. All I had to do was knock out the stopper."

While Mr. Gibney questioned him and listened avidly to the horrible tale of privation and despair, McGuffey appeared to report a brisk fire under the donkey and to promise steam in forty minutes; also that the Maggie was hove to a cable length distant, with her crew digging under the deckload of vegetables for the small boat. "Help yourself to a belayin' pin, Bart, an' knock 'em on the heads if they try to come aboard," Mr. Gibney ordered nonchalantly.

"Do I understand there is a steamer at hand, Mr. Gibney?" the master of the Chesapeake queried.

"There's an excuse for one, sir. The little vegetable freighter Maggie. She'll never be able to tow you in, because she ain't got power enough, an' if she had power enough she ain't got coal enough. Besides, Scraggs, her owner, is a rotten bad article an' before he'll put a rope aboard you he'll tie you up on a contract for a figger that'd make an angel weep. The way your ship lies an' everything, me an' McGuffey can sail her in for you at half the price."

"I can't risk my ship in the hands of two men," the sick captain answered. "She's too valuable and so is her cargo. If this little steamer will tow me in I'll gladly give her my towline and let the court settle the bill."

"Not by a million," Mr. Gibney protested. "Beg pardon, sir, but you don't know this here Scraggs like I do. I couldn't think of lettin' him set foot on this deck."

"You couldn't think of it? Well, when did you take command of my ship?"

"You're flotsam an' jetsam, sir, an' practically in the breakers. You're sick, an', for all I know, delirious, so for the sake o' protectin' you, the sick seaman in the fo'castle an' the owners, I'm takin' command."

The master of the Chesapeake reached under his pillow and produced a pistol. "Out of my cabin or I'll riddle you," he barked feebly.

Mr. Gibney departed without a word of protest and proceeded to make his arrangements, regardless of the master's consent. As he and McGuffey busied themselves, laying the leading blocks along the deck, they glanced toward the Maggie and observed Captain Scraggs hurling crates of vegetables overboard in an effort to get at the small boat quickly. "He'll die when the freight claims come in," Mr. McGuffey chortled. "Poor ol' Scraggsy!"

When Captain Scraggs came aboard, Mr. Gibney escorted him around to the master's cabin, introduced him, and stood by while they bargained. "The tow will cost you five thousand, Captain," Scraggs began pompously.

"Me an' McGuffey'll sail you in for four," Gibney declared.

"Three thousand," snarled Scraggs.

"Sailin's cheap as dirt at two thousand. As a matter of fact, Scraggsy, me an' Mac'll sail her in for nothin' just to skin you out o' the salvage."

"Two thousand dollars is my lowest figure," Scraggs declared. "Take it or leave it, Captain. Under the circumstances, bargaining is useless. Two thousand is my last bid."

The figure Scraggs named was probably one fifth of what the master of the Chesapeake knew a court would award; nevertheless he shook his head.

"It's a straight towing job, Captain, and not a salvage proposition at all. A tug would tow me in for two hundred and fifty, but I'll give you five hundred."

Remembering the vegetables he had jettisoned, Scraggs knew he could not afford to accept that price. "I'm through," he bluffed—and his bluff worked.

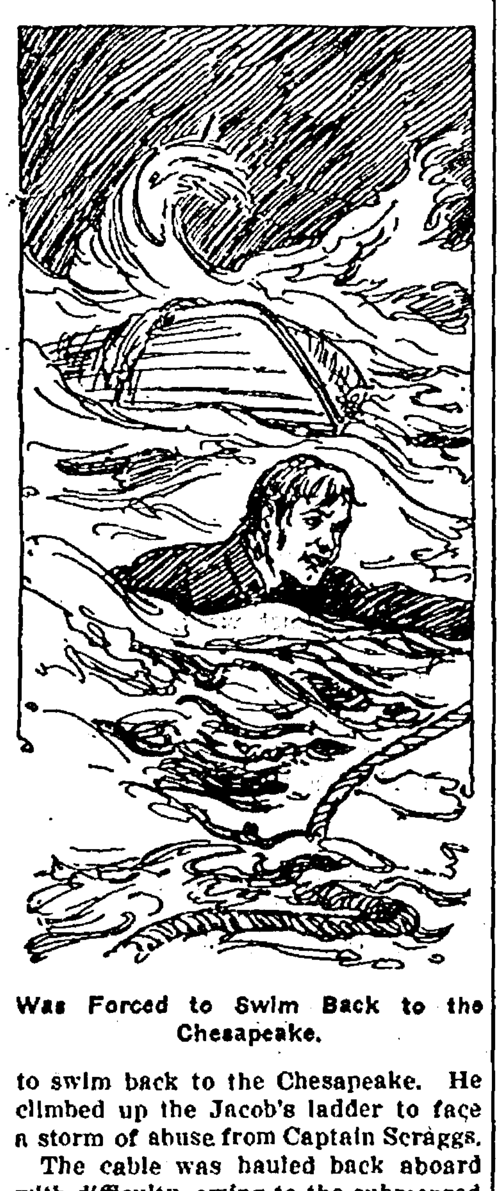
"Taken, Captain Scraggs. Write out an agreement and I'll sign it."

With the agreement in his pocket, Scraggs, followed by Gibney, left the cabin. "One hundred each to you an' Mac if you'll stay aboard the Chesapeake, steer her, an' help the Maggie out with what sail you can get on her," Scraggs promised.

"Take a long, runnin' jump at yourself, Scraggsy, old sorrowful. The best me an' Mac'll do is to help you cock-bill the anchor, an' that'll cost you ten bucks for each of us—in advance." The artful fellow realized that Scraggs knew nothing whatever about a sailing ship and would have to depend upon The Squarehead for the information he required.

"All right. Here's your money," Scraggs replied and handed Mr. Gibney twenty dollars. He and Neils Halvorsen then went forward, got out the steel towing cable, and fastened a light rope to the end of it. The skiff floated off the ship at the end of the painter, so The Squarehead hauled it in, climbed down into the skiff, and made the light rope fast to a thwart; then, with Captain Scraggs paying out the hawser, Neils bent manfully to the oars and started to tow the steel cable back to the Maggie. Half way there, the weight of the cable dragging behind slowed The Squarehead up and eventually stopped him. Exerting all his strength he pulled and pulled, but the sole result of his efforts was to wear himself out, seeing which the Maggie's navigating officer set the little steamer in toward the perspiring Neils, while Captain Scraggs, Gibney, and McGuffey cheered lustily.

Suddenly an oar snapped. Instantly Neils unshipped the remaining oar, sprang to the stern, and attempted, by sculling, to keep the skiff's head up to the waves. But the weight of the cable whirled the little craft around, a wave rolled in over her counter, and half-filled her; the succeeding wave completed the job and rolled the skiff over and The Squarehead was forced to swim back to the Chesapeake. He climbed up the Jacob's ladder to face a storm of abuse from Captain Scraggs.



Was Forced to Swim Back to the Chesapeake.

The cable was hauled back aboard with difficulty, owing to the submerged skiff at the end of it. Captain Scraggs and The Squarehead leaned over the Chesapeake's rail and tugged furiously, when the wreck came alongside, but all of their strength was unequal to the task of righting the little craft by hauling up on the light rope attached to her thwart.

"For ten dollars more each me an' Mac'll tail on to that rope an' do our best to right the skiff. After she's righted, I'll bail her out, borrow new oars from this here bark, an' help Neils row back to the Maggie with the cable," Mr. Gibney volunteered. "Cash in advance, as per usual."

"You're a pair of highway robbers, but I'll take you," Scraggs almost wailed, and paid out the money; whereupon Gibney and McGuffey "tailed" on to the rope and with raucous cries hauled away. As a result of their efforts the thwart came away with the rope and the quartet sat down with exceeding abruptness on the hard pine deck of the Chesapeake.

"I had an idee that thwart would pull loose," Mr. Gibney remarked. "Well, what're you goin' to do now?"

"I ain't licked yet—not by a jugful," Scraggs snapped. "Halvorsen, haul down that signal halyard from the mizzenmast, take one end of it in your teeth, an' swim back to the Maggie with it. We'll fasten a heavier line to the cable, an' haul the cable aboard with the Maggie's winch."

"You say that so nice, Scraggsy, old hopeful, I'm tempted to think you can whistle it. Neils, he's only askin' you to risk your life overboard for nothing. 'Tain't in the shippin' articles that a seamen's got to do that. If he wants a swimmin' exhibition make him pay for it—through the nose. An' if I was you, I'd find out how much o' this two thousand dollars towage he's goin' to distribute to his crew. Pers'nlly I'd get mine in advance."

"Adelbert P. Gibney," Captain Scraggs hissed. "There's such a thing as drivin' a man to distraction. Halvorsen, are you with me?"

"Aye bane—for saxty dollars. Hay bane worth a month's pay for take dat swim."

"You dirty Scowegian ingrate. Well, you don't get no sixty dollars from me. Bear a hand and we'll drop the ship's work boat overboard. I guess you can tow a signal halyard to the Maggie, can't you, Neils?"

Neils could—and did. Within fifteen minutes the Maggie was fast to her prize. "Now we'll cockbill the anchor," quoth Captain Scraggs, so McGuffey reporting sufficient steam in the donkey to turn over the windlass, the anchor was raised and cockbilled, and the Maggie hauled away on the hawser the instant Captain Scraggs signaled his new navigating officer that the hook was free of the bottom.

"The old girl don't seem to be makin' headway in the right direction," McGuffey remarked plaintively, after the Maggie had strained at the hawser for five minutes. Mr. Gibney, standing by with a hammer in his hand, nodded affirmatively, while the skipper of the Chesapeake, whom Mr. Gibney had had the forethought to carry out on deck to watch the operation, glanced apprehensively ashore. Scraggs measured the distance with his eye to the nearest fringe of surf and it was plain that he was worried.

"Captain Scraggs," the skipper of the Chesapeake called feebly, "Mr. Gibney is right. That craft of yours is unable to tow my ship against this wind. You're losing ground, inch by inch, and it will be only a matter of an hour or two, if you hang on to me, before I'll be in the breakers and a total loss. You'll have to get sail on her or let go the anchor until a tug arrives."

"I don't know a thing about a sailin' ship," Scraggs quavered.

"I know it all," Mr. Gibney cut in, "but there ain't money enough in the world to induce me to exercise that knowledge to your profit." He turned to the master of the Chesapeake. "For one hundred dollars each, McGuffey an' I will sail her in for you, sir."

"I'll not take the risk, Mr. Gibney. Captain Scraggs, if you will follow my instructions we'll get some sail on the Chesapeake. Take those lines through the leading blocks to the winch——"

The engineer of the Maggie came up on deck and waved his arms wildly. "Leggo," he bawled. "I've blown out two tubes. It'll be all I can do to get home without that tow."

"Jump on that, Scraggsy," quoth McGuffey softly and cast his silken engineer's cap on the deck at Scraggs' feet. The latter's face was ashen as he turned to the skipper of the Chesapeake. "I'm through," he gulped. "I'll have to cast off. Your ship's drivin' on the beach now."

"Oh, say not so, Scraggsy," said Mr. Gibney softly, and with a blow of the hammer knocked out the stopper on the windlass and let the anchor go down by the run. "Not this voyage, at least." The Chesapeake rounded with a jerk and Mr. Gibney took Captain Scraggs gently by the arm. "Into the small boat, old ruin," he whispered, "and I'll row you an' The Squarehead back to the Maggie. If she drifts ashore with that load o' garden truck, you might as well drown yourself."

Captain Scraggs was beyond words. He suffered himself to be taken back to the Maggie, after which kindly action Mr. Gibney returned to the Chesapeake, climbed aboard, and with the assistance of McGuffey, hauled the work boat up on the deck.

"Now," Mr. Gibney inquired, approaching the skipper of the Chesapeake, "what'll you give me an' Mac, sir, to sail you in?"

"One thousand dollars," the skipper answered weakly.

"You refused to let us do it for a hundred. Now it'll cost you two thousand, an' I'm lettin' you off cheap at that. Of course, you can take a chance an' wait until word o' your predicament sifts into San Francisco an' a tug comes out for you, but in the meantime the wind may increase an' with the tide at the flood how do you know your anchor won't drag an' pile you up on them rocks to leeward?"

"I'll pay two thousand, Mr. Gibney."

Without further ado, Mr. Gibney went to the master's cabin, wrote out an agreement, carried the skipper aft and got his signature to the contract. Then he tucked the skipper into bed and came dashing out on deck.

"Come here till I introduce you to the jib halyards," he bawled to McGuffey, and they went forward.

With the aid of the winch, they braced the foreyard; then McGuffey ran aft and took the wheel while Mr. Gibney scuttled forward, eased up the compressor on the windlass, and permitted the anchor chain to pay out rapidly. With the hammer, he knocked out the pin at the forty-five fathom shackle and leaving the anchor to go by the board, for it worried him no longer, the bark Chesapeake moved gently off on a west-sou'west course that would keep her three points off the land. She had sufficient headway on now to hold her up.

Mr. Gibney fell upon the main to'-gallan'-s'l leads like a demon, carried them through the leading block to the winch head, turned over the winch and sheeted home the main-to'-gallan'-s'l. The Chesapeake gathered speed and Mr. Gibney went aft and stood beside Mr. McGuffey, the while he looked aloft and thrilled to the whine of the breeze through the rigging. "This is sailorizin'," he declared. "It sure beats bumboatin'. Here, blast you, Bart. You're spillin' the wind out o' that jib. First thing you know we'll have her in irons an' then the fat will be in the fire."

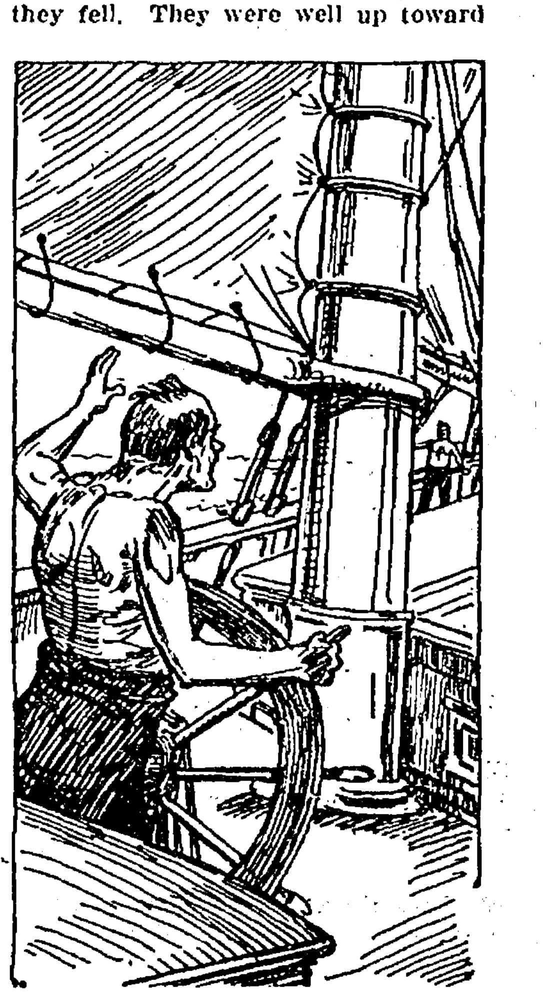
He took the wheel from McGuffey. When he was two miles off the beach he brought her up into the wind and made the wheel fast, a spoke to leeward. "Sheet home the fore-to'gallan'-s'l," he howled and dashed forward. "Leggo them buntlines an' clewlines, my hearties, an' haul home that sheet."

The ship lay in the wind, shivering. Mr. Gibney was here, there, everywhere. One minute he was dashing along the deck with a leading line, the next he was laying out aloft. He ordered himself to do a thing and then, with the pent-up energy of a thousand devils, he did it. The years of degradation as navigating officer of the Maggie fell away from him, as he sprang, agile and half-naked, into the shrouds; a great, hairy demigod or sea-goblin he lay out along the yards and sprang from place to place with the old exultant thrill of youth and joy in his work. A word, a gesture, from Mr. Gibney, and McGuffey would pounce on a rope like a bull-dog. With the fore-royal set, Mr. Gibney ran back to the wheel and put it hard over. There being no after sail set the bark swung off readily on to her course, slipping through the water at a nice eight-knot speed. Ten miles off the coast, Mr. Gibney hung her up in the wind again, braced his yards with the aid of the winch and McGuffey, came about and headed north. At three o'clock she cleared the lightship and wore around to come in over the bar, steering east by south, half-south, for Point Bonita. She drew the full advantage of the wind now and over the bar she came, ramping full through the Gate with her yards squared, on the last of the flood tide.

As they passed Lime point, Mr. Gibney prepared to shorten sail and like a clarion blast his voice rang through the ship.

"Clew up them royals." He lashed the wheel and they brought the clewlines again to the winch head. The ship was falling off a little before the fore-royal was clewed up, so Mr. Gibney ran back to the wheel and put her on her course again while McGuffey brought the main-royal clewlines to the winch. Again Gibney made the wheel fast and helped McGuffey clew up the main-royal; again he set her on her course while McGuffey, following instructions, made ready to clew up the fore-to'gallan'-s'l. They were abreast Black Point before this latter sail was clewed up, and then they smothered the lower top-s'ls; the bark was slipping lazily through the water and McGuffey took the wheel.

"Starboard a little! Steady-y-y! Keep her as she heads," Gibney warned and cast off the jib halyards. The jibs slid down the stays, hanging as they fell. They were well up toward Meiggs wharf now and it devolved upon Mr. Gibney to bring his prize in on the quarantine ground and let go his port anchor. Fortunately, the anchor was already cock-billed. Mr. Gibney sprang to the fore-top-sail halyards and let them go and the fore-top-sail came down by the run.



"Hard-a-Starboard! Make Her Fast, Bart."

"Hard-a-starboard! Make her fast, Bart, an' come up here an' help me with the anchor. Let go the main-top-sail halyards as you come by an' stand by the compressor on the windlass."

The Chesapeake swung slowly, broadside to the first of the ebb and with the wind on her port beam, Mr. Gibney knocked out the stopper with his trusty hammer and away went the rusty chain, singing through the hawsepipe. "Snub her gently, Mac, snub her gently, an' give her the thirty-fathom shackle to the water's edge," he warned McGuffey.

The bark swung until her bows were straightened to the ebb tide and with a wild, triumphant yell Mr. Gibney clasped the honest McGuffey to his perspiring bosom. The deed was done!

State's office at the time Mr. Pierce made his investigation that only $142,600.00 of stock had been paid up and stock issued for the same.

Allow me to say that the marketing plans now contemplated by the Farm Bureau Federation cannot go without a finance corporation behind them. It is only because of this need that Mr. Cunningham and myself are interested in the Iowa Finance Corporation. The farmers of Iowa must have a finance peculiar to their needs and under their control if they are to be successful in marketing their products. Without it the proposed marketing of grain, livestock and dairy products by the farmers of Iowa will fail. We feel very certain that the Iowa Credit Corporation is going to be a start in assisting the Iowa farmers in financing themselves. With the aid of the local banks and the issuing of warehouse receipts, and in turn selling debentures against these warehouse receipts secured by grain, livestock or other farm products, the Iowa Finance Corporation will be able to carry on a business many times its capital stock in taking care of the agricultural business of the state. The officers of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation have no other thot in mind in connection with this Credit Corporation than the thought of bettering the financial condition of the farmers.

The Iowa Farm Credit Corporation was not designed to function as a temporary emergency factor, but as a permanent concern to go on year in and year out, taking care of agricultural credits and the marketing of farm crops, as provided by statute.

Very truly yours,
Iowa Farm Bureau Federation
By C. W. Hunt, President.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP MEETING FRIDAY NIGHT

Annual Meeting Of Farm Bureau Held

Fine Session Of Organization Is Held, At Which Officers Are Elected

SUMNERS GIVES ADDRESS

The annual meeting of the Wright County Farm Bureau Federation was held at the Court House in Clarion Tuesday afternoon and it was one of the most enthusiastic and largest attended meetings in the history of the organization. The spirit evidenced at this meeting indicates that there is no dispositon to drop the fight which the organization is making for the agricultural and live stock interests. Not less than five hundred farmers and their wives were present.

In the morning President Harry Sumners delivered the welcome address, and the reports of County Agent Edwards, Secretary E. W. Campbell and Treasurer George A. Miller were read in convention.

In the afternoon T. A. Houglas, of Eagle Grove, explained the workings of the Grain Growers incorporation the farmers present giving him the closest attention. Special singing and music was interspersed between the various addresses.

Hon. Peder Pedersen, of Cedar Falls was the speaker of the day and we may add that his address was the hit of the day. For an hour he held the closest attention of the big audience, and he got down to the grass roots in his plea for loyal support of the Farm Bureau.

Mr. Pederson is not an orator, yet he has the rare charm which captivates an audience. We imagine that he could go before an audience of typical city folks and make them a talk they would understand and commend. He has a fund of inimitable stories that get next to the ribs of his hearers and have a telling punch that drive home the truths he sponsors.

Mr. Pederson told the Wright County farmers they should not be discouraged because the Farm Bureau had not accomplished every wonder in the world so early in its organization. He reminded them that it was really little more than two years old, but in that time it had achieved a national organization which was being felt in national affairs.

In speaking of the waste in our marketing system, he told how things were done over in Sweden, where co-operative packing houses had an absolute monopoly on the live stock business. There, the packing houses are centered, say in districts about as large as two or three of our counties. The farmers are bound by contract to sell only to the co-operative packing plant. They must buy the co-operative plant product. No fat stock can be shipped elsewhere than to the district plant for marketing. The surplus is sold as a finished product and exported or sold to districts where the local supply is insufficient. And this system gave the Swedish farmer a spread of $4 to $5 per hundred for his hogs when the American farmer was getting around $8 and $9 per hundred for his hogs, the freight rate from Chicago to Liverpool of $1 a hundred considered.

Mr. Pederson told of how stocker cattle were traced from a Guthrie county farm to Chicago, back to Guthrie county to a farmer who fed them a couple of months, to Chicago, and again back to a Guthrie county farm where they were finished. "The farmer pays for this," he argued.

He said the farmer who held off joining because the organization was not perfect in every way, reminded him of an Irishman named Pat, who preached during his lifetime that at a man's death he was dead, and that was all there was to it. "Well," he said, "Pat died. The funeral day came. The mourners were passing for a last look at Pat.

SCHOOL NOTES

Remember the third number of the Lecture Course will appear Monday, January 16, at 8:00. This number, The Fine Arts Quartette, was recommended to us as the best number of the Course. It is a mixed quartette, and will give both vocal and instrumental selections. It depends upon you what the program will be. If you enjoy it and let the quartette know by your applause, you will get a longer program.

Remember that Lecture Course tickets are transferrable, but only one person can be admitted on each ticket.

Community Night every Thursday night, 7:30 to 9:30, is growing in popularity. More of the business men should avail themselves of this privilege for recreation.

The basket ball game at Swaledale was postponed by Superintendent Thomas, on account of a breakdown in their lighting plant. This game will probably be played some time in February.

Friday night of this week Coaches Christie and Stedman will invade Hampton with their respective teams, and we are sure they will acquit themselves in a creditable manner in every way.

The High School appreciates the Herald Press Basket Ball ad of last week. Every boost puts pep into our teams, which we believe to be winners.

It might be interesting to know that the school enrollment of this year is 36.8 per cent greater than the enrollment of the year 1915-16, six years ago.

Semester examinations will be given in high school Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. Regular classes on Friday.

The Eagle Grove debating team will meet our team here the afternoon of January 20. Plan to hear the debate.

January 27th has been set for the declamatory contest with Hampton and Garner. Hear our speakers in a contest with other towns.

POLITICAL BEES ARE BEGINNING TO BUZZ

Coming events cast their shadows before them, it is said, and the political line-up for the spring battle appears to be getting shaped and sharpened. Nothing definite so far has been announced or reported, but 'tis said that several bees are abuzzin' 'round, here and there, for this and that. Apparently there is to be more or less of a scrap for certain political offices, town and county, and much ammunition is reported as being stored up for the drive, with several citizens being groomed for generals and captains. Party lines are apparently not to cut much figure in the fight, the issue being between brothers of the same family, you might say. Sic 'em! It'll furnish something to enliven the place, anyway.

"CAP." TYRRELL SENDS FRIENDS RICE PRESENT

Following Old Custom, Sends Belmond Friends Nice Present

"Cap." W. C. Tyrrell, of Beaumont, Texas, following his established custom for many years, sent his friends in Belmond a present of a bag of rice, grown on his land in Texas and milled by the Tyrrell Rice Milling Co. The rice was received last week and distributed among the Captain's local friends by one of his grandsons. The writer acknowledges a nice sack of it, and along with the many Belmond friends of Mr. Tyrrell, extends his thanks for the compliment.

Mrs. Thomas, of Lewistown, Montana, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Baldridge, in Belmond. Mrs. Thomas is head of the Farm Bureau Work in Fergus Falls County and as this county is almost as large as the state of Iowa one may have an idea as to the scope of her work. From here Mrs. Thomas intends to visit for a few days with relatives in Cedar Rapids, before returning to her western home. This is the first time Mrs. Thomas has been home for ten years.

Every night you can hear the roar of the shotgun as some unlucky rabbit starts on the journey of the stew pan. Rabbits are reported plentiful [illegible] winter, and judging from the number being shot they must be; one young fellow in town got fourteen in one evening, which is fair, considering. And when they are cooked right, boy, there's somthing to it.

Fire Sunday Destroys Fine Country Home

John Campbell Residence South Of Town, Complete Loss By Fire Last Sunday

DAMAGE IS ABOUT $7,000

Sunday, about half past twelve, the John Campbell residence in the country was discovered to be on fire, and despite the most strenuous efforts to save it, the house was burned to the ground, with a loss of $7,000, and insurance to the amount of $1,950 was carried. The family were all downstairs when they heard a noise as of something falling upstairs. Investigation disclosed that the second story was blazing, and the fire had already gained large headway. The blaze spread rapidly, and seeing that nothing could be done to stop it, all efforts were devoted to saving the furniture on the first floor. Most of this, including the piano, was saved. The fire company was called, and the truck rushed to the scene, but the fire was so far advanced that nothing could be done, except help to keep the fire down while the furniture was being saved. The Campbell home was one of the finest rural residences in the country, and its loss is a hard blow to the family, who have had more of their share of hard luck the past year. For the present, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are staying at the Alex Smith home, Miss Rhea staying with friends in town.

MRS. KLEMME DIES IN CALIFORNIA

Relatives in Belmond received the sad news Saturday evening of the death at Sierra Madre, Calif., of Mrs. H. J. Klemme. Mrs. Klemme had been more or less of an invalid the past year or so, and her health had not been very good, but it was not thought that she was in so serious a condition, and her death came as a shock to the relatives and many local friends. The children left at once for California, Ray, who was on a business trip to Denver, being notified enroute by telegram, and Glenn going Sunday, Mrs. Stanberry, of Mason City, going Saturday night. At this writing the Independent is not informed as to the arragements for the funeral or the place of interment, but hopes to print an obituary later. The family have the sympathy of the entire community in their great loss.

RENDERING PLANT HAS STARTED AGAIN

The Hawkeye Reduction Plant, located in the grove south of town, has been leased by Ned Packard and Hans Thompson and was re-opened for business by these two gentlemen on last week Saturday. They are now doing business. The new firm have a truck for gathering up carcasses, and have been licensed by the state to carry on the business, which they are now doing along the same lines as formerly done.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR SHORT COURSE

Last week Saturday afternoon, representatives from three townships and the city met to discuss the plans for the proposed Short Course, which it is planned to hold here this winter. The sentiment seems to be in favor of the event, and the only serious question to be settled now appears to be the question of financing. Another meeting is to be held later, we are informed, at which time definite arrangements will be made providing the event is carried thru. It is to be hoped that it will, for such occasions mean much to both the town and country, and create a better understanding between the two.

Nearly everybody forgets a favor but hardly anybody forgets a wrong.

COURT HOUSE NEWS NOTES

Clarion will contribute a divorce case at the Februuary term of court, Louisa Loraine have filed a petition for separation from her husband John Loraine. Cruel and inhuman treatment and drunkeness are alleged as grounds for divorce.

Lena Ferguson of Rowan has petitioned the court for a divorce from her husband Wm. Ferguson. She alleges her husband has failed to support her and is cruel and inhuman and at one time threatened to poison her.

Judge Wright has modified the decree in the McDowell divorce case by reducing the alimony of $125 to Mrs. McDowell to $50 per month for the support of two children. On the stand McDowell stated that his salary had been reduced to $100 per month and that his expenses were fully $75. The court allows the father to see his children not to exceed two days at a time once a month and to have the boy with him during the month of July of each year.

The board of supervisors met in regular January session Tuesday and chose G. R. Garttidge of Clarion as their chairman for the coming year. The new supervisors were duly seated, James Mehl from Norway township, who succeeds H. C. Pinkham of Goldfield and E. E. Kitley of Troy township, who takes the place of C. M. Spangler.

A $257 note is the basis of a suit brought by A. W. Moseley & Co., against J. O. Nelson. It is alleged defendant is about to convert his property into cash for the purpose of defrauding his creditors.

The assessors of Wright county will meet at the court house on Saturday, Jan. 17, to receive supplies and instructions for the coming year. —News.

News: Alleging that his father-in-law, Mayor Buck, of Iowa Falls, had thus threatened him when he went in the presence of friends to secure the custody of his little boy and girl, and asking the court to amend the order whereby he is required to pay $125 montly to his divorced wife, as well as the custody of the boy, W. H. McDowell. of Clarion, opened the fight before Judge Wright Tuesday and the hearing in district court was held. At times it was acrimonious.

As grounds for a reduction in alimony, Mr. McDowell cited lessened earning capacity and by testimony sought to show that his former wife was not in need of the sum fixed for the support of herself and children, her father being a very wealthy man and more than providing for her because of her services as housekeeper in his home.

The testimony of Mr. McDowell, substantiated by Alden C. Jones and L. R. Fitz, was that at one time when he went to Iowa Falls to secure the children, Mayor Buck swore at him and said, "I'll put you where the dogs won't bite you." Mr. McDowell charged that every time he went for the children he was afraid to go alone, and that every time he was there Mayor Buck either had the city marshal or a Rock Island detective, or both in the house. Mr. Buck explained that these men were not in his home in an official capacity but were there as friends of the family, as witnesses againt Mr. McDowell, should he "start something."

Mr. McDowell alleges that the mother and father-in-law had worked on the mind of his little daughter to such an extent that she would run from him when he appeared. People knowing the family here say that the father was a favorite of the child while they were living together here. As yet Mr. McDowell has not had the custody of the little girl since the divorce was granted.

Judge Wright has taken the case under advisement and Mr. McDowell's attorneys are hoping that some modification of the original decree may be had which will be more equitable to the husband and father.

Divorces were granted the following couples: Bertha Faulhaber of Eagle Grove from Joseph Faulhaber; Manda Tippen; of Eagle Grove from Orry Tippen; Florain Lance of Olaf from Barbara Lance.

Several farmers south of Clear Lake have had their chickens stolen. All of them are of the belief that the thief drives a truck auto. Last Thursday night the thief came to Joe Caffrey's, on the Geo{ Grimm farm. They sacked all the chickens and by some oversight of fright left three sacks filled with chickens in the yard. The family heard the car start up after the chickens had been taken.—Clear Lake Reporter.

POLITICAL POT BEGINS TO BOIL

(From the News)

Denger Not A Candidate

C. D. Denger, deputy sheriff, says there is nothing to the talk that he will be a candidate in the primaries for the nomination of sheriff.

"I have no intention, nor have I had any intention, of being a candidate," Mr. Denger said Monday.

Thus this pretty effectually stops the talk that had been heard regarding the Dows man's candidacy for the place.

Representative Oscar Ulstead will be a candidate for senator from this district at the June primaries. Mr. Ulstad was in Eagle Grove Tuesday visiting with friends and talking with them about his candidacy.

If Governor Kendall should decide to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Schaffter before the regular election next November, Representative Ulstad will not give up a seat in the house to become a candidate. There is very little possibility of an early election being held unless a special session of the legislature is called.

Representative Ulstad is serving his third term in the house. He has made a good record and has many friends in Wright, Hamilton and Hardin counties, who will get behind him once his candidacy is officially announced.—Eagle Grove Times.

Developments with the withdrawal of Judge Wright as a candidate for district Judge leaves the other three present judges candidates for re-election, and C. M. Hanson, of Ft. Dodge is already in the race. There are four places to be filled. Attorney J. A. Clock, of Hampton, according to reports will possibly be a candidate,and it is understood that Boyd R. Bryson, of Iowa Falls, will also be a candidate. It is not known at this time whether J. W. McGrath, of Eagle Grove will enter the race or not. It may be that the senatorial contest in the Hamilton-Wright-Hardin district will have some bearing on the situation in those counties, as they are all located in the eleventh judicial district, says the Hampton Chronicle.

ELSIE FERGUSON PLAYS 3 PARTS IN NEW PHOTOPLAY

Versatility of Screen Star Splendidly Displayed In Play Entitled "Lady Rose's Daughter

STAR THEATRE, JANUARY 14

The versatility of Elsie Ferguson, the charming star in leading Paramount pictures, is splendidly displayed in "Lady Rose's Daughter," her latest photoplay which comes to

STAR THEATRE
SATURDAY, JANUARY 14

Miss Ferguson plays three powerful parts in this picture, and her artistry is conspicuously evidenced in each characterization.

The story of Mrs. Humphry Ward's dramatic novel is divided into three epochs, those of 1860, 1890 and 1920. In the first epoch, Miss Ferguson is seen as Lady Maude, a woman of high social station in England. In the second she is Lady Maude, while in the present day epoch, she has the role of Julie Le Breton, the illegitimate daughter of Lady Rose.

The three parts are entirely different in conception and treatment, but in this splendid photoplay, Miss Ferguson portrays each with her usual artistry and dramattic effectiveness. As the daughter born out of wedlock, she endures much suffering, but after her love affair with a rascally army officer reaches its climax, she finds happiness in the love of a worthy man.

The photoplay has been finely produced and the support headed by David Powell, Holmes E. Herbert, Frank Losee, Ida Waterman and Warren Cook, is exceptionally clever.

The Rowan girls have played eleven games and have won eight. The three games which were lost were played on the opponents' floor. The team has six more games to play yet. Let's see you there. It is your duty to boost your own team. If you wish to see or expect the Rowan teams to win you must come and boost for them. They need your help and it is your duty to help them. The next game is at Rowan Saturday afternoon, January 14th, at 2:30, with Hansell. This game promises to be a fast and exciting game for the teams are evenly matched. Come and help Rowan add another victory to their list.

MORE ABOUT THE DEVIL SCARE

Big Stone Headlight: The article appearing in The Headlight two or three weeks ago about the Devil that appeared at the dance near Hutchinson, Minnesota, attracted much attention among our readers. Some look upon the story as having been born in the brain of some space writer. Others that it is a clever hoax contrived by practical jokers, and still others see in the incident evidence of the fulfillment of the scripture prophecy and the approaching end of satan's reign. To date, however, there has been no satisfactory explanation of the incident offered. A lady living at Bertha, Minn., wrote to Mr. A. L. Richardson of Hutchinson to find out the truth of the matter and received the following reply:

"Dear Madam—Your inquiry concerning the Hutchinson 'devil' came to hand and I willingly tell all I know about it. Of course much that we hear about it is not dependable at all. What is fact is as follows:

"Lake Marion, nine miles from here, is a pretty resort and a pavilion has been built there by the hotel for dancing. On Sunday for some time back dances have been held there and a class of people for many miles around who attend Sunday affairs have attended. It has been said that these dances are rough and that some of the dancers of both sexes got drunk; that the rooms of the hotel are all engaged in advance, and that the cottages are broken into and the rooms occupied by the revelers.

On Sunday night, October 30, last, a dance was in progress there and it is generally agreed that there were 100 dancers on the floor, when the devil came and was in their midst. Some claim that he came through the floor, while others claim that he came down from the roof. He was the regular fellow they say, horns and hoofs and tail. The lights flared, the musical instruments flew from the hands of the players and were splintered. Lurid lights filled the place and the devil danced about them. Women and girls screamed and some fainted. One or more are still confined in bed with hysteria. They all fled, terror-stricken, from the place. Some hid in the woods all night, others found shelter at farm houses. Twenty-six cars were left standing by the pavilion until daylight came and the party rallied and kept their courage up by keeping close together and got the cars away.

"Many and varied stories are told about the details, but the above is generally told by all. If it was a hoax, it was cleverly done and the hotel proprietor has offered $1,000 for an explanation of it. His place, hotel and all, is deserted and abandoned. He nor his family dare remain there.

"If it was the real devil, he has hurt his own business, for dancing among that class has ceased. It has been a real sensation, and I suppose has been widely advertised. The hardest people to convince that it was a hoax are those who were there.

Yours very sincerely,
A. L. Richardson."

You can't alter the color of a drab life by painting it with red liquor.

The girl who refuses to go to the dance because she has nothing to wear is foolish. Supposing she hasn't, she will look just like all the others.

A PLEA FOR PURE ENGLISH

To the Editor: In last Sundays Register Major MacNider, national commander of the American Legion, in speaking to an immense crowd at Mason City, the occasion being a welcome to Marshal Foch, is quoted as saying the reason the Marshal came to Mason City was to see the Mason City American Legion post, "the best damn post in the United States." In today's Register former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, in speaking to the Brooklynn, N. Y., Rotary club, is quoted as saying, "If some of the present members of congress had been given boy scout training, we'd have a damn sight better government today." Also in today's Register in the Paragraphone column, the writer of that really good humorous stuff makes one of his imaginary characters say, "Al, how the hell do you get that way?

All Iowa is proud of young MacNider, but we think he is not dignifying his exalted position by the use of rough language in public addresses. Secretary McAdoo unnecessarily loses dignity, and the funny man of the Paragraprone adds nothing to his humor by the use of such language. Such expletives may be thought strong, expressive and emphatic but the English language in its purity and flexibility, furnishes enough good words without drawing on those that are generally regarded as more exclusively belonging to the vocabulary of the uncultured and profane.

We plead for the use of good pure and clean English. Don't set an example to the boys and girls to acpuire harsh and profane words.

D. C. Mott.

The above appeared in the Des Moines Register of Jan. 1, 1922, we heartily agree with Mr. Mott, but are told that Mr. MacNider did not use the word mentioned but used the word "darn." As to McAdoo he has made so many errors that there is no use trying to help him. Give him a few more railroads to run and we will all be on the run.

THE NEW SCHOOL— WHICH LOCATION?

By the time this paper reaches our readlers this week the school election will be in full blast, and the result will be known tonight, but regardless of the outcome it will do no harm to find out on what location the patrons have the building built if one is voted.

As we know, we have two sites that can be used for the new building, those that are qualified to speak say that the old location is one of the prettiest grounds in the state, has a nice park, and a new building there could be seen by everyone that drives up main street and would be quite an advertisement for the town.

The new location is a five acre plot which would provide ample grounds for a ball diamond, play grounds and in time possibly would provide space for buss barns, and Supterintendent's home. It is away from the noisy streets, does away with much of the danger to the smaller children being run over by autoes, and one of the main items is the dust. The home can be closed during the dusty season but not so with the school. Imagine the effect on the mothers washing with around 150 to 200 pupils wiping the dust off their desks all day long with their sleeves. The disposal of sewerage would cost less.

The south six lots of the old location could possibly be sold for around $700 per lot—we would figure that the new location would save around $5,000; this at 5 per cent interest would make $250. Is it worth that just to advertise our school on main street?

The excavating costs are the same on one place as the other. On the new location the plot can be filled in with the dirt excavated, and on the old location it would have to be hauled away.

You have a right to have the building where you want it and the school board wants to favor the majority.

A ballot box will be left at the bank, or bring or mail the ballot printed below. Mark an X for your choice of location and sign your name.

W. E. Wooton writes the publishers as follows:

"I moved here to Sheffield so as to be near a Chiropractor for my wife's health. After finding that we got no results from him, I have closed up the restaurant and intend to move to Hampton soon. But have not done so yet. I left Meservey with the intentin of getting my wife on her feet again. Last fall she received such wonderful results. I figure we would be foolish to stay here after leaving Meservey for that purpose. So will you please correct it in the next paper that we are not so foolish yet as to be moving back and forth from Sheffield to Hampton. That when we do move we expect to stay."

When a young man who never before has done it suddenly begins to economize, the answer is that some girl has "hooked" him.

Boyce, of San Francisco, and his son, Howard, of Rock Island. His son John preceeded him in death. His three grandchildren and a host of friends will also greatly miss him. "He lived in a house by the side of the road and was a friend to man."

Miss Maude Griggs spent the last of the week in the country visiting her sister, Mrs. Julius Cook.

S. S. Matson is improving fast. He is able to sit up some now.

Frank Quigley is very ill with an attack of the pneumonia. His father is here helping take care of him.

The basket ball games here Friday afternoon were rather rough, especially the boys' game. The Rowan team would surely make good at foot ball. However, the Rowan teams showed better team work and they were better at throwing baskets than the Goodell teams. Score: Rowen 18, Goodell 3, for the boys', and Rowan 12 and Goodell 1 for the girls'.

The Goodell team will play at Crystal Lake on January 13.

Mrs. W. F. Beier was called to Garner on Friday, on account of her mother's illness. She returned on Saturday.

Last Saturday morning O. Sandberg received the sad news of the death of Mr. H. D. Kepner. He died at Rock Island, Ill., where he has resided since leaving Goodell. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Miller at the U. B. church, on Tuesday, at 1:30 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Johnson, of Spirit Lake, and Mr. Polland and Mrs. Kepner's brother, also of Spirit Lake, were here on Tuesday to attend the H. D. Kepner funeral.

The next number of the Lecture Course will be a lecture by Homer C. Boblitt, Jan. 17, next Tuesday, on "Smouldering Embers." Mr. Boblitt is a redblooded American, a world traveler, orator, humorist, thinker. He brings a tense stirring message full of patriotism. His "Smouldering Embers" deals with the menace of radicalism, stirringly told, for he has seen Red Russia in action. Do not fail to hear him. All the high school children will be admitted for 25c each.

Monday evening, while Miss Agnus Fuller was driving home from school, she had the misfortune to have her collar bone broken. When near her home she stopped and got out of the sleigh, and was walking beside it. The horse became frightened, and while she was trying to hold the horse she was thrown to the ground and had her collar bone broken.

Goodell School Notes.

The Lowenberg children were absent the last three days of last week.

Dale Busick was absent Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The fourth month's reports were given out last week. They seemed somewhat improved in some cases in comparison with other month's work.

Those with the highest average were Daphane Houghton in the 6th grade, Lucil Boller in the 5th grade, and Chun Houghton in the 4th. grade

Basket Ball

The return game with Rowan teams were played on the Goodell floor Jan. 6th. In this game the Goodell teams played better than they have done any previous game. The girls played first and it was a hard fought and good game all through. The final score was 16 to 1 in favor of Rowan. It was not a close game but it showed great improvement over the Rowan game. The Goodell girls had several shots at the basket but were not able to roll it through.

The boys' game was very rough from the very start. But even if the visiting team was heavier than the Goodell boys, the boys held them down fairly well. The final score being 18 to 3 in favor of Rowan. The Goodell boys played the best they have this season.

The Klemme boys and girls play here Friday January 20.

Leona Sandry is back in school after a months absence.

Semester examination will be given this week as January 13 concludes the first semester making half of the school year.

The people of Goodell and community have found it advisable to consider school consolidation. January 19th Proffessor C. C. Swain of the Iowa Extention Division will speak at the school house at 7:30 p. m. Mr. Swain will lay the facts before the people and will try to answer any question that anyone may wish to ask. The policemen's duties are to see that his street is kept clean and that the houses are in good order.

CRITICIZING THE OTHER FELLOW

Criticizing the other fellow is becoming to be more and more an American pastime, but often it is done to make the public believe the other fellow is wrong or to cover some defect of our own which we know exists,or possibly to convey the idea that we possess superior knowledge and ability.

Our President Harding released a number of persons as a Christmas present among which was Eugene V. Debs who had been in prison for obstructing the draft during our great war. President Harding is being severely criticized by many for this pardon. We believe the president had facts about which we know nothing and whenever some one is found that can fill the president's chair better than Mr. Harding they will be called to fill the position, but until then we are willing to trust our affairs to the man that fills the chair.

Public officials do make mistakes most times not intentionally but thru error that is discovered too late to make things right, at such time it is the duty of a citizen to show such official what is not being done as it should be, but this should be done before we holler graft and dishonesty.

We recently heard a man make a remark that our present school board did not know enough to pound sand in a rat hole—we do not know what connection the rat hole proposition has with being necessary to be a good school board member, we do not think that the man had any other idea to convey otherwise than he was so much better fitted for the job than the present members, but could not bring out his point without trying to discredit someone else, for he had no qualifications of his own having made a failure of every thing he ever undertook.

ESCAPES DEATH IN TRAIN WRECK

News: Mrs. A. W. R. Schultz and three sons are home from a visit to Milwaukee relatives and report a very exciting time enroute, the train on which they were riding having been cut in two by a fast freight as they neared Waukesha, Wisconsin. The passenger train was traveling due east at a good speed. There was a crossing near Waukesha and a freight train on the other road came along on the other road at a good speed, and before the engineer on the freight could stop his engine the passenger train had been hit, the baggage car getting the brunt of the blow. It was smashed into flinders but luckily the two baggagemen escaped unhurt. None of the passenger cars were thrown from the track. The Clarion friends of the Schultz family congratulate them on their narrow-escape.

CLAIM VICTORIES FOR PROHIBITION

Prohibition won big victories in Iowa in 1921.

The price of bootleg liquor has nearly doubled all over.

Moonshine beer has practically been stamped out; public officials are more rigid in the enforcement of the dry laws.

Iowa has probably made greater strides toward real prohibition during the last twelve months than any other state in the Union.

These are the claims of the Iowa Anti-Saloon League in a review of 1921 achievements in this state, which was issued today by State Supt. R. N. Holsap.e.

More than 5,000 raids were conducted throughout Iowa during the twelve months just closed, the report states. Approximately 1,000 were made in the immediate vicinity of Des Moines and the balance in other counties of the state.

The increasing danger incurred in the selling of liquor has caused the price to be doubled during the year, thus making prohibition more effective, the league asserts. Bonded whiskey was selling for $15 a quart in January 1921; it is now $25 to $35 a quart. Alcohol has gone up to $60 and $75 a gallon. Ordinary moonshine whisky is now $3.00 per pint. Beer is practically off the market, Holsaple says, and when it is obtainable in a few counties in eastern Iowa it costs at least $1.50 a bottle.

"Co-operation of churches, law enforcement officers and newspapers throughout the state in educating the public with regard to civic duties toward prohibition and law enforcement has been one of the greatest steps forward n the year," the report says.

"Make Iowa the Dryest state in the Union," the League urges for 1922.

The reward of faithful service too often is, "He was a good man in his day."

IMPORTS DOG FROM SOUTH AMERICA

Garner Leader: We claim that F. W. Zieger is quite a hand for "nick-nacks," particularly of the dog kind. Some months ago, he invested in a German war dog, but after the brute had scared a dozen or so people to death, he was forced, in self defense, to dispose of him. No more dog for Frank, until yesterday when he got one of a rare specie—a pure bred Drehpehs. Unlike his other dog, this one is rather a docile beast but what effect this particular climate will have on the canine remains to be seen. He is of a specie raised in South America and there is a possibility that the sudden change to this extreme cold climate, may have the effect of developing rabies. However, he will be watched closely. Until he becomes acclimated, he will be kept in Zeiger's Drug Store. Later he will become a member of the household, and allowed to grow up with "Peggy" and the other little Zeiger's. Being native of the hot, southern country, heat has no effect upon him. The hair, or wool, is sort of an abestos texture, and they can pass through the flames without injury to themselves. That is what Frank tells us. If we ever get a chance we are going to try him out with turpentine.

CROSS FAN BELTS IN COLD WEATHER

Fertile—A discovery of timely interest to owners and drivers of automobiles was recently made by Paul Humphrey, proprietor of a garage at this place. During the zero weather of last week, a great many cars with frozen radiators were brought to this place for repairs. While at work on one of these machines, the thought struck the young man that if the warm air of the engine could be thrown thru the meshes of the radiator, the latter would not freeze. After a little experimenting he discovered that this could be accomplished by simply crossing the fan belt, thus reversing the motion of the fan. The novel idea has already been tried out by a great many drivers at this place and pronounced a big success.

Only those who think more of their work than they do of their pay get more pay.

If nobody judges lest he should not be judged there would be a lot of policeman, courts and juryman out of a job.

A man became lost in the woods during a big storm. He sought shelter in a hollow log. The rain caused the log to swell and the man was unable to move and realized that he must starve. All the mean things that he had done during his life came back to him. One of the things he thought of was that he had never started a bank account and that as a result his family would suffer. After this he felt so small that he was able to get out of the log without difficulty. Moral—Start a bank account now.

Miss Nellie Bell, Correspondent and Business Agent

Alexander Local News

Hans and Hilko Pals were business callers at Clarion, Tuesday.

The Misses Jennie and Minnie Groen, of Belmond, visited several days of last week with their sister, Mrs. Henry Schulte.

About fifty of the neighbors gathered at the Hans Pals home Friday evening for an oyster supper. The affair was a success and enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Kate Kusian and children, Minnie and Julius, returned to their home at Dumont last Saturday after spending the week with relatives at this place.

George Yaw and Arthur Thomas, of Iowa Falls, spent the week-end with relatives at Alexander.

Miss Evelyn Oliver, of Corwith, has been visiting friends here a few days the past week.

Miss Nellie Bell went to Waterloo last Thursday where she will spend the week with relatives at that place.

Miss Vivian Meyerbauchtol was an over Sunday guest with friends here. Miss Vivian was on her way back to Tripoli after spending her vacation with her parents in Springfield, Minnesota.

The Peters, Butler & Kieslich Transfer Company is doing a thriving business since the M. & St. L. crippled its passenger service by the recent change in time table. This company meets trains at Belmond, Dows and Ackley. Messrs August Friesleben, Harry Lauen and Dick Hansen very ably assisted with the office work last Friday afternoon.

SCHOOL NOTES

School began January 2nd after one week's vacation. Everyone seems fully rested and ready for work.

The following named persons visited school last week: Miss Maud Newgard, of Belmond; Miss Therest Mors, a former teacher in our school, but now teaching in New Hampton, Iowa; Miss Malinda Tickmeyer, of Sheffield; Miss Bertha Gartz, a former teacher in our school but now attending college at Cedar Falls; Miss Ethel Hall, who is attending Waterloo business college and also numbered as one of our recent teachers.

One more week of the first semester. Severar new subjects will be taken up at the beginning of the second semester, viz: High School, arithmetic; high school, civics; American Constitution; High School, Grammar.

A small delegation of Latimer high school pupils taking advantage of an extra week of vacation in their own school, visited us last Friday. They were the Misses Katie and Fay Simons, Laurine Christensen, Gladys and Loretta Johnson.

Our attendance and punctuality is holding up good in spite of the recent cold weather. Ninety per cent of our tardiness the past week was caused by those living within three or four blocks of school. The bus drivers to date have been unusually prompt in delivering children to school on time.

Our moving picture schedule has been received. Motion pictures will be given each Tuesday night, beginning January 10th and continuing weekly up to and including May 2nd.

M. E. CHURCH

We want to thank Rev. Wilkinson for his courage, and the strong effort he put forth Sunday to get here through the drifted banks of snow. And though we had to wait a few minutes for his arrival, it was well worth our while. For he had an interesting sermon from the prophet, Amos, which he delivered for us.

Miss Lillie Corwell, of Class No. 3 gave her pupils an enjoyable evening Monday night when she took them for a sleigh ride. All report a jolly good time.

Mike, a friend looked down at the corpse and began to laugh. His wife upbraided him. I'm ashamed of you," she said, "for laughing that way at a corpse." I could not help it," said Mike, "for I get to thinking, there lies Pat, all dressed up, and no place to go." So you fellows who wait for a perfect organization will wait till some day you're all dressed up and no place to go.

Mr. Pederson arraigned the men who sought to create dissension in the Farm Bureau. He said no purely farm organization had ever yet failed, and while none had ever yet achieved the strength and influence of the Farm Bureau, yet the latter was surely the child of the earlier organizations, the outgrowth of their work, and that the interests of agriculture were the most certain to be advanced thru an harmonious co-operation. He rapped the Iowa Homestead for its attitude toward the Farm Bureau officials; he pleaded for support for them; for co-operation with the County Agent.

"But if you have weak officers in the Farm Bureau kick them out," he said. He said the farmer who did not join the organization yet criticised it or expected to share in its benefits was no more illogical than the man who sat on a line fence and watched the other man grow a crop and then ask him to give him half.

Mr. Pederson attacked the attitude of people who wanted everything to come down to the level of present farm prices. "What we should ask is that the farm products be raised. We don't want to have a low level. The farmer is entitled to the best. You cannot pay off the world's debt which has multiplied a hundred fold with 30 cent corn. If that's the level the world wants, it might as well draw a blue pencil line thru these huge debts and call them no good."

He told of the "passing of the buck" of the high cost of living. It went all around the circle and finallation, asserting that Iowa's Farm Bureau federation had taken the lead and delivered an ultimatum to Iowa Congressmen and Senators that unless they fought for farm interests Iowa would be heard from but that if they did fight for farm interests, the farmer would see that they were protected in the elections.

But the most uproarous applause greeted Mr. Pederson when he told the crowd about getting stuck in the mud two blocks from the court house two years ago! Really, the crowd thought it was a great joke on Clarion.

Pederson's talk, we would judge, was worth a thousand dollars to the Wright County Farm Bureau. How any farmer could hear it and not be convinced of the organizations value is beyond the writer. His advice against internal dissension was excellent. His plea for the continuance of the organization was based on common sense. Filled with a thoro knowledge of farming conditions, and speaking more for profitable farming rather than loans, which he said never would be of any benefit unless better prices were securd, he drove home the worth and value of the county, state and national organization.

Goldfield Short Course Certainty

A joint meeting of the business men's committee and the farm bureau committee was held at the Whyte Motor Co. building Friday evening, January 6th, to plan and organize a winter short course. The farm bureau was represented by T. A. Knight, Geo. M. Nelson, Harry Inners, Miller Nelson and France Warner; and the business men by W. H. Mantle, F. G. Taylor, W. M. Coons, E M. Anderson and Geo H. Whyte.

Election of officers for the entire short course gave the following results: W. H. Mantle, chairman; W. M. Coons, secretary-treasurer. The following people were appointed by the chair to have charge of the different exhibits in the short course: Mrs. Geo. M. Nelson, ladies' department; H. C. Wiser, horses; T. A. Knight, sheep; France Warner, hogs; F. G. Taylor, poultry; Geo. M. Nelson, farm crops and L. P. Stevenson, cattle. The publicity committee, consisting of J. S. Whyte and Lou Sherman was appointed to get out all necessary publicity material. An entertainment committee consisting of B. W. McElhinney and M. F. Coons was appointed to see that the specialists are made to feel at home during their stay in Goldfield. Mrs. Geo. M. Nelson, as chairman of the ladies' committee, will be assisted by Mrs. Harry Inners, Mrs. Geo. Kabele, Mrs. Ole Lerdal and Mrs. Ruth Whyte.

County Agent Edwards was present and assisted in making plans for the Goldfield short course. He assured the joint committee that every effort would be made to secure the best talent available through college of agriculture at Ames. The following specialists were suggested at this meeting the talent for the Goldfield short course will undoubtedly be selected from this list: Professors H. H. Kildee and Rex Beresford for animal husbandry; Prof. F. G. Churchill and Elmer Reed for farm crops; Miss Bertha Holden or Miss Knowles for the ladies' department. The date for the short course was not definitely decided upon for the reason that it will have to be arranged to fit in with the plans of the specialists from Ames.

Meat Demonstrations Postponed

The meat cutting and curing demonstrations which were originally scheduled for Wright county for January 5th, 6th and 7th, were postponed indefinitely on account of the severe weather.

It seems unfortunate that these most interesting demonstrations had to be postponed, but it was decided by the officers of the farm bureau organization that more good would be done and we would receive more service for our money if the demonstrations were held some time later, when weather and road conditions were more favorable.

Musical Numbers Highly Appreciated

Officers and directors of the farm bureau as well as the county agent wish to express their appreciation of the splendid music which was rendered by the Meekers' orchestra, also by Mrs. H. B. Fickle and Mrs. W. T. Derr.

T. A. Hougas, who spoke in behalf of the U. S. Grain Growers Inc., spoke very highly of the music given by the Meekers' orchestra and remarked that it was unusual to see the music at an annual meeting by a farmers' orchestra. The vocal solos by Mrs. Fickle and the violin solo by Mrs. Derr were very much appreciated b those who attended.

WOMAN CANDIDATE FOR RAMSAY'S JOB

Des Moines Sunday Register: Miss Lillian Leffert, of Des Moines, formerly deputy secretary of state, announced yesterday her candidacy for the republican nomination for secretary of state at the June primaries.

Miss Leffert is widely known in political circles, having served as journal clerk in the house during the Thirty-sixth, Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth assemblies of the Iowa legislature. She is a graduate of the University of Chicago Law school and a member of the Iowa bar, but has never practiced law.

Miss Leffert came to Des Moines from Dubuque and following an extensive experience in various business offices went to the state house as special asistant in compiling the supplement to the code of 1913. After three terms as journal clerk in the general assembly she entered the office of secretary of state under Walter C. Ramsay. She served here two years, first as chief clerk and later as deputy.

As a candidate for state office, Miss Leffert will make no particular appeal to the women voters, she stated yesterday, basing her claims for support on the experience and training which she feels fits her for filling the position to which she aspires.

She will open a downtown headquarters in a short time and expects to stump the state for two months prior to the primary. Her nomination papers will be circulated in a few weeks.

Many a man who fumes and swears if he has to wait five minutes for his wife to get ready for the theatre, will coax and pet his balky automobile for an hour when it refuses to start without getting out of patience.

The other man's business is all profit.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. – Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is the skipper, Neils Halversen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

It was dark, however, before they had all the sails snugged up shipshape, although in the meantime the quarantine launch had hove alongside, investigated, and removed those of the crew who still lived. Shortly thereafter the coroner came and removed the dead, after which Gibney and McGuffey hosed down the deck, located some hard tack and coffee, supped and turned in in the officers' quarters. In the morning, Scab Johnny arrived in a launch with their other clothes (Mr. Gibney having thoughtfully sent him ten dollars on account of their old board bill, together with a request for the clothes), and when the agents of the Chesapeake sent a watchman to relieve them they went ashore and had breakfast. After breakfast, they called at the office of the agents, where they were complimented on their daring seamanship and received a check for one thousand dollars each.

"Well, now," McGuffey declared, after they had cashed their checks, "Seein' as how I've become independently wealthy by following your lead, Adelbert, all I got to say is that I'm a-goin' to stick to you like a limpet to a rock. What'll we do with our money?"

For the first time in his checkered career Mr. Gibney had a sane, sensible, and serious thought. "Has it ever occurred to you, Mac, how much nicer it is to have a few dollars in the bank, good clothes on your back, an' a credit with your friends? Me, all my life I been a come-easy, go-easy, come-Sunday,-God'll-send-Monday sort o' feller, until in my forty-second year I'm little better'n a beachcomber. So now, when you ask me what I'm goin' to do with my money, I'll tell you. I'm going to save it, after first payin' up about seventy-five bucks I owe here an' there along the Front. I'm through drinkin' an' raisin' h—ll. Me for a savings bank, Bart."

CHAPTER VII.

When Captain Scraggs, after abandoning all hope of salving the bark Chesapeake, returned to the Maggie, the little craft reminded him of nothing so much as the ward for the incorrigible of an insane asylum. Due to Captain Scraggs' stupidity and the general inefficiency of the Maggie, the new navigating officer was of the opinion that he had been swindled out of his share of the salvage, while the new engineer, furious at having been engaged to baby such a ruin as the Maggie's boiler turned out to be, blamed Scraggs' parsimony for the loss of his share of the salvage. Therefore, both men aired with the utmost frankness their opinion of their employer. One word borrowed another until diplomatic relations were severed and, in the language of the classic, they "mixed it." They were fairly well matched, and, to the credit of Captain Scraggs be it said, whenever he believed himself to have a fighting chance Scraggs would fight and fight well, under the Tom-cat rules of fisticuffs.

Following a bloody battle in the pilot house, he subdued the mate; following his victory he was still war mad, so he went to the engine-room hatch and abused the engineer. As a result of the day's events, both men quit when the Maggie was tied up at Jackson street wharf and once more Captain Scraggs was helpless. In his extremity, he wished he hadn't been so hard on Mr. Gibney and McGuffey, for he realized he could never hope to get them back until their salvage money should be spent.

Godless and wholly irreclaimable as Mr. Gibney and Mr. McGuffey might have been and doubtless were, each possessed in bounteous measure the sweetest of human attributes, to-wit: a soft, kind heart and a forgiving spirit. Creatures of impulse both, they found it absolutely impossible to nourish a grudge against Captain Scraggs, when, upon returning to Scab Johnny's boarding house, their host handed them a grubby note from their enemy. It was short and sweet and sounded quite sincere; Mr. Gibney read it aloud:

"On Board the Maggie, Saturday night.
"Dear Friends:

I am sorry. You hurt me awful with your kidden when you took the Chesapeake away from me. To er is human but to forgive is devine. After what I done I don't expect you two to come back to work ever but for God's sake don't give me the dead face when we meat agin. Remember we been shipmates once.

"P. P. Scraggs."

"Why, the pore ol' son of a horse thief," Mr. Gibney murmured, much moved at this profound abasement. "Of course we forgive him. It ain't manly to hold a grouch after the culprit has paid his fair price for his sins. By an' large, I got a hunch, Bart, that old Scraggsy's had his lesson for once."

"If you can forgive him, I can, Gib."

"Well, he's certainly cleaned himself handsome, Bart. Telephone for a messenger boy," and Mr. Gibney sat down and wrote:

"Scraggsy, old fanciful, we're square. Forget it and come to breakfast with us at seven tomorrow at the Marigold cafe. I'll order deviled lam kidneys for three. It's alright with Bart also.

"Yours,
"Gib."

This note, delivered to Captain Scraggs by the messenger boy, lifted the gloom from the latter's miserable soul and sent him home with a light heart to Mrs. Scraggs. At the Marigold cafe next morning he was almost touched to observe that both Gibney and McGuffey showed up arrayed in dungarees, wherefore Scraggs knew his late enemies purposed proceeding to the Maggie immediately after breakfast and working in the engine room all day Sunday. Such action, when he knew both gentlemen to be the possessors of wealth far beyond the dreams of avarice, bordered so closely on the miraculous that Scraggs made a mental resolve to play fair in the future—at least as fair as the limits of his cross-grained nature would permit. He was so cheerful and happy that McGuffey, taking advantage of the situation, argued him into some minor repairs to the engine.

About nine o'clock, as Mr. Gibney was on his way to the Marigold Cafe for breakfast, he was mildly interested, while passing the Embarcadero warehouse, to note the presence of fully a dozen seedy-looking gentlemen of undoubted Hebraic antecedents, congregated in a circle just outside the warehouse door. There was an air of suppressed excitement about this group of Jews that aroused Mr. Gibney's curiosity; so he decided to cross over and investigate, being of the opinion that possibly one of their number had fallen in a fit. He had once had an epileptic shipmate and was peculiarly expert in the handling of such cases.

Now, if the greater portion of Mr. Gibney's eventful career had not been spent at sea, he would have known, by the red flag that floated over the door, that a public auction was about to take place, and that the group of Hebrew gentlemen constituted an organization known as the Forty Thieves, whose business it was to dominate the bidding at all auctions, frighten off, or buy off, or outbid all competitors, and eventually gather unto themselves, at their own figures, all goods offered for sale.

In the center of the group Mr. Gibney noticed a tall, lanky individual, evidently the leader, who was issuing instructions in a low voice to his henchmen. This individual, though Mr. Gibney did not know it, was the King of the Forty Thieves. As Mr. Gibney luffed into view the king eyed him with suspicion. Observing this, Mr. Gibney threw out his magnificent chest, scowled at the king, and stepped into the warehouse for all the world as if he owned it.

An oldish man with glasses—the auctioneer—was seated on a box making figures in a notebook. Him Mr. Gibney addressed.

"What's all this here?" he inquired, jerking his thumb over his shoulder at the group.

"It's an old horse sale," replied the auctioneer, without looking up.

Mr. Gibney brightened. He glanced around for the stock in trade, but observing none concluded that the old horses would be led in, one at a time, through a small door in the rear of the warehouse. Like most sailors, Mr. Gibney had a passion for horseback riding, and in a spirit of adventure he resolved to acquaint himself with the ins and outs of an old horse sale.

"How much might a man have to give for one of the critters?" he asked. "And are they worth a whoop after you get them?"

"Twenty-five cents up," was the answer. "You go it blind at an old horse sale, as a rule. Perhaps you get something that's worthless, and then again you may get something that has heaps of value, and perhaps you only pay half a dollar for it. It all depends on the bidding. I once sold an old horse to a chap and he took it home and opened it up, and what d'ye suppose he found inside?"

"Bots," replied Mr. Gibney, who prided himself on being something of a veterinarian, having spent a few months of his youth around a livery stable.

"A million dollars in Confederate greenbacks," replied the auctioneer. "Of course they didn't have any value, but just suppose they'd been U. S.?"

"That's right," agreed Mr. Gibney. "I suppose the swab that owned the horse starved it until the poor animal figgered that all's grass that's green. As the feller says, 'Truth is sometimes stranger than fiction.' If you throw in a saddle and bridle cheap, I might be induced to invest in one of your old horses, shipmate."

The auctioneer glanced quickly at Mr. Gibney, but noticing that worthy's face free from guile, he burst out laughing.

"My sea-faring friend," he said presently, "when we use the term 'old horse,' we use it figuratively. See all this freight stored here? Well, that's never been called for by the consignees, and after it's in the warehouse a year and isn't called for, we have an old horse sale and auction it off to the highest bidder. Savey?"

Mr. Gibney took refuge in a lie. "Of course, I do. I was just kiddin' you, my hearty." (Here Mr. Gibney's glance rested on two long heavy sugarpine boxes, or shipping cases. Their joints at all four corners were cunningly dove-tailed and wire-strapped.) "I was a bit interested in them two boxes, an' seein' as this is a free country, I thought I'd just step in an' make a bid on them," and with the words, Mr. Gibney walked over and busied himself in an inspection of the two crates in question.

The fact of the matter was that so embarrassed was Mr. Gibney at the exposition of his ignorance that he desired to hide the confusion evident in his sun-tanned face. So he stooped over the crates and pretended to be exceedingly interested in them, hauling and pushing them about and reading the address of the consignee who had failed to call for his goods. The crates were both consigned to the Gin Seng company, 714 Dupont street, San Francisco. There were several Chinese characters scrawled on the top of each crate, together with the words, in English: "Oriental Goods."

As he ceased from his fake inspection of the two boxes, the King of the Forty Thieves approached and surveyed the sailor with an even greater amount of distrust and suspicion than ever. Mr. Gibney was annoyed. He disliked being stared at, so he said:

"Hello, Blumenthal, my bully boy. What's aggravatin' you?"

Blumenthal (since Mr. Gibney, in the sheer riot of his imagination elected to christen him Blumenthal, the name will probably suit him as well as any other) came close to Mr. Gibney and drew him aside. In a hoarse whisper he desired to know if Mr. Gibney attended the auction with the expectation of bidding on any of the packages offered for sale. Seeking to justify his presence, Mr. Gibney advised that it was his intention to bid on everything in sight; whereupon Blumenthal proceeded to explain to Mr. Gibney how impossible it would be for him, arrayed against the Forty Thieves, to buy any article at a reasonable price. Further: Blumenthal desired to inform Mr. Gibney that his (Mr. Gibney's) efforts to buy in the "old horses" would merely result in his running the prices up, for no beneficent purpose, since it was ever the practice of the Forty Thieves to permit no man to outbid them. Perhaps Mr. Gibney would be satisfied with a fair day's profit without troubling himself to hamper the Forty Thieves and interfere with their combination, and with the words, the king surreptitiously slipped Mr. Gibney a fifty-dollar greenback.

Mr. Gibney's great fist closed over the treasure, he having first, by a coy glance, satisfied himself that it was really fifty dollars. He shook hands with the king. He said:

"Blumenthal, you're a smart man. I am quite content with this fifty to keep off your course and give you a wide berth to starboard. I'm sensible enough to know when I'm licked, an' a fight without profit ain't in my line. I didn't make my money that way, Blumenthal. I'll cast off my lines and haul away from the dock," and suiting the action to the figure, Mr. Gibney departed.

He went first to the Seaboard drug store, where he quizzed the druggist for five minutes, after which he continued his cruise. Upon reaching the Maggie, he proceeded to relate in detail, and with additional details supplied by his own imagination, the story of his morning adventure.

"Gib," said McGuffey enviously, "you're a fool for luck."

"Luck," said Mr. Gibney, beginning to expand, "is what the feller calls a relative proposition—"

"You're wrong, Gib," interposed Captain Scraggs. "Relatives is unlucky an' expensive. Take, f'r instance, Mrs. Scraggs' mother—"

"I mean, you lunkhead," said Mr. Gibney, "that luck is found where brains grow. No brain, no luck. No luck, no brains. Lemme illustrate. A thievin' land shark makes me a present o' fifty dollars not to butt in on them two boxes I'm tellin' you about. Him an' his gang wants them two boxes. Fair crazy to get 'em. Now, don't it stand to reason that them fellers knows what's in them boxes, or they wouldn't give me fifty dollars to haul ship? Of course, it does. However, in order to earn that fifty dollars, I got to back water. It wouldn't be playin' fair if I didn't. But that don't prevent me from puttin' two dear friends o' mine (here Mr. Gibney encircled Scraggs and McGuffey with an arm each) next to the secret which I discovers, an' if there's money in it for old Hooky that buys me off, it stands to reason that there's money in it for us three. What's to prevent you an' McGuffey from goin' up to this old horse sale an' biddin' in them two boxes for the use and benefit of Gibney, Scraggs an' McGuffey, all share an' share alike? You can bid as high as a hundred dollars, if necessary, an' still come out a thousand dollars to the good. I'm tellin' you this because I know what's in them two boxes."

McGuffey was staring fascinated at Mr. Gibney. Captain Scraggs clutched his mate's arm in a frenzied clasp.

"What?" they both interrogated.

"You two boys," continued Mr. Gibney with aggravating deliberation, "ain't what nobody would call dummies. You're smart men. But the trouble with both o' you boys is you ain't got no imagination. Without imagination nobody gets nowhere, unless it's out th' small end o' th' horn. Maybe you boys ain't noticed it, but my imagination is all that keeps me from goin' to jail. Now, if you two had read the address on them two boxes, it wouldn't 'a' meant nothin' to you. Absolutely nothin'. But with me it's different. I'm blessed with imagination enough to see right through them Chinaman tricks. Them two boxes is marked 'Oriental Goods' an' consigned (here Mr. Gibney raised a grimy forefinger, and Scraggs and McGuffey eyed it very much as if they expected it to go off at any moment)—them two boxes is consigned to the Gin Seng company, 714 Dupont street, San Francisco."

"Well, that's up in Chinatown, all right," admitted Captain Scraggs, "but how about what's inside the two crates?"

"Oriental goods, of course," said McGuffey. "They are consigned to a Chinaman, an' besides, that's what it says on the cases, don't it, Gib? Oriental goods, Scraggs, is silks an' satins, rice, chop suey, punk, an' idols an' fan tan layouts."

"If there ain't Swiss cheese movements in that head block of yours, Mac, you and Scraggsy can divide my share o' these two boxes o' ginseng root between you. Do you get it, you chuckleheaded son of a Irish potato? Gin Seng, 714 Dupont street. Ginseng—a root or a herb that medicine is made out of. The dictionary says it's a Chinese panacea for exhaustion, an' I happen to know that it's worth five dollars a pound an' that them two crates weighs a hundred and fifty pounds each if they weighs an ounce."

His auditors stared at Mr. Gibney much as might a pair of baseball fans at the hero of a home run with two strikes and the bases full.

"Gawd!" muttered McGuffey.

"Great grief, Gib! Can this be possible?" gasped Captain Scraggs.

For answer Mr. Gibney took out his fifty-dollar bill and handed it to—to McGuffey. He never trusted Captain Scraggs with anything more valuable than a pipeful of tobacco.

"Scraggsy," he said solemnly, "I'm willin' to back my imagination with my cash. You an' McGuffey hurry right over to the warehouse an' butt in on the sale when they come to them two boxes. The sale is just about startin' now. Go as high as you think you can in order to get the ginseng at a profitable figger, an' pay the auctioneer fifty dollars down to hold the sale; that will give you boys time to rush around to dig up the balance o' the money. Tack right along now, lads, while I go down the street an' get me some breakfast. I don't want Blumenthal to see me around that sale. He might get suspicious. After I eat I'll meet you here aboard th' Maggie, an' we'll divide the loot."

With a fervent handshake all around, the three shipmates parted.

After disposing of a hearty breakfast of devilled lamb's kidneys and coffee, Mr. Gibney invested in a ten-cent Sailor's Delight and strolled down to the Maggie. Neils Halvorsen, the lone deckhand, was aboard, and the moment Mr. Gibney trod the Maggie's deck once more as mate, he exercised his prerogative to order Neils ashore for the remainder of the day. Since Halvorsen was not in on the ginseng deal, Mr. Gibney concluded that it would be just as well to have him out of the way should Scraggs and McGuffey appear unexpectedly with the two cases of ginseng.

For an hour Mr. Gibney sat on the stern bitts and ruminated over a few advantageous plans that had occurred to him for the investment of his share of the deal should Scraggs and McGuffey succeed in landing what Mr. Gibney termed "the loot." About eleven o'clock an express wagon drove in on the dock, and the mate's dreams were pleasantly interrupted by a gleeful shout from Captain Scraggs, on the lookout forward with the driver. McGuffey sat on top of the two cases with his legs dangling over the end of the wagon. He was the picture of contentment.

Mr. Gibney hurried forward, threw out the gangplank, and assisted McGuffey in carrying both crates aboard the Maggie and into her little cabin. Captain Scraggs thereupon dismissed the expressman, and all three partners gathered around the dining room table, upon which the boxes rested.

"Well, Scraggsy, old pal, old scout, old socks, I see you've delivered the goods," said Mr. Gibney, batting the skipper across the cabin with an affectionate slap on the shoulder.

"I did," said Scraggs—and cursed Mr. Gibney's demonstrativeness. "Here's the bill o' sale all regular. McGuffey has the change. That bunch o' Israelites run th' price up to $10.00 each on these two crates o' ginseng, but when they see we're determined to have 'em an' ain't interested in nothin' else, they lets 'em go to us. McGuffey, my dear boy, whatever are you a-doin' there—standin' around with your teeth in your mouth? Skip down into th' engine room and bring up a hammer an' a col' chisel. We'll open her up an' inspect th' swag."

Upon McGuffey's return, Mr. Gibney took charge. He drove the chisel under the lid of the nearest crate, and prepared to pry it loose. Suddenly he paused. A thought had occurred to him.

"Gentlemen," he said (McGuffey nodded his head approvingly), "this world is full o' sorrers an' disappointments, an' it may well be that these two cases don't contain even so much as a smell o' ginseng after all. It may be that they are really Oriental goods. What I want distinctly understood is this: no matter what's inside, we share equally in the profits, even if they turn out to be losses. That's understood an' agreed to, ain't it?"

Captain Scraggs and McGuffey indicated that it was.

"There's a element o' mystery about these two boxes," continued Mr. Gibney, "that fascinates me. They sets my imagination a-workin' an' joggles up all my sportin' instincts. Now, just to make it interestin' an' add a spice t' th' grand openin', I'm willin' to bet again my own best judgment an' lay you even money, Scraggsy, that it ain't ginseng, but Oriental goods."

"I'll go you five dollars, just f'r ducks," responded Captain Scraggs heartily. "McGuffey to hold the stakes an' decide the bet."

"Done," replied Mr. Gibney. The money was placed in McGuffey's hands, and a moment later, with a mighty effort, Mr. Gibney pried off the lid of the crate. Captain Scraggs had his head inside the box a fifth of a second later.

"Sealed zinc box inside," he announced. "Get a can opener, Gib, my boy."

"Ginseng, for a thousand," mourned Mr. Gibney. "Scraggsy, you're five dollars of my money to the good. Ginseng always comes packed in air-tight boxes."

He produced a can opener from the cabin locker and fell to his work on a corner of the hermetically sealed box. As he drove in the point of the can opener, he paused, hammer in hand, and gazed solemnly at Scraggs and McGuffey.

"Gentlemen," (again McGuffey nodded approvingly) "do you know what a vacuum is?"

"I know," replied the imperturbable McGuffey. "A vacuum is an empty hole that ain't got nothin' in it."

"Correct," said Mr. Gibney. "My head is a vacuum. Me talkin' about ginseng root! Why, I must have water on the brain! Ginseng be doggoned! It's opium!"

Captain Scraggs was forced to grab the seat of his chair in order to keep himself from jumping up and clasping Mr. Gibney around the neck.

"Forty dollars a pound," he gasped. "Gib—Gib, my dear boy—you've made us wealthy—"

Quickly Mr. Gibney ran the can opener around the edges of one corner of the zinc box, inserted the claws of the hammer into the opening, and with a quick, melodramatic twist, bent back the angle thus formed.

Mr. Gibney was the first to get a peep inside.

"Great snakes!" he yelled, and fell back against the cabin wall. A hoarse scream of rage and horror broke from Captain Scraggs. In his eagerness he had driven his head so deep into the box that he came within an inch of kissing what the box contained—which happened to be nothing more nor less than a dead Chinaman! Mr. McGuffey, always slow and unimaginative, shouldered the skipper aside, and calmly surveyed the ghastly apparition.

"Twig the yellow beggar, will you, Gib?" said McGuffey; "one eye half open for all the world like he was winkin' at us an' enjoyin' th' joke."

Not a muscle twitched in McGuffey's Hibernian countenance. He scratched his head for a moment, as a sort of first aid to memory, then turned and handed Mr. Gibney ten dollars.

"You win, Gib. It's Oriental goods, sure enough."

"Robber!" shrieked Captain Scraggs, and flew at Mr. Gibney's throat. The sight reminded McGuffey of a terrier worrying a mastiff. Nevertheless, Mr. Gibney was still so unnerved at the discovery of the horrible contents of the box that, despite his gigantic proportions, he was well-nigh helpless.

"McGuffey, you swab," he yelled. "Pluck this maritime outlaw off my neck. He's tearin' my windpipe out by th' roots."

McGuffey choked Captain Scraggs until he reluctantly let go Mr. Gibney, whereupon all three fled from the cabin as from a pestilence, and gathered, an angry and disappointed group, out on deck.

"Opium!" jeered Captain Scraggs, with tears of rage in his voice. "Ginseng! You and your imagination, you swine, you! Get off my ship, you lout, or I'll murder you."

Mr. Gibney hung his head.

"Scraggsy—an' you, too, McGuffey—I got to admit that this here is one on Adelbert P. Gibney. I—I—"

"Oh, hear him," shrilled Captain Scraggs. "One on him! It's two on you, you bloody-handed ragpicker. I suppose that other case contains opium, too! If there ain't another dead corpse in No. 2 case I hope my teeth may drop overboard."

"Shut up!" bellowed Mr. Gibney, in a towering rage. "What howl have you got comin'? They're my Chinamen, ain't they? I paid for 'em like a man, didn't I? All right, then. I'll keep them two Chinamen. You two ain't out a cent yet, an' as for this five I wins off you, Scraggs, it's blood money; that's what it is, an' I hereby gives it back to you. Now, quit yer whinin', or by the tail o' the Great Sacred Bull, I'll lock you up all night in th' cabin along o' them two defunct Celestials."

Captain Scraggs "shut up" promptly, and contented himself with glowering at Mr. Gibney. The mate sat down on the hatch coaming, lit his pipe, and gave himself up to meditation for fully five minutes, at the end of which time McGuffey was aware that his imagination was about to come to the front once more.

"Well, gentlemen," (again McGuffey nodded approvingly) "I bet I get my twenty bucks back outer them two Chinks," he announced presently.

"How'll yer do it?" inquired McGuffey politely.

"How'll I do it? Easy as fallin' through an open hatch. I'm a-goin' t' keep them two stiffs in th' boxes until dark, an' then I'm a-goin' to take 'em out, bend a rope around their middle, drop 'em overboard an' anchor 'em there all night. I see th' lad we opens up in No. 1 case has had a beautiful job of embalmin' done on him, but if I let them soak all night, like a mackerel, they'll limber up an' look kinder fresh. Then first thing in th' mornin' I'll telephone th' coroner an' tell him I found two floaters out in th' bay an' for him to come an' get 'em. I been along the waterfront long enough t' know that th' lad that picks up a floater gets a reward o' ten dollars from th' city. You can bet that Adelbert P. Gibney breaks even on th' deal, all right."

"Gib, my dear boy," said Captain Scraggs admiringly. "I apologize for my actions of a few minutes ago. I was unstrung. You're still mate o' th' American steamer Maggie, an' as such, welcome to th' ship. All I ask is that you nail up your property, Gib, an' remove it from th' dinin' room table. I want to remind you, however, Gib, that as shipmates me an' McGuffey don't stand for you shoulderin' any loss on them two cases o'—Oriental goods. We was t' share th' gains, if any, an' likewise th' losses."

"That's right," said McGuffey, "fair an' square. No bellyachin' between shipmates. Me an' Scraggs each owns one-third o' them diseased Chinks, an' we each stands one-third o' th' loss, if any."

"But there won't be no loss," protested Mr. Gibney.

"Drayage charges, Gib, drayage charges. We give a man a dollar to tow 'em down t' th' ship."

"Forget it," answered Mr. Gibney magnanimously, "an' let's go over an' get a drink. I'm all shook up."

CHAPTER VIII.

Had either Mr. Gibney or McGuffey been watching Captain Scraggs after he had left them they would have been much puzzled to account for that worthy's actions. First he dodged around the block into Drumm street, and then ran down Drumm to California, where he climbed aboard a cable car and rode up into Chinatown. Arriving at Dupont street he alighted and walked up that interesting thoroughfare until he came to No. 714. He glanced at a sign over the door and was aware that he stood before the entrance to the offices of the Chinese Six Companies, so he climbed upstairs and inquired for Gin Seng, who presently made his appearance.

Gin Seng, a very nice, fat Chinaman, arrayed in a flowing silk gown, begged, in pidgin English, to know in what manner he could be of service.

"Me heap big captain, allee same ship," began Captain Scraggs. "On board ship two China boys have got." (Here Captain Scraggs winked knowingly.) "China boy no speak English—"

"That being the case," interposed Gin Seng, "I presume that you and I understand each other, so let's cut out the pidgin English. Do I understand that you are engaged in evading the immigration laws?"

"Exactly," Captain Scraggs managed to gasp, as soon as he could recover from his astonishment. "They showed me your name an' address, an' they won't leave th' ship, where I got 'em locked up in my cabin, until you come an' take 'em away. Couple o' relatives of yours, I should imagine."

Gin Seng smiled his bland Chinese smile. He had frequent dealings with ship masters engaged in the dangerous, though lucrative, trade of smug-

Announcement

To the Editor and Readers of The Independent:

Since I have announced myself as a candidate for the office of State Senator from this district a number of voters have made inquiry as to my position in regard to some matters of vital importance to the public at this time, and believing that they are entitled to an expression from me, I wish briefly to state a few views on the present situation of business and politics, and some of the principles that will guide me during my candidacy and which, should I be elected, I shall endeavor to bring about:

FIRST—Reduce taxes and assessments, legally to the very limit.

SECOND—Have more publicity in regard to where taxes actually ARE spent.

THIRD—Issue no more bonds without vote of the people.

FOURTH—Advocate an amendment to the Federal Constitution permitting us to tax those billions of tax-free bonds and warrants that are now escaping taxation, much to the detriment of the people who DO pay.

FIFTH—I am in favor of the reduction of passenger and freight rates.

SIXTH—As the agricultural interests of Iowa are paramount, they should have very careful consideration and be safeguarded by conservative legislation whenever needed. Believing, however, that the SPIRIT rather than the campaign promise is vital, I assure all voters of my deepest concern in the welfare of the business of the farm, and will vote with this uppermost in mind if elected to the Senate.

Candidate for Senator from the 37th District, comprising

COUNTY LEGION CONVENTION HERE JAN. 25

First Meeting of Good Fellowship Club Fine Success

Supt. Prall, Of Clarion School, Gives Fine Talk On "High Cost Of Education."

OVER SIXTY ARE PRESENT

The first meeting of the reorganized Good Fellowship club was held last week Friday evening, in the library basement, and was decidedly a success from every standpoint.

Over sixty of the local business men and citizens and farmers were in attendance, and a jolly good time was enjoyed by everybody present. Supt. Prall, of Clarion, was the speaker of the evening, and gave a most interesting address on the subject "The High Cost of Education." He pointed out, in his remarks, that the cost of education had greatly increased, but that the enrollment had also been greatly increased. He urged that the schools keep their experienced and capable teachers, and that any economy be practiced in other ways rather than the hiring of inexperienced and inefficient teachers, Supt. Prall's remarks were timely, full of facts and interesting data, and were of great benefit to all who have any interest in the future of our public schools.

Following his address, the eats were next on the program, sanwiches, pickles and coffee, followed by a general smoker and "good fellowship." To date between fifty and seventy-five members have joined and paid in their dollar a year dues. This money goes to pay the expenses of the speakers. The eats and cigars are served at cost. It is hoped to have a membership in the club of at least 200, and it appears now as if this mark was to be surpassed.

The next meeting will be in about two weeks, and Judge Fry has been engaged as the speaker.

Some time in the near future, National American Legion Commander Hanford McNider, of Mason City, will be the speaker, and plans are under way to make this meeting one of great proportions, to be held, probably, in the school auditorium, with a program and banquet, to invite the eneral public and make everything free except the banquet, which, we understand will be for club members only.

The Good Fellowship club means much to Belmond, and with the right leadership and some push will bring about in Belmond a change that will mean everything that is better and good to the community and citizens. Everybody is invited to join, every man in the town and country, and the more there are the better it will be. If you aren't a member, get in on the best club of its kind and be a booster.

SCHOOL NOTES

Friday afternoon at 2:30 the High School debating team will meet the team from Eagle Grove High School. This promises to be an exciting debate. The question is: Resolved, That the Phillipine Islands should be Given Their Independence Within Five Years.

We are anxious to make debating one of the important actcivities of our high school. To do this, we must have the support of the public, as we have had it in athletics and declamatory work. Come out and hear our team debate. Admission 25c.

Friday night January 20, will occur the Dows-Belmond basket ball game. Both boys and girls will play at this time, and a fast game is assured.

You remember last year luck broke against our boys and they lost to Dows by two points in the last minute of play.

This year our boys are working hard and are determined that the game will end in Belmond's favor. Timmerman of Sheffielf has been secured for referee and works the floor well.

Come out to the game and BOOST for B. H. S.

Semester examinations and Normal Training examinations are being given this week. Regular classes on Friday of this week, at which time every student is expected to be present.

Community night is becoming more popular every week. Better come out and enjoy the fun for the next few weeks. A small fee of 50 cents is charged to pay for the new volley ball and new net. This amount should be paid to Adolph Skovlin, Treas. this week if possible. All adults are eligible but must wear proper shoes.

The date for the triangular declamatory contest with Garner and Hampton has not been definitely set, but will probably be February 8.

The last number of the lecture course will be held February 24. At this time Ratto, the impersonator, will be the entertainer. He comes recommended to us as one of the best on the platform in his particular type of work.

Last Friday night our boys played a fast brand of basket ball against the Hampton Quintet. The first half our boys were handicapped because of the large floor, the half ending 14 to 8 in Hampton's favor. In the last half our boys opened up and in ten minutes tied the score 15 all. For five minutes neither team scored. At this period Johnson caged an easy shot in front of the basket. At this moment the game was very exciting. With four minutes to play, Hampton at this time was 2 points behind Belmond, 15-17. Hampton scored one free throw and a basket simultaneously, taking the lead by one point. In the next two minutes Hampton scored two baskets, for a total score of 22, while Belmond scored one free throw. for a total of 18 points. We play Dows Friday night here.

The Belmond Girls Basket ball team was defeated at Hampton by a score of 25 to 17. Hampton's floor is both longer and wider than the home floor. The girls exhibited the poorest ball they have played this year. They seemed unable to get into the game, and played with very little team work. Defeat was due to a large extent to overconfidence and too hasty throwing when the ball was in Belmond's possession. The Hampton girls play easy ball, and while this is their first game this year, they are the best team the local girls have met so far. However, the girls are determined to have the score in their favor in the return game, and are woring with that in view.

Meservey had a fierce fight last week Thursday on the erection of the new school building. The proposition was for the building of a new $60,000 building. A total of 215 votes were cast, and the election went to the negative side by a majority of but seven votes. A petition was immediately circulated and signed to call another election for the 16th of February, and notice to that effect is published this week in the Independent.

Big Time Is Being Planned For Next Wednesday

The county convention of the American Legion will be held next week and will be the main feature o fthe week's affairs. It will take place on Wednesday, the 25th. Two meetings will be held, one in the afternoon at 2:30 for members of the Legion only, and a mass meeting in the evening at 7:15, at the high school auditorium. The public is earnestly urged to attend the mass meeting and learn what the Legion is and has done, as well as what it plans to do in the future. After the evening meeing there will be a dance at the opera house, towhich the public is invited.

The Women's Auxiliary will serve a supper that evening in the parlors of the Congregational church.

There will be officers from the state, district and county present, and some excellent addresses will be given. Come out and see what your local post, as well as the Legion in general, has done, is doing, and plans to do.

HAPPENED IN NOVEMBER

Solazza charges that on the night of Nov. 3, 1921, Rierson violently assulted him, without any reason, and that the nightwatch beat him on the head with his fists, not to say malicious and painful, and he wants one thousand dollars for his injuries, bodily and otherwise.

DOES IT PAY?

There is one thing that we as American Citizens prize as one of the greatest virtues of our national, civil and local life, and that is Honor.

Without honor to our country, we are not fit to partake of the benefits and advantages that this great nation offers us. We need only to look about us on the other nations of the world and we can thank God that we are American citizens. True we have conditions confronting us that are difficult to foresee and solve, which are trying the metal and endurance of the greatest minds of this country, but they will be solved for the good of humanity. This is a time that calls for steady nerves, a steadfast and upright purpose and a benevolent spirit. There is no doubt that we are on the threshold of a brighter future, not only in our own country but in the whole world.

No less important is our civic honor, honor in our relation to our government in all its branches. Laws are based on justice, or quoting a legal phrase, "the basic principle of all law is justice." We have laws in our state and nation, altho their basic principle is correct and for the best interests of society in general that have been perverted and mis-applied to serve the purpose of the unscrupulous, whose honor and sense of justice is lacking to such a degree that they do not respect the rights and privileges that belong to their fellow men and society as a whole.

In the narrower sense, in our relation to our fellow men, is it not a moral obligation as old as the world itself, that we owe our neighbor honor. We have the golden rule, take this out of the life of a person and you have little else left in the make up of his character that is worth while. Would you trust a person whose character lacked this great principle? Or after giving people who have trusted you, the right to say that you betrayed them in that trust, would you not feel that you were apart from men whose honor kept them from any taint or shame?

This is a trying time for most people, for the farmer who depends upon the soil for his maintenances and the world for the market. It is no easier for the business man whose losses, sometimes occurring in a single day, wreck the savings and labor of years.

What is the solution? It is to act the part of a weakling and so as a few are doing at this time—seek relief in the Bankruptcy courts? Most assuredly not. There is only one honorable course to take and that is to grit your teeth and make a determed stand to weather the storm. Stand by those who have stood by you.

A man's whole future may rest on what action he takes at this time. No thinking man whether a farmer or business man, will risk his future welfare and position in society that he is entitled to, by taking refuge in bankruptcy.

A crisis such as we are undergoing is a test of real manhood, not only on the part of the debtor, but also of the creditor. We must all stand together, each doing his part squarely and with patience. Can we afford to do otherwise—does it pay?—Contributed.

Membership of Wright Co. Farm Bureau Doubles

Wright County Farmers' Organization Makes Fine Record During The Year.

MUCH INTEREST IS SHOWN

The Wright County Farm Bureau under the leadership of County Agent Ralph M. Edwards has made a substantial growth during the past year and some real constructive work has been accomplished by the organization. Mr. Edwards came to Wright county just two years ago and since that time has worked unceasingly to build up an organization which has meant real service to the farmers of Wright county. The membership in the organization, when he came to the county, was about six hundred, but since that time interest has grown in the activities in the farm bureau and the membership has increased to about thirteen hundred. Mr. Edwards is a conscientious worker, a man who devotes his entire time and energy to the interests of the organization which he is serving, a man who is willing to work day and night when is becomes necessary to protect and further interests of the farmers. He has made an eviable record and is considered one of the best county agents in Iowa.

Judging from the schedule of work shown in his annual report the county agent must have been a very busy man during the past year. His report shows that he spent 239 days outside the office, which would indicate that he did not sit in the office only to draw his salary, but spent his time in conducting demonstrations, holding organization meetings, social and business meetings. No mention was made of how many of these meetings were night meetings but if we are to judge by the reports of our city night watch it was not an uncommon thing to see the county agent pulling in at night anywhere from 12:30 to 1:30 A. M. We presume that if the county agent were asked what his daily schedule was he would probably say that for some days it ran about as follows: eight hours in the forenoon, eight hours in the afternoon and eight hours at at night. The county agent has never been the one to complain about the night work because he seems to take pleasure in serving the farmers of his organization and seems willing and anxious to work both day and night to see that the farmers' interests are properly cared for. It can be truly said that the county agent has been on the job, that he has been very active in the discharge of his duties, that he has earned his money if ever a Wright county agent did.—Monitor.

TO OUR FRIENDS:

Last week the Independent sent out a number of letters, giving statement of the addresse's account, and asking the recipients to please verify the account. The object was to get our books straight, as they were pretty badly "balled up." Some exceptions have been taken to the letters the impression being that they were sent for collection. Such was decidedly NOT the case, the big idea was to find out whether or not the account given was correct and we ask those who received these letters to accept in the manner meant and to help us get our books into shape so that in the future such mistakes will not occur.

CLIPPINGS

Antone Olson, Thor painter, fell from the second story of the Broadway Cafe building through a skylight and lit on a chair in the dining room. His back was broken and he was otherwise bruised. He was a painter by trade and in very poor circumstances. He was staying at the Broadway Cafe and Mr. Pixler gave him the job of painting the upstairs room. He was painting in the hall up stairs and placed his ladder over this skylight. The ladder was not moved in his fall. The accident occured about ten o'clock Friday morning. According to the last reports from the O'Toole-Christensen hospital, where he is being cared for, he is doing nicely.—Eagle.

We are always greived to see old friends disagree, but unless Frank Zeiger repairs the side curtains in Chas. Frisbee's "buzz buggy" we fear that blood will be shed. Zeiger and Frisbee went rabbit hunting one day the fore part of the week. Frank of course, had to take his new dog along. They were motoring along both cylinders hitting, when up jumped a rabbit, and Frank's dog lunged through the glass in one of Frisbee's auto curtains, and for all anyone knows, both the dog and the rabbit are still running. Or it may be that our guess that the critter would develop rabies has come true. Leastwise, the dog is gone.—Leader.

AND AGAIN, WHY?

An exchange says that if a man went out with his head dolled up in a three cornered dingus with kinks and curlicues and a cat's tail and a young onion on the other and two stripes of red flannel hanging down the rear, he would be arrested and slammed in the booby hatch. But a woman can do it and get away with it. Why?

To which another exchange replies thusly.

Well, we don't know if a woman went out with a big wad of tobacco in her mouth and stood around on the corner and told stries and squirted tobacco juice all over everything and swore every other breath, used foul language and swaggered around she would soon be arrested. But a man can do it and get away with it. Why?

And in answer to both queries we might give a reply by stating that the offspring of both the above people are allowed to do all that what is quote above plus the evils of hootch, cigrets, night riding, fast auto driving; all night orgies and several other exciting experiences. But the boys and girls can and do get away with it—and why?—Times.

The Rowan basket ball teams played Hansell teams Saturday afternoon January 14th. The Rowan boys were beaten. The girls game was a hard fought game from start to finish. At the end of the first half the score stood 15 to 9 in Hansell's favor. The Rowan girls came back at Hansell with hard playing the last half and the game ended with the score of 23 to 22 in Rowan's favor. This score is on to be proud of for two of the Rowan's usual players were unable to play. This game is the first one that Hansell has lost in three years of playing. The Rowan girls have played thirteen games and only lost three which were played on opponents floors. Their next game is Friday night January 20 with Clarion. Come and give Rowan some "pep." It was the good crowd which helped Rowan on Saturday afternoon. Remember there are only three or four more games left this season to be played at Rowan so don't lose these few chances this year. "When you're up against Rowan you're upside down." Come on lets go.

LOYALTY OF WOMEN OF SOUTH SHOWN IN "HELD BY THE ENEMY" JAN. 21, 1922

The loyalty and love of the women of the south during the American Civil War is admirably depicted in a new striking Paramount picturization of William Gillette's play, "Held by the enemy," which will be shown at the Star theatre on the above date.

The locale of the story is a Southern town newly captured by Northern troops. A young widow, who believes that her husband has been slain in battle, fall in love with a young Northern Colonel, who protects her from the loters. She is about to accept his proposal of marriage, when her husband, appears on spy duty. He is arrested by the Colonel, and throughout the remainder of the story, the dutiful litle wife makes many sacrifices in her atempt to save her husband from death. The culminating situation is one of the most dramatic ever presented on the silversheet.

Old Settler Passes Away At Home Of Son Friday.

Amanda Jane Wingnard was born in Carol Co., Indiana, Feb. 22nd 1854 and died in Blain Township January 13th 1922 at the age of 67 years, 10 months and 22days. She was the daughter of Martin and Eva Wingnard of Indiana. She was married to George W. Cupp in 1875. To this union were born three children, John L., who died several years ago, Harry, with whom she was living at the time of her death and Cora Noonan, who passed beyond a few years before her mother.

The greater part of her life was spent in and around Blain Township. She moved with her husband from Indiana in 1880 to Grundy Co., Iowa, and in 1891 they moved to Wright Co., where she resided until her death.

Her husband, George Cupp died in June 1899. She was the only one left of a large family.

Mrs. Cupp had been in poor health for the past year but she was releived of all suffering last Friday when the Finger of God touched her and she fell asleep. She was a woman of a quiet disposition and has made many friends in this vicinity during her life.

The news of her death came as a shock to all and the sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved family. The remains were laid to rest Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in the Graceland Cemetery after a short sevice held at the home of her son, Harry Cupp. Rev. W. H. Nye officiated at this service. ALIMONY COMES HIGH

Hampton Chronicle: W. H. McDowell, for a number of years in the grain and coal business at Alexander, is one of the unlucky fellows who was hit with the "high cost of living." His wife sued him for a divorce a few years ago, and the court granted her request, and also stuck her aforesaid husband for $125 a month for alimony, which Mr. McDowell was ordered to pay to his wife. The two children, a son and a daughter were also given to the mother.

Mrs. McDowell is a daughter of a former mayor of Iowa Falls, and is now residing with her father at that place, with her two children. Recently McDowell, who resides at Clarion, under the squeeze of the financial crash went before the court and asked that the order giving his former wife $125 a month be cancelled, putting up the claim that he was unable to pay it, and that his wife's father could well afford to care for her. He also asked the custody of his little son.

After hearing the evidence Judge Wright reduced the allowance to $50 a month, but refused to take the boy from his mother. The father is allowed to see the children each month, and to have the boy during the month of July.

HARTFELDER—NISSEN.

On Thursday, January 12, 1922 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Nissen of Meservey, Ia., occured the marriage of their only daughter Erma and Mr. Wm. Hartfelder also of Meservey.

The bride and groom took their places under a beautifully decorated arch to the strains of the wedding march rendered by Mrs. Louis Foss. The Rev. Schlesselman read the service.

The bride was most beautiful in her gown of white satin and wore a corsage boquet of Russell roses. She was unattended.

At noontime a delicious four course dinner was served. The table decorations were in pink and white and the same color scheme was carried out in the dinner. The center of the table was occupied with a large boquet of narcisses and Russel roses.

The bride is well known in her home town and is considered a very good friend by all She was graduated from the public school and from the H. S. of Meservey after which time she became employed in serving the public as book-keeper in the Farmer's Savings Bank and in the Klemme lumber office. She also was a very efficient and capable saleslady in the Fischer store. She filled all of her positions with much earnestness and accomplished only the best results possible.

She is very active in the affairs of the Evangelical church of which she is a member.

The groom is a well known and successful farmer and he and his bride will reside on the Hartfelder farm southeast of Meservey. Their many friends wish them much happiness and success in all the years to come.

MESERVEY SCHOOL ELECTION.

Proposition To Erect New And Better Building Loses By Majority Of 8 Votes.

The Bond election for a new school house failed by 8 votes and the election passed off rather quiet, there was very little personal feeling such as there usually is at elections where a large majority of the voters are called out.

Those interested in having the vote carry feel the the voters did not understand the conditions in which our school is situated and another petition has been circulated. The second election will be called for a date around the 17th of February. We also understand that the school board expects to have the bids for the new building opened the day before so at the next election the voter will know all about the proposed buiding, its demensions, and costs; this appears to be a new idea to most of us but we can see no harm in it, and rather favor the idea.

Some take the stand our State approval was taken away at the suggestion of people here which is not the case; special efforts have been made by the School Board and Secretary for the past six months and they have letters on file to show that these are the facts. We believe however that an injustice is being done the school by the state department in approving the school only to Jan. 1, 1922, nothing was known at the beginning of the school year that such would be the case. No doubt an effort will be made to have the school approved to the end of the school year.

There have been several mtings in the interests of the new building and so far as we have learned all those that attended these meetings agree that a new building is our only solution. Those that are most bitterly opposed to the new school are those that have not taken the trouble to come to these meetings or look up other facts.

We know of one farmer in particular who has secured tax receipts from four counties and had made up his mind to help defeat the proposition, but before the election time he was just as much in favor of having the issue carry; he changed his mind after he looked up the facts.

The interest on the bonds will put an extra tax on the farm land of 18 cents per acre per year. Under a proposed bond arrangement the interest would be all that would have to be paid for sixteen years; for the next four years the tax would be 46 cents per acre, and 19 cents per acre for the next 20 years, at the end of this time the debt would be paid. The proposed building is nearly fire proof and shoud be good for much over fifty years. Our present building has stood 28 years, so there should not be any hurry to pay off 5 per cent money where no one is able to borrow at such low rate now on any security we have to offer. In normal times the land owner is able to obtain this offer, so it is just as well to let some of those that follow pay part of the debt, insurance will protect it in case of fire or storm.

We are told that we do not need a new school that the building does not impart any knowledge, that Abraham Lincoln did not have any such facilities as our new building will provide. In the first place we do not have any Lincoln's at this time, things have changed, but education is necessary. Where Bolshevism and anarchy are strong they pay very little attention to education but Russia is now paying the price of the school they should have provided years ago.

The Meservey district receives $1000.00 per year from outside pupils in tuition; if the new building is not voted they would be obliged to pay the tuition of any high school pupil that wishes to attend any other approved school in the state. The amount so paid cannot exceed $12.00 per month under the present law. There are now around forty such pupils enrolled; suppose that only ten of them would go away this would make around $1000.00 to be paid out by the district. Many estimate that it would be much more than this. These two items and the state aid would amount to $2750.00. The bond issue interest is $3000.00, not to say anything about the repairs to the old building, and fire escapes that the State Fire Marshal has demanded for some time. These items are steady drain on the district In time the new building would have to be built anyway, so why spend more on the old building?

We would suggest that our voters look up all the facts carefully before making any decision; you cannot vote intelligently or talk with authority unless you know the facts.

A man became lost in the woods during a big storm. He sought shelter in a hollow log. The rain caused the log to swell and the man was unable to move and realized that he must starve. All the mean things that he had done during his life came back to him. One of the things he thought of was that he had never started a bank account and that as a result his family would suffer. After this he felt so small that he was able to get out of the log without difficulty. Moral—Start a bank account now.

KEEP IOWA FIRST IN HEALTH

"Keep Iowa First in Health" is the slogan of a campaign for this extension of the teaching of health habits to all the schools of the state which is being planned by Miss Theresa Dansdill of the Iowa Tuberculosis Association, director of health education and the Modern Health Crusade.

Miss Dansdill has just compiled figures which show that each year since 1918 the number of school children practicing the "health chore" has steadily increased, the figures for the past three years being as follows: 221,000; 234,000; and 321,405. "Lets make it 400,000 before June" says Miss Dansdill. "This will be three fourths of the 547,000 school children enrolled."

"We couldn't say 'Make Iowa First," Miss Dansdill explained, "because Iowa has been first in health education. Two years ago the Iowa Tuberculosis Association became the custodian of the silver cup awarded by some anonymous New Yorker because our schools had the largest percentage of knights banneret, which means children that made a practically perfect score in observing the eleven health rules. Last year the cup passed into Idaho, whose percentage was greater, although the total school population of that state is less than the number of knights banneret in Iowa. There were year before last in Iowa 29,242 knights banneret, and last year 43,647. Let's make it 75,000. And lets get the cup back.

"For the past two years Iowa schools have won more than half of all the first and second prize banners and pennants awarder by the National Tuberculosis Association thruout the entire country for schools whose children practiced health habits. And for the past three years this state has lead the nation in the highest actual number of children enrolled in the Modern Health Crusade, and has been first in three out of five national health tournaments."

The Crusade has a system of teaching health habits as incorporated in the Citizenship Manual issued this year by the Department of Public Instruction and compiled by the special Committee of leading educators appointed by Supt. McClenahan in accordance with the law passed by the 38th General Assembly.

In recognition of Iowa's leadership in the teaching of health habits in the public schools, State Superintendent P. E McClenahan has been appointed chairman of a national advisory committee on health education by the National Tuberculosis Association, whose headquarters are at New York.

HERE'S ONE WOMAN'S RE-ACTIONS TO SERVICE ON JURY IN COURT

How one woman reacted after service for the first time on a jury in the district court is contained in this interesting desertation upon the onerous duties only lately devolved upon woman-kind.

Dear Globe-Gazette:—You are to be congratulated upon the explanation given to those who may be called upon to serve on the jury. We regret that the article was not written and published earlier; it would have saved us many sleepless nights and agonizing days for fear we might not do just the right thing, or be jailed for "contempt of court." After working a life time for the privilege of suffrage, it "sure was a grand and glorious feeling" to, at last in our declining year, have the blessed privilee of sitting, not only with but as one of the "twelve good men and true" during the last term of court. If you will premit us, we will be pleased to add a few suggestions, that may materially aid our sisters in discharging their duty to mankind.

Firstly—If you are short in stature, ask the Judge to request that the sheriff request the Clerk to insist that the bailiff order the janitor to procure a foot stool for you. (The whole court is very obliging, and won't mind a little request like that. Also be sure the court reporter has said request in his notes.) Secondly—Take along some crocheting, some tating or family mending—the senery gets tiresome. (During some of the grave deliberation, one could easily do the family ironing, if the county would not object to the electricity consumed.) Thirdly—Be ready to answer any questions known to the civilized world in the "challenge." For example: "Where do you live?" "How old are you?" (So far this question has only been asked the men, this is not fair to the women.) "What does your husband do?" "What did you have for breakfast?" Did you have cream or milk in your coffee?" After about seventeen similar to the above questions, you will be asked as a final proof of your alegibility, "Will you if chosen on this jury, to the best of your ability give a fair unprejudiced verdict," or words to that effect? (After this severe grilling, one feels as if he or she had gone through another marriage ceremony.) And the last question seems superflous to women at least, after they have sworn "so help me God" before being admitted to the seat in the jury, they are not likely to "lie" at least during the next few minutes. The matter seems, as the lawyer keeps saying all through the case "irrelevant," etc., to say the lease Oh, there's one thing we nearly forgot, "Do you know either of the lawyers on either side of the case, or are you acquainted with either the plaintiff or the defendant or any of their relatives back to the days of Noah? (Be careful about getting the "plaintiff" and the "defendant" located early in the trial—it sure helps a lot.

There is one thing that sure confuses the woman juror as the trial proceeds; namely, that both "sides" insist an entirely opposite conception of the matter in hand. For instance the plaintiff may say: "The defendant and myself talked this matter over on the 12 of last January when we were out at East Park, admiring the buffaloes.". Then the defendant says, "I never in my life went with the plaintiff on the 12th day of January to East Park or any other day. I never saw or had any desire to see those blamed buffaloes." "This last after being "short handed" by the ever obliging court reporter is struck out because of the plaintiff's attorney on some perfectly good ground, and the trial proceeds merrily on. Now what under the canopy of heven, is a Christian woman going to do in such a plight. To put it mildly, somebody has told a falsehood. Oh well when you get into the jury room, let your sixth sense be your guide, aided by the explanations and instructions set forth by the judge—he has been on the bench long enough to tell which is the greatest truth teller.

P. S.—Besides getting three dollars a day while serving on the jury, while on a case, the jury is fed at the expense of the county, also there is ten cents added to the sum total at the end of the term of court, we don't know why, some one said to pay car fare the first day to the court house. One gets enough rest after that walk to Court. That dime is beyond us. "Ask Ray Seney," or some one else. Yours in the service for justice—

CARRIE V. A. LUCAS

CURING GOOSE MEAT.

In the vicinity of Kellog, Jasper county, are a number of farmers of German decent. The have a custom of "curing" goose meat the same as hams and side meat are put up. The geese are full dressed and salted down whole with a sprinkling of saltpeter. After thoroughly pickled in brine they are suspended in the smoke house and given a thorough smoking just the same as hams. They are then put in paper bags and hung up like any cured meat. The meat is said to be fine for summer use.—Waukon Republican & Stanard.

Iowa is now shipping an average of four carloads of corn a week to the Near East, C. D. Reed, stated This is better average than that of any other state in the mid-west, relief officials declare. Practically all of the corn has been contributed by the farmers of the state direct to the Near East Reief movement and has been transported to the seaboard by railroads free of charge.

State head of farm organizations are making plans for a final effort to complete Iowa's quota of 309 carloads by the latter part of February as the free transportation privilege from the railroads expires on that date.

More than a dozen larger cities in the state will hold financial campaigns this month for the Near East Relief, State Director C. A. Montanus has announced. Des Moines is now conducting a drive for $20,000 for the purchase of food and clothing for the famine suffers.

MUHLENBRUCH--WESTABY

The marriage of Willie C. Westaby and Miss Etta Muhlenbruch, two well known young people of this place, took place last Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Muhlenbruch of Alexander. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. D. Mohr, pastor of the Congregational church, and only a few immediate relatives were present to witness the event. The ceremony took place at 6:00 o'clock and a sumpuous wedding dinner followed.

The bride was gowned in a dress of white peblett and wore a corsage bouquet of sweet peas. Miss Mary Westaby, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, and Arthur Muhlenbruch, brother of the bride was groomsman.

The wedding march was played by Misses Ruth and Alma Johnson, and Esther and Elsie Muhlenbruch, sisters of the bride were flower girls. The color scheme was green and white.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Westaby, well known residents of Alexander.

Both the bride and the groom have resided in the vicinity of Alexander practically their entire life and are well known and popular young people of this community. Both attended the Alexander Consolidated schools and have been active in the affairs of the younger people.

Mr. and Mrs. Westaby left that evening for a wedding trip to Madison, South Dak., and other points, and on their return home they expect to commence housekeeping on a farm near Alexander.

Congregational Church

We hear so many complaints about the poor attendance of Sunday evening services, but we have no reasons to complain, and we never shall if you have been coming out and will keep on coming. But there are still many people around here who never go to church, and we invite them especially. You need not come to our church unless you feel like it. Go to any church in our community and we asure you that you will not regret it. There are also some children who do not go to Sunday school. What about them? We feel that God holds their parents responsible for their spiritual welfare. Let us make this community a "Church going community." Do not say "What good will it do me?" but ask yourself the question "What harm will it do me?"

School Notes.

The fourth and last number of the high school lyceum course will be given next Friday night, Jan.,20. It will be a variety number principally music, given by the Columbus Entertainers. Better be safe than sorry, therefore attend this number

There was a double header basket ball game on our floor last Friday night. Latimer high school teams and Alexander highschool teams. Every minute of the game was full of interest and intense excitment. Very few fouls were called. The games were exceptionally free from roughness and "dirty work." The Latimer youngsters are mighty fine people. Alexander won both games.

"Here's my fifteen cents for admission, no one was at the door when I came in." Thus spoke a little youngster—a boy and a perfect gentleman too, after the games were over last Friday night, as he handed the doorkeeper his dime and nickle. A reels, two educational and one comic.

Our encyclopedia fund is slowly growing. It is at present about sixty dollars. We hope to increase it to about $150.00. This is onother undertaking on the part of our pupils by giving various programs. We had hoped to realize a profit on our lyceum course this year in order to add to the fund, but instead there will be a deficit amounting to about mighty little thing to do you say. You're mistaken it probably will be one of the most eventful things in the boys whole career although the doesn't realize it. He's getting started right.

Our first "movie" was well attended. So far we have heard no well founded adverse criticism. Remember they are given each Tuesday night. As the school children bought the machine and equipment, they are admitted free. Others will be charged just a mere trifle— just enough for running expenses and possible breakage. There are three five dollars for each signer.

Pupils in English will criticize the above paragraph, saying it contains two subjects. Well you're right. We sacrificed English in order to break the news as gently as we know how to the lyceum course signers.

Our school term is half over. The progress of the pupils as a whole has been very satisfactory to the teachers in charge. Last Thursday and Friday were given over to examinations. We will strive to do even better work during the second semester. One of our aims is to reduce the number in the anvil chorus whose favorite refrain is "I never had a chance."

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is the skipper, Neils Halversen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII. — Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

gling Chinese into the United States, and while he had not received advice of this particular shipment, he decided to go with Captain Scraggs to Jackson street bulkhead and see if he could not be of some use to his countrymen.

As Captain Scraggs and his Chinese companion approached the wharf the skipper glanced warily about. He had small fear that either Gibney or McGuffey would show up for an hour, for he knew that Mr. Gibney had money in his possession. However, he decided to take no chances, and scouted the vicinity thoroughly before venturing aboard the Maggie. These actions served but to increase the respect of Gin Seng for the master of the Maggie and confirmed him in his belief that the Maggie was a smuggler.

Captain Scraggs took his visitor inside the little cabin, carefully locked and bolted the door, lifted the zinc flap back from the top of the crate of "Oriental goods" and displayed the face of the dead Chinaman. Also he pointed to the Chinese characters on the wooden lid of the crate.

"What does these hen scratches mean?" demanded Scraggs.

"This man is named Ah Ghow and he belongs to the Hop Sing tong."

"How about his pal here?"

"That man is evidently Ng Chong Yip. He is also a Hop Sing man."

Captain Scraggs wrote it down. "All right," he said cheerily; "much obliged. Now, what I want to know is what the Hop Sing tong means by shipping the departed brethren by freight? They go to work an' fix 'em up nice so's they'll keep, packs 'em away in a zinc coffin, inside a nice plain wood box, labels 'em 'Oriental goods,' an' consigns 'em to the Gin Seng company, 714 Dupont street, San Francisco. Now, why are these two countrymen o' yours shipped by freight —where, by the way, they goes astray, for some reason that I don't know nothin' about, an' I buys 'em up at a old horse sale?"

Gin Seng shrugged his shoulders and replied that he didn't understand.

"You lie," snarled Captain Scraggs. "You savey all right, you fat old idol, you! It's because if the railroad company knew these two boxes contained dead corpses they'd a-soaked the relatives, which is you, one full fare each from wherever these two dead ones comes from, just the same as though they was alive an' well. But you has 'em shipped by freight, an' aims to spend a dollar an' thirty cents each on 'em, by markin' 'em 'Oriental goods.' Helluva way to treat a relation. Now, looky here, you bloody heathen. It'll cost you just five hundred dollars to recover these two stiffs, an' close my mouth. If you don't come through I'll make a belch t' th' newspapers an' they'll keel haul an' skulldrag th' Chinese Six Companies an' the Hop Sing tong through the courts for evadin' th' laws o' th' interstate commerce commission, an' make 'em look like monkeys generally. An' then th' police'll get wind of it. Savey, policee-man, you fat old murderer? Th' price I'm askin' is cheap, Charley. How do I know but what these two poor boys has been murdered in cold blood? There's somethin' rotten in Denmark, my bully boy, an' you'll save time an' trouble an' money by diggin' up five hundred dollars."

Gin Seng said he would go back to Chinatown and consult with his company. For reasons of his own he was badly frightened.

Scarce had he departed before the watchful eye of Captain Scraggs observed Mr. Gibney and McGuffey in the offing, a block away. When they came aboard they found Captain Scraggs on top of the house, seated on an upturned fire bucket, smoking pensively and gazing across the bay with an assumption of lamblike innocence on his fox face.

He soon departed, but Mr. Gibney was suspicious. "He's got his lines fast somewhere—you can bank on that," was his comment. "While we was away he rigged up some kind of a deal, Bart. It stands to reason it was a mighty profitable deal, too. My imagination may be a bit off the course at times, Bart, but in general, if there's a dead whale floatin' around the ship I can smell it."

"What do you make out o' that fat Chinaman cruisin' down the bulkhead in an express wagon an' another Chinaman settin' up on the bridge with him?" McGuffey demanded. "Seems to me they're comin', bows on, for the Maggie."

"They tell me to deduct somethin', Bart. Wait a minute till we see if they're comin' aboard. If they are—"

"They're goin' to make a landin', Gib."

"—then I deduct that this body-snatchin' Scraggs—"

"They're boardin' us, Gib."

"—has arranged with yon fat Chinaman to relieve us o' the unwelcome presence of his defunct friends. He's gone an' hunted up the relatives an' made 'em come across—that's what he's done. The dirty, low, schemin' granddaddy of all the foxes in Christendom! I'll fish around an' see what figger Scraggs charged him," and Mr. Gibney stepped to the rail to meet Gin Seng, for it was indeed he.

"Sow-see, sow-see, hun-gay," Mr. Gibney saluted the Chinaman in a facetious attempt to talk the latter's language. "Hello, there, John Chinaman. How's your liver? Captain he alle same get tired; he no waitee. Wha's mallah, John. Too long time you no come. You heap lazy all time."

Gin Seng smiled his bland, inscrutable Chinese smile. "You ketchum two China boy in box?" he queried.

"We have," boomed McGuffey, "an' beautiful specimens they be."

"No money, no China boy," Gibney added firmly.

"Money have got. Too muchee money you wantee. No can do. Me pay two hundred dollah. Five hundred dollah heap muchee. No have got."

"Nothin' doin', John. Five hundred dollars an' not a penny less. Put up the dough or beat it."

Gin Seng expostulated, lied, evaded, and all but wept, but Mr. Gibney was obdurate and eventually the Chinaman paid over the money and departed with the remains of his countrymen. "I knew he'd come through, Bart," Mr. Gibney declared. "They got to ship them stiffs to China to rest alongside their ancestors or be in Dutch with the sperrits o' the departed forever after."

"Do we have to split this swag with that dirty Scraggs?" McGuffey wanted to know. "Seein' as how he tried to give us the double cross—"

"We'll fix Scraggsy—all ship-shape an' legal so's he won't have no come-back."

They had not long to wait. Upon his arrival at Gin Seng's place of business Captain Scraggs had been informed that Gin Seng had gone out twenty minutes before, and further inquiry revealed that he had departed in an express wagon. Consumed with misgivings of disaster, Scraggs returned to the Maggie as fast as the cable car and his legs could carry him. In the cabin he found Mr. Gibney and McGuffey playing cribbage. They laid down their hands as Scraggs entered.

Mr. Gibney began at once: "To show you what a funny world this is, while me an' Bart's settin' on deck a-waitin' for you to come back, along breezes a fat old Chinaman in an express wagon an' offers to buy them two cases of Oriental goods. He makes me an' Mac what we considers a fair offer. Lemme see, now," he continued, and got out a stub of lead pencil with which he commenced figuring on the white oilcloth table cover. "We paid twenty dollars for them two derelicts an' a dollar towage. That's twenty-one dollars, an' a third o' twenty-one is seven, an' seven dollars from twenty-five leaves eighteen dollars comin' to you. Here's your eighteen dollars. Scraggsy, you lucky old vagabond—all clear profit on a neat day's work, no expense, no investment, no back-breakin' interest charges or overhead, an' sold out at your own figger."

Captain Scraggs' face was a study in conflicting emotions as he raked in the eighteen dollars. "Thanks, Gib," he said frigidly.

"Me an' Gib's goin' ashore for lunch at the Marigold cafe," McGuffey announced presently, in order to break the horrible silence that followed Scraggsy's crushing defeat. "I'm willin' to spend some o' my profits on the deal an' blow you to a lunch with a small bottle o' Dago Red thrown in. How about it, Scraggs?"

"I'm on." Scraggs sought to throw off his gloom and appear sprightly. "What'd you peddle them two cadavers for, Gib?"

Mr. Gibney grinned broadly, but did not answer. In effect, his grin informed Scraggs that that was none of the latter's business—and Scraggs assimilated the hint. "Well, at any rate, Gib, whatever you soaked him, it was a mighty good sale an' I congratulate you. I think mebbe I might ha' done a little better myself, but then it ain't every day a feller can turn an eighteen-dollar trick on a corpse."

"Comin' to lunch with us?" McGuffey demanded.

"Sure. Wait a minute till I run forward an' see if the lines is all fast."

He stepped out of the cabin and presently Gibney and McGuffey were conscious of a rapid succession of thuds on the deck. Gibney winked at McGuffey.

"Nother new hat gone to h—l," murmured McGuffey.

CHAPTER IX.

Even after allowing for the expenditures on the engine weighing heavily on Captain Scraggs, that individual continued morose and more than ever inclined to be sarcastic. Mr. Gibney commented on the fact to Mr. McGuffey.

"He's troubled financially, Gib."

"Well, you know who troubled him, don't you, Bart?"

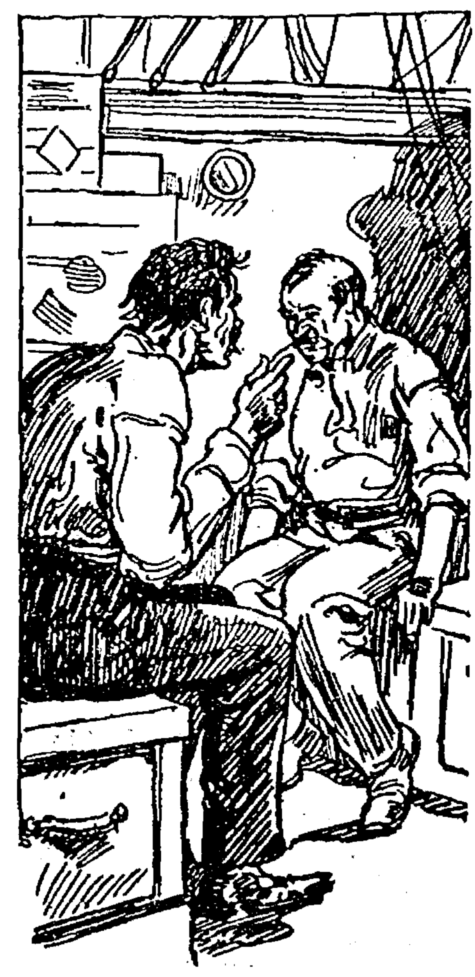
"I mean about the cost o' them repairs in the engine room. Unless he can come through in thirty days with the balance he owes, the boiler people are goin' to libel the Maggie to protect their claim."

Mr. Gibney arched his bushy eyebrows. "How do you know?" he demanded.

"He was a-tellin' me," Mr. McGuffey admitted weakly.

"Well, he wasn't a-tellin' me." Mr. Gibney's tones were ominous; he glared at his friend suspiciously as from the Maggie's cabin issued forth Scraggsy's voice raised in song.

"Hello! The old boy's thermometer's gone up, Bart. Listen at him. 'Ever o' thee he's fondly dreamin'.' Somethin's busted the spell an' I'll bet a cooky it was ready cash." He menaced Mr. McGuffey with a rigid index finger. "Bart," he demanded, "did you loan Scraggsy some money?"



"Bart," He Demanded, "Did You Loan Scraggsy Some Money?"

The honest McGuffey hung his head. "A little bit," he replied childishly.

"What d'ye call a little bit?"

"Three hundred dollars, Gib."

"Secured?"

"He gimme his note at eight per cent. The savin's bank only pays four."

"Is the note secured by endorsement or collateral?"

"No."

"Hum-m-m! Strange you didn't say nothin' to me about this till I had to pry it out o' you, Bart."

"Well, Scraggsy was feelin' so dog-goned blue——"

"The truth," Mr. Gibney insisted firmly, "the truth, Bart."

"Well, Scraggsy asked me not to say anythin to you about it."

"Sure. He knew I'd kill the deal. He knew better'n to try to nick me for three hundred bucks on his danged, worthless note. Bart, why'd you do it?"

"Oh, h—ll, Gib, be a good feller," poor McGuffey pleaded. "Don't be too hard on ol' Scraggsy."

Mitchell Sales Co., of Clarion is suing W. L. Toppings on two notes aggregating $292.92. One note was orginally given to E. B. Robin and later became the property of the plaintiff. Defendant is alleged to have absconded.

W. K. Roosevelt of Clarion asks judgement against W. L. Toppings in the sum of $650.58 on account of groceries sold said defendant. An attachment was issued against four horses belonging to Toppings.

Frank Vanderskee brings two suits against E. E. Evans to recover the sum of $381.53 as balance due for labor and services performed.

J. O. Nelson is made defendant in a suit on note for $315.00 given to Sam Guddall and payable at the Farmers Savings bank of Thor.

An unpaid balance of $3226 on a promissory note is cause for suit filed by Martin Darkas vs. Frank McDaniels of Woolstock.

H. G. Tillinnghast vs. M. H. Thomas is a suit to recover $183.94 on a promissory note.

Wright county has begun suit to collect the sum of $1246 from Perry Busick of Belmond, who is now confindo in the state hospital for the insane at Cherokee. The sum asked is for money advanced to the hospital authorities for the care, keep and medical attendance for said Busick. The law provides that patients having means to do so shall pay their own expense.

Amos Thompson of Eagle Grove has confessed judgement in favor of the Kalo Brick & Tile Co., in the sum of $421 for hollow building tile.

Yepsen & Son of Kanawha bring suit against N. R. and Florence Tripp to recover $5421 on their note.

A suit for $431 on notes given for cash rent has been filed by Johnson Bros. vs. Chas and James Hall of Eagle Grove.

Perry Musk of Eagle Grove seeks judgement against J. C. Middleton in the sum of $700 on his promissory note given in payment for work performed in his behalf.

J. H. A second suit by the same firm is brought against Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Comstock for the sum of $189.39.

Since the first of January the force at the treasurer's office has not been rushed so hard. Five regular and four extra clerks were needed during the last weeks of December to care for the auto license business. The office lobby was filled to overflowing on several occasions by people waiting their turn. In addition to this Treasurer Allen received a full box of mail every day when the last day for regristration came fully 500 letters were unanswered. It seems an imposition to shoulder the auto fee business onto the treasurer's office at a time of the year when regular tax matters require attention. Something over 3000 licenses for 1922 have been issued, but there are yet a few hundred delinquent.

A couple of weeks ago the court notes contained the mention of a divorce in which Lena Ferguson asked separation from her husband Wm. and that the parties were from Rowan. This was a mistake as we are imformed that they belong to another Ferguson family and formerly lived in Jasper county.

BOX SOCIAL IN PLEASANT TOWNSHIP

Pleasant township center school was packed to overflowing on Friday night, January 20th, when about 150 farmers, their wives and children. gathered for a box social. The proceeds of which are to be laid aside for the financing of the Belmond short course.

An interesting school program arranged by Miss Grace Gartz, teacher of the local school, was enjoyed by everyone. The program consisted of dialogues, recitations, musical numbers and a pantomine. A short talk was given by the county agent in which he explained the few difficulties which have arisen in the ranks of the farm bureau.

The feature of the meeting was the box social which began at 11 o'clock and ran into the wee hours of the morning. The artistic decorations on the boxes showed that time and patience had been spent by the ladies in preparing for the occasion. The county agent acted as auctioneer in selling the boxes.

COMMUNITY CLUB MEETS

The Community Welfare Club meets Friday afternoon, January, 27, in the library basement. The program has been changed and will be on Robert Burns and Scotland. The chairman, Mrs. J. E. Wallace, will be glad if any of the members who have selections from Robrt Burns will give them or bring them to read, and if you know a good Scotch story tell it to the club Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Bert Anfinson is chairman of the serving committee.

Joe Sampson showed us a hen egg Friday, which, if laid every day, would put Joe in Henry Ford's income tax class. This example of hen fruit was three times the size of the ordinary egg, perfectly formed with a hard shell, and weighed over five ounces. Herman Schultz has the egg now. It ought to make Herman at least one good meal. We suppose Brother King, of the News will question this story. Brother King sorta doubts these "unusual" events.

PLEASANT TOWNSHIP CO-WORKERS, NOTICE!

The Farm Bureau co-workers of Pleasant township are invited to be Present at the J. F. Henn home on Friday evening of this week, January 27th, to talk over the plans for the coming year in Farm Bureau work. Mr. and Mrs. Henn are inviting all the co-workers of the township to meet at their home on that evening for this purpose. The meeting will open about 7:30.

Local Students Win First Match Of the Season

Local Debating Team Defeats Eagle Grove In First Round Of State Contest.

WIN BASKET BALL GAMES

The three forensic heroes of Eagle Grove High School were outclassed in the tilt with Belmond debaters last Friday afternoon, the latter winning the decision 2 to 1.

Interest was high among the students when the rival teams took their places. Rev. S. U. Leinbach presided. The question was one to be used throughout the state this year: Resolved that the Phillippines should be given their independence within five years. Eagle Grove supported the affirmative, and the Belmond team consisting of Elaine Rierson, Lee Lowenberg and Teddy Johnson, upheld the negative. Each speaker was allowed ten minutes for his constructive argument and five minutes for rebuttal. Our team went after the visitors hard, convincing their listeners not only by the validity of their arguments, but by the force and vitality of their presentation.

The judges were J. A. Rogers from Clarion, Supt. Smylie of Dows, and Mr. Boehmler of Hampton.

We will now debate in the second round of the state series. On February 3 we debate Storm Lake here, and we still have the negative. We hope that everyone will be out to hear the debate.

Second semester started Monday, with a new program, and a new schedule for many pupils.

Farm Bureau Work Reported By Agent Edwards

Events Of Farmer Organization Thruout County As Told By The County Leader.

FINE WORK BEING DONE

Federal Meeting in Des Moines

If the enthusiasm and unity of thought and purpose demonstrated in the Farm Bureau Federation convention held in Des Moines last week reflect the prevailing sentiment of that organization then it is indeed a virile going concern. For it was not only the largest convention yet held, measured by numbers, but the most earnest and forward-looking in its attitude and policy toward questions of the day.

The activities and accomplishments of the year 1921 were set forth at length in the report submitted by Secretary Cunningham. They covered a wide field, including practically all the problems current, and were of a character that must convince the sober-thinking element of the nation that the farm bureau movements as a whole is a distinct contribution of constructive energy.

The report summarized the work of the legislative committee in connection with the last session of legislature; explained what had been done to secure more adequate credit for farmers; of efforts contributed toward a solution of transportation problems; told of cost accounting projects livestock marketing and a long list of other activities carried on during the year. It showed the federation to be sound and flourishing financially, conquently in a position to go frward to still greater usefulness and achievement.

Among the recommendations made for the year ahead the secretary believed the federation should encourage and support the grain marketing and livestock marketing projects developed by the committee of seventeen and the livestock committee of fifteen. He recommended the appointment of a spcial committe to study the question of taxation upon a broad and comprehensive basis, and another committee to make a searching investigation of the good roads problem, with a view of evolving a satisfactory state-wide plan of farm-to-market roads, with special attention to the secondary road system.

President Hunt in his address took the stand that the solution of the farmers' difficulties rest wholly in a higher level of prices for farm products, and thought energy would better be directed to that end rather than in attempts to scale prices of other commodities down to the level of farm products. He pointed out the need of a special financial system or vehicle for the accommodation of agriculture before it would be possible to bring a consummation of hopes in the field of marketing, and he urged careful study and investigation by farmers in this field, as well as in the realm of production. He regretted the endeavors of certain interests to discredit the farm bureau movement and insisted that there is no real ground for such antagonism, other than personal jealousy, because the movement is wholly safe and sane in its policies seeking only those things which mean a square deal for all.

President Howard of the American federation addressed the convention during the afternoon of the first day. It was one of the most thoughtful and forceful presentations of the cause and needs of agriculture ever delivered in Iowa. He discussed problems of cooperative marketing, tansportation and legislation in detail, and his explanation of the "secret meeting" alleged by Senator La Follette to have been held with the representatives of big business made the accusations of the gentleman from Wisconsin look exceedingly cheap and baseless.

Governor Kendall addressed the convention Wednesday morning. He scored the railroads unmercifully for what he termed their "hocus pocus" claims in connection with the matter of valueation for taxation. He expressed emphatic disapproval of both the burning of corn and of corn acreage restriction. and after citing the interest arrears of foreign nations to this government insisted that at least half the amount of unpaid interest, which totals more than one billion dollars, should be paid and invested in corn and given to the starving peoples of Europe. He declared that freight rates could be reduced twenty-five per cent and still pay fair inerest on the valuation; a new classification is imperative he declared, and if the Interstate Commerce Commission refuses to give it, then we must have a new Interstate Commerce Commission.

Dr. Pearson of Ames was inclined to take a hopeful view of things; professed to see light ahead and believes we have passed the lowest point in the prevailing business stagnation. Among other thoughts he presented some very interesting figures showing the abnormal spread between the price of products when they leave the farm and the price when they return in edible form. He would remedy this particular brand of profiteering by a campaign of "plain, pitiless publicity" through the press, even the extent of using paid advertising to acquaint the consuming public with the truth.

Several other speakers addressed the convention during the two days, among them Mrs. Richardson of Pella; Dr. Studer of Ames; Howard Clark of Des Moines, and Frank Meyers of Chicago. Mr. Clark's talk had to do with railroad valuations and rate schedules. Mr. Meyers presented the grain marketing plan as developed by the committee of seventeen.

Present C. W. Hunt was the unanimous choice of the convention to head the organization another year. There was no other canidate mentioned. Two canidates were brought out of the office of vice-president, Chas. Hearst of Cedar Falls, and L. S. Fisher of Edgewood, the former winning the election by ten votes. Directors were elected to represent the Second, Fourth, Sixth, Eighth and Tenth districts. Only one upset occurred and that was in the Second, where John Hanson of Scott county was elected to succeed Chas. Coverdale of Clinton.

At a meeting of the executives committee held Wednesday evening following the convention E. H. Cunningham was unanimously chosen secretary for another year. The committee also took prompt steps to select a farm woman representative on the committee, naming Mrs. Richardson of Pella as an ex-offico member.

Goodell School Notes.

Two well matched and interesting basket ball games were played on the Goodell floor between Klemme and Goodell Friday, Jan. 20. The girls played first defeating their opponents 12 to 8. From start to finish both teams showed exceptional pep and hard playing. The Klemme girls took the lead but it was soon covered when Edith Halfpop made three field baskets in close succession. The first half ended with Goodell ahead by 7 to 5. The second half guarding was closer and baskets were hard to make however the Goodell forwards made two baskets and a free throw. May Griggs did excepionally good work guarding her forward who was quite a little taller. The game was clean but marked with several fouls for both teams.

The boys played hard through the whole game. The Goodell boys had hard luck shooting baskets. Guarding was close on both sides which showed up the game a little but not enough to make it uninteresting. The first half ended wih a tie of 7-7. The second half showed still harder playing and no additional scores made until Klemme made two field baskets toward the ed of the half. This left the final score 11-7. Both games were clean and interesting. The return game will be played at Klemme on Jan. 27.

Garner plays here Jan. 31 and Crystal Lake Feb. 3. These games will conclude the season.

Last Thursday evening a very interesting and instructive lecture on consolidation was give by Prof. J. A. Woodruff, former sate inspecter of consolidated schools. His main object was to bring the facts before the people as it is no longer necessary to prove the value of consolidation, as this is shown by the thousands of consolidated schools over the state and United States. The attendance was good yet there were many who are opposed who could have been present but were not there.

The question of consolidation should be studied by everyone in the proposed consolidated district so that they will be able to vote intelligently.

Old-fashioned girls were afraid they would be critized and modern ones are afraid they won't.

OBITUARY

Minnie Nelson was born in Norway on April 16, 1865, being at the time of her death, 57 years, 9 months and 4 days. She came to the United States in 1867 with her parents, Henry and Carrie Nelson, who settled first in Wisconsin, later coming to Clear Lake, Iowa. The past fifty years of her life have been spent in Belmond and vicinity.

She was married in 1884 to Christian Furuseth, who passed beyond on April 2, 1917. To Mr. and Mrs. Furuseth were born three children, Clara Jacobson, Ella Luick, and Harold (deceased). Mrs. Furuseth is survived by her two daughters, four grandchildren, her aged father, Henry Nelson, three sisters, Mrs. Nettie Rierson of this city, Mrs. Annie Smith, of Ruthton, Minn., Mrs. Mattie Mooney of Jamestown, North Dakota, and a brother Mr. Edd. Nelson of Red Lake Falls, Minn. She united with the Lutheran church in girlhood and continued all her days a faithful and devoted adherent of her church. Such is a brief summary of a life of service and love which only those who knew her can appreciate.

Mrs. Furusch's protracted suffering was ended last Friday night when death released the gentle spirit from her tortured body. She has been a sufferer from a malignant internal growth, submitting to an operation some time ago for relief but it served to only temporarily stay the progress of disease. She has suffered very greatly for many weeks, but the sweet, gentle spirit bore the pain bravely and recognizing that life was drawing to a close, she, in perfect faith, longed to go that her release from suffering might also end the pain and grief of her loved ones in their own impotence and inability to help and restore her health. This community and the world is better because Mrs. Furuseth has lived her life of loving, self sacrificing adhorence to duty and the higher things of life, for altho entirely without ostentation or display, her devotion to her family and church, her loyalty to her friends, her pastor and her faith, were combined with a generous and loving disposition which endeared her to all with whom she mingled and caused her to unceasingly spend herself in service of love.

A gentle, loving faithful mother and friend has crossed to the other shore, there to join the father who had gone before. We mourn today, for great is our loss, but in spite of our mourning, our faith joins with hers in the triumphant knowledge that our God and Saviour has conquered death and we can look forward as did she, with untroubled faith to the time when we shall join her in he Land where all pain and suffering are wiped away and sorrow shall be no more.

"Sunset and evening bell
And after that the dark,
But may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.
For tho from out this bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar."

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at Trinity Lutheran church conducted by the pastor Rev. Jensen, and burial was in Belmond cemetery. A host of friends mourn with the bereaved family and feel for them a most sincere sympathy.

RED CROSS ELECTION

The annual electin of officers of the Belmond chapter of the American Red Cross will be held at the Belmond public library, Wednesday, February 1, from two to four p. m. At this time also the matter of changing the number required for quorum from nine to five will be acted upon.

The Independent has a copy of the petition being circulated about town, calling for radical cuts in the salaries of various county officials, and the abolishing of some offices, the stopping of much of the road work, and a number of radical ideas along the same lines. The writer has not taken time to go thru it thoroly, and is not prepared to render an pinion. It appears to be the work of D. M. Stephens of Goldfield, who gained much notoriety last summer by his stand on the road question. There seems, however, to be considerable pposition to it thruout the county.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

There was a good attendance at the services last Sunday even if the weather was cold. In Sunday school there was about a 85 per cent increase over the attendance of a year go.

The Ladies Missionary Society will hold their first meeting for the year next Thursday afternoon in the parlors of the church. Mrs. Hazel Case Berry will give a talk on Central America and we hope all who can possibly do so will be present to hear it.

The Bible study class will meet Thursday evening at 7:30. The regular services next Sunday to which all are invited. Miss Kathryn Thiltgen will be leader Sunday evening.

SUGAR BEETS AS A FARM CROP

While the season just concluded has been in some respects a dispointing one to sugar beet growers, it is generally agreed by those from whom we have heard expressions of opinion that the beets have been the most profitable crop they have grown during the past year. In many localities we are told the pay checks distributed by the sugar companies have been the main factor in keeping business moving.

In judging the results of last year's sugar beet crop it should be compared, not with the years immediately preceding, but with the returns of the other crops during the same period. It must be borne in mind that 1921 was a year of acute agricultural depression. Sugar, like all other products of the soil, shared in this depression. The decline in the price of sugar was greater proportionately than in that of any other important staple. But while wheat and corn and other crops accumulated on the grower's hands, disposal of the sugar beet crop offered no marketing difficulties. It was promptly taken and promptly paid for, and as already stated, in many communities the cash received for it was almost the only currency in the general circulation.

This is one great advantage of sugar beets from the point of view of the grower. Within thirty days from the time he begins lifting his beets a large part of them has been paid for, and within ninety days practically all the proceeds of the season's work are to his credit in the bank or have been used to liquidate his outstanding obligations When the farmer puts his beet seed into the ground he knows that, whatever his output, he will receive a certain minimum price per ton for it and that, while his financial return will vary with the yield and possibly to a certain extent with the price of sugar, there is no possibility of the crop being left on his hands, or of his being compelled to sacrifice it at a price far below the actual cost of production.—Facts About Sugar Jan. 7, 1922.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

TAXATION WITHOUT REPRESENATION

When, in the course of human events, it turns out that one people, or one locality, digs deep down into the far northeast corner of their pockets for the stray nickels and dimes which may have lodged therein, that they may pay unto the treasurer their portion of the revenues duly assigned and assessed against them, and yet they have nary a say, not a look-in, as to the affairs of the place wherein they dwell, is it not deer peepul, one great cause for which our forefathers fit, to wit: Taxation Without Representation?

It is. And does it not, deer peepul, look to you, in your calm moments of consideration, as tho Belmond had a pretty fair cause to start a Revolutionary War of its own? How come? Belmond is a dot on the map; maybe a little bigger dot than some; but just a dot; perchance but a bit of dust blown there by a summer wind; a place where they have money; where they are busy working and attending to their own business; but for anything else, forget it! We'll attend to the business of running this part of the Universe; never mind maybe they aren't capable. And we always have anyhow. And besides, we want to.

That seems to be about the way they reason it out, in some parts of the county, when it comes election time. And they elect their man— from some other part—and we say "yessir, yessir, verygoodsir!" and pay our taxes. Maybe we'll get a crumb, or a moldy crust, occasionally, just as a sort of recognition that there is such a thing as this end of the county.

Well, what do you think about it? Don't you think that it is not only about, but past time, when Belmond was represented in the County Councils? Good men, and true, are here; why not install a few of them in the seats of the mighty and have a little, at least, representation for the taxes we pay?

This year is election.

The primaries are this spring.

Why wait on the table any longer? Let's eat.

On Wednesday of last week Norman Schroeder of Wall Lake township mounted a trusty horse bareback and set out on an errand to one of his neighbors. When mounting for the return trip the horse evidently made nervous by the severe snow storm, began to rear and plunge, and Mr. Schroeder was quite severely injured.

He was taken in and cared for by the neighbor and was able to be moved to his home Sunday.—Monitor.

New cases reported are John Morse and Martin Christianson in Clarion, Mrs. John Torpey at the home of her mother, Mrs. John O'Neill, south of town, and a baby at the Roy Mikelson home in Norway township.—Monitor.

KILLED BY GAS FUMES

Eagle Grove Times: Andrew Langeland was found dead last Thursday morning, January 5th, after being missing since Christmas. His lifeless body was found beside his car in the garage of Matt Ramer, where Langeland kept his Ford. The supposition is that he was killed by fumes from the car while it was running. With the doors of the garage closed, the fumes became so strong that death resulted. The position of thq body and other evidence indicates that this was undoubtedly the cause of his death.

He was found lying in the rear of the car where he evidently had been putting on the new number plates, as the rear plate had been put on, and the front plate was lying beside the body. The car probably ran until the gasoline supply was exhausted as the tank was found to be drained dry and the ignition switch was still on.

He was last known to be alive Christmas Day, when he talked to his sister, Miss Martha Langeland. His sudden disappearance did not cause any undue anxiety, however, as he had been planning on going away for a few days and it was thought he had carried out his plans. When he failed to return later a search was made for him, but it was found he had not secured a pass from the railroad company, so an investigation was made to see if he had taken his car out of the garage. It was then that Mr. Ramer found him dead in the garage. An inquest was held and the decision reached that death had been due to gas fumes from the automobile.

The player who did the star work was Ralph Mollering, however Clarion's players saw most of the "stars." The girls game was hard fought from start to finish. This is the second game Rowan girls have played without two of the regular players. The visiting team was inclined to fight hard for what scores they got. In spite of all their hard playing Rowan defeated them 29-5.

ID BENNETT HURT IN FILM COLLISION? NOT EVEN RUFFLED.

Enid Bennett was not injured, nor ruffled, nor in any way "forced into temporary retirement" when the dainty star was the central figure in a thrilling crash between a locomotive and an automobile, staged for one of the closing scenes in "Her Husband's Friend," which will be shown at the Star theatre on Jan 28.

The collision is the culmination of several stirring situations which lead to an unexpected climax. Miss Bennett, in the role of Judith Westover, is the target for the persistent wooing of Tom Chatterton, who, having "his mind off the wheel," proceeds to step on 'erand plundge head-on into a six-coach passenger special speeding at sixty miles an hour, more or less. The action of this particular scene demanded that the automobile be overturned and Miss Bennett and escort thrown headfirst down the embankment.

Sunday School Convention

The union services last Sunday in the interests of the Wright county Sunday School Association were a splendid success. Dr. Elliott, of Dows preached at the morning service in the Methodist church, his message being an inspiration to all. At the joint Sunday school session Mr. Edgar Bingham spoke on "An Ideal Sunday School." This was followed by a discussion. The choir sang an anhem, "Awake, Awake," and Mrs. A. O. Pelly and Miss LaVonne Ballou rendered a duet in a pleasing manner. Dr. J.Jamison, of Clarion, preached a fine sermon at the evening hour of worship, which was grealy enjoyed.

Farm Bureau News

By R. M. Edwards.

Every farmer in Wright county should plan to attend one of these meetings and hear Mr. Shinn's discussion of the farm bureau work.

Meetings will held as follows:

Dows, Monday, Jan., 30, 2:00 p. m. Goldfield Tuesday, Jan., 31, 2:00 p. m. Belmond, Wednesday, Feb., 1, 2:00 p. m; Woolstock, Thursday, Feb., 2 2:00 p. m; Galt, Friday Feb 3, 2:00 p. m; Clarion Saturday, Feb. 4, 2:00 p. m.

Belmond May Have Short Corse.

A committee meeting of representatives from Grant, Pleasant and Belmond townships and representatives from the Belmond Commericial club met in the Belmond Savings bank, Saturday afternoon, January 7th, for the purpose of making plans for a short course to be held at Belmond this winter. Another committee meeting will be held at the same place Saturday afternoon, January 21st, at which time it will be definitely decided whether or not Belmond will put on a short course this year. In the meantime efforts will be made by the Belmond Commericial club also by the three townships concerned to raise the necessary funds for holding the course.

The Ladies' Department

In the absence of a home demonstration agent the county agent has carried on the demonstration work in the ladies department quite successfully. The program of work for the year included every kind of project available to the ladies department through the extension office. Through the efforts of the county agent the ladies of the county have had the advantage of specialized work even though Wright county has no demonstration agent. The ladies of Wright county have been very active in the work of the Farm Bureau during the past year and it will be noted that a keener interest is being devoloped in the different communities. This condition is as it should be because the Farm Bureau shoud be a family affair if it is functioning properly.

A Live Organization

The Wright County Farm Bureau is an organization which aims at all times to serve the farmers in the county in their effort to grow better crops, produce better livestock, build better homes and in all activities which have a tendancy to improve farm conditions and build toward a more permanent and prosperous agriculture. The organization has four executive officers and a board of directors made up of one lady director and one man director from each township in the county. In addition to this, each township has its separate organization with its executive officers and co-operators, one from each school district in the township. The executive board of directors is made up of four executive officers and three directors. The Wright County Farm Bureau varies from other county farm bureau organizations in that it has one lady director from each township on its board. During the year 1921 the executive board of directors happened to have three ladies on its list.

The farm bureau is an organization which is founded on the sound basis of "live and let live" and does not or never has made unreasonable demands upon other farm organizations. Its aim has always been to work in harmony with all other organizations which really and truly have the interests of the farmers at heart. The farm bureau does not believe in radicalism nor in the favoring of any special interest or industry but it does stand for a deal for the farmers in general at all times and under all circumstances. It does not wish to ask for anything but what it is perfectly willing that other organizations should have. It stands for a progressive development of agriculture in Wright county and believes that farmers should have at least the cost of production for the livestock and grain which they place on the market.

ICE HARVESTORS MAKING RECORD AT CLEAR LAKE

One hundred and twentyone cars of ice, cut, loaded and shipped in two days is the record of the ice hervest here this year, which sets a record far beyond that established in previous years.

The record was broken Saturday when 59 cars were loaded and shipped. This was a record, officials declared, would stand for many moons to come, but Saturday with an ideal working day, the men broke the record by three cars, sending out a total of sixty two.

Harvesters are swinging along at the same record clip this week and the expectations are that last week's records will be smashed. Reports indicate that the ice is of the best quality in years and that harvestors would have to go long ways to equal its clarity and thickness.

Local companies have also been busy putting up ice, and it is said many of them have just about completed their work.—Clear Lake Mirror.

STAGE RABBIT HUNT NORTHEAST OF GARNER

Last Saturday two teams composed of six men each of the Lutheran Young People's League held a competitive rabbit hunt, losers to set up an oyster stew to the league. The road running north and south by St. John's church was made the division line. Theo. Koch was captain of the team whose territory was east of the line and Ernest Jante captained the west team. At 9:45 the two teams started from the Alb. Jass. home, where they had assembled with the understanding that all hands were to report at the starting place not later than 3:30 p. m. Geo. Gruben drew first blood a few minutes from the start and from then on until about 3 o'clock a steady bombardment was kept up. Considering all the holes that were shot into the air, it's a wonder it didn't rain or snow long before night. At about 3 o'clock the weary nimrods began to report at the starting place. The east side after having covered between 10 and 12 miles through field and wood came in on their own power, but the west side, although not covering nearly as much ground and not having as many rabbits to carry had to send a man to get the team to haul them the last mile and a half. When all had reported Mrs. Jass had a lunch consisting of hot coffee, bread, butter, cheese and apples ready and it didn't take much urging to induce the hungry hunter to fall to. After the inner man had been satisified and the old pipe had been stuffed and lit the game was counted. The result was 33 cottontails for the west side and 35 for the east. Theo Boehnke was high man on the west side with 10 and Emil Ollenberg was runner-up with 9. On the east side W. H. Hinrichs was high and individual high man with 11 while Geo. Gruben was runner-up for the side with 9. Finally all started home feeling that they had put in several very strenuous but highly interesting hours.—Garner Signal.

LOST RESIDENT OF SHEFFIELD FOUND

Hampton Recorder: Casper Kleeman, a former resident of Sheffield, who has been wandering over the country for a period of several years under the illusion that he was a pauper and has been working at odd jobs for maintenance, arrived in Hampton Thursday morning and found that he had an estate of $6,000 at Sheffield and a 160 acre farm in Oklahoma awaiting him.

Kleeman, aged about sixty-five years, badly in need of clothing, soap and water, reached Hampton Thursday morning coming from the south via the Rock Island. railroad and went to the court house where he made application for admittance to the county farm. Clerk W. T. Webb immediately reconized Mr. Kleeman and gave him information concerning his true financial condition.

Kleeman disappeared from his home in this county three or four years ago, shortly after trouble had arisen over his property. It seems that he was under the impression that his brother in Oklahoma, who at that time was acting as his guardian, had swindled him out of his property. The trouble was settled and C. C. Storck, of Sheffield, appointed as guardian. During Kleeman's absence Mr. Storck kept up the diligent search for the missing man but was never able to locate him. Mr. Storck was notified of his appearance in Hampton and took him to Sheffield. Kleeman was divorced from his wife many years ago, and at the time of the separation he was given the custody of their son, and the wife took the daughter. The son died several years ago and the daughter is said to be living near Grundy Center.

RECREATION FOR BOYS

Monitor: The library board, at the regular monthly meeting on Monday evening, decided to open the basement on two nights of each week for a public meeting place for boys of the high school and junior high age. Some man who is qualified will be present as supervisor or leader at each meeting, and such games and other recreation will be enjoyed as will not be noisy enough to disturb patrons of the library on the floor above. Mondays and Thursdays are the appointed evenings and the hours are from seven to nine. The opening night will be Thursday of next week, January 16th. E. O. Hansen and Rev. J. B. Walker are the committee men having this project in charge, and would be pleased to have volunteers for the service of leader of these open nights, and also the gift of suitable games to help out in the entertainment.

The whole plan is in the nature of an experiment and will be continued through the winter if the interest is good and sufficient help can be secured for the conduct of the meetings.

The idea is surely a good one. Clarion boys have no public place to congregate, but they like to get together, and they enjoy games and other indoor pastimes. Here's hoping that the "boys' nights" will be

What Men Know, but Don't Tell Their Wives

Every man knows that a woman can make a dollar go twice as far as he can, but will he admit it? He also knows that he ought to see to it that the wife has the ready money to buy the Groceries and Dry Goods, then her natural gift of driving a bargain will exert itself and she will buy the Dry Goods and Groceries where she can buy the best for the least---at this store, of course---where quality is unquestioned and prices are an incentive.

THINGS WE DON'T SEE

If we were to pass along the street with head high in the air you might step on a twenty dollar bill without seeing it, while the man with his eyes below the clouds would pick it up. In that simple statement there is a mighty sermon which it would profit us to learn and to heed.

There are none of us so great but what we can afford to be humble—none so far seeing but what we can profit by looking around us. Sucess is founded upon our ability to observe and take care of the little things of life, for it is from them the big ones grow.

The things we don't see are our chief obstructions in the world of affairs, yet to the man who keeps his mind high and his eyes upon the ground they are plain to be seen, and are but stepping stones to greater achievements.

Let us take the lesson home to ourselves in the beginning of the new year. There may be many little things in this town that need attention, but we can not see them if we dream only of the end and give no thought of the beginning.—Exchange.

SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Lieschen Westernberger of Sheffield, Iowa, spent the week end with her friend Miss Emma Eickmeyer. Miss Westernberger visited school Monday forenoon and returned to her home in the afternoon.

The boy's high school basket ball team has purchased a new ball. Here's hoping that it passes through the rings as easily and readily as the old one did for them. We play Latimer a double header in the near future.

The box supper given last Tuesday night after the movie was a real success from the standpoint of the enjoyment and the shekels garnered within the fold. The highest priced box was $4.45. It was the creation of a local schoolma'am. We congratulate the young lady whose culinary art can demand the major portion of a five dollar bill. The purchaser one of our local bachelors, is t be congratulated upon his excellent taste and the cheerfulness that he displayed when being handed the twenty-five cents in change. We trust that he will be just as cheerful in paying $8.00 for shoes and $15.00 for hats for the young lady within a year from now.

Proceeds went to replenish our lyceum fund.

In the near future we plan on having several conventions and general elections for the benefit of the Civic and Constitution classes. In addition court procedure will be illustrated by one or two mock trials. An effort is being made to have Attorney A. M. Butler plead a case before Judge Whetstone. In other words, science with practice.

The next movie next Tuesday night will feature "Jupiters Thunder-Bolts," illustrating electrical developments; "At The Cross Roads," depicting prison scenes at Fort Leavenworth and a comedy, "Andy Falls In Love."

This year's lyceum course is now a matter of history. The last number was given by the Columbus Entertainers—two young ladies. The entertainment was a varied one and probably pleased more people than any entertainment on our course. Next year's lyceum will be directed by C. R. Clark and F. D. Rodemeyer, our local druggist and lumberman, respectively. These two men will buy the course and select the talent, therefore send all lyceum salesmen to these parties.

The man who complains of being constantly cheated is sure to be playing some kind of a cheating game himself.

Because a man in an argument lays his cards all on the table, it doesn't necessarily mean that the cards are worth laying on the table.

The world contains too many men who think that when all is lost save honor, they may as well make a clean sweep of it and allow honor to go, too.

Alarmists are always scared to death about how weak the "future generations" are going to be, but the fuure generations so far have been pretty fair.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS ON THE LOCAL SCHOOL

Supt. Prall, of the Clarion schools, at the Good Fellowship club gave sme interesting facts on Belmond's schools.

Supt. Prall began his address by saying that he did not propose to settle the question of how long the present high cost of education would continue, as he felt that the solution of that problem was up to the local communities. He proposed, however, to review the causes for the increase in school taxes and to point the way by which economy could be effected without destroying some of the most valuable things that the schools were doing.

Analysis of the school tax situation showed that the school taxes in Belmnd had increased from $17,000 to $35,000 in six years, a total of 106 per cent. He presented the following reasons for this increase:

1. An increase of 41 per cent in enrollment of pupils being educated at the expense of the district.

2. The tendency for the high school enrollment of non-tuition pupils to nearly double itself during this period, the actual increase being from 54 to 97. Since high school education was always more than twice as expensive as grade school education this growth had been a particularly heavy factor in the incrase in school costs.

3. The introduction of a more expensive curriculum.

4. The employment of better teachers.

5. High prices for school supplies during the inflation period, and high salaries owing to the teacher shortage and the high cost of living.

Mr. Prall said that the Belmond situation was typical of that obtaining in most Iowa towns and cities In the last six years the grade school population has increased more rapidly in every case than the city population, or than the taxible valuation of each district. while high school populations have increased from five to ten times as fast as either city population or taxible valuation. This phenominal growth in the high school was due, in his opinion, to the liberalizing of the high school curriculum and the instruction in subjects of practical value. He called attention to the fact that the old subjects of rhetoric, Latin, German, botany, civil government, ancient history, and involved mathematics had given way to public speaking, business English, general science, manual training, and home economics, shorthand, typewriting, book-keeping, current history and citizenship. While these subjects took more teaching time, required more equipment, and necessitated a better type of teacher than the old curriculum, they had been introduced largely because the old curriculum had failed to keep pupils in school and was not considered of much value by the general public.

Continuing, Mr. Prall said that while the changed character of the high school had been the big contributing cause in rising school costs, it was still in the balance, having possibilities of becoming a big field for social service or a positive menace to our social and economic life. He felt that the fact that it had become the fashion to attend high school presented many problems that did not have to be met in the old days. Chief among the problems in his opinion, was the difficulty of developing habits of industry, ambition, and initiative in the present care free pleasure seeking period. In this work, weak and inefficient teachers were more or less of an experiment.

Touching upon citizenship, Supt. Prall described four contributions that the high schools could make towards better citizenship, but doubted if any of these could be accomplished if the present quality of the teaching force were allowed to deteriorate. He felt that if the high school was working as it should, any economy gained by giving up a good teacher for a cheaper one might be of doubtful value.

On the other hand,, he realized that school taxes would have to be reduced in the majority of Iowa towns and cities. He said that a great deal of money might be saved in most high schools by eliminating expensive subjects that failed to enroll a large number of pupils. Changes that would make larger classes and fewer teachers would be made without lessening the efficiency of the work. Prices for school supplies are already on the down grade. New teachers will be hired at somewhat reduced salaries and old teachers may expect less money than they are receiving this year. He did not feel like predicting the salary tendency for another year, but hoped that each town would form its policy with a view to keeping its best teachers and filling its vacancies with teachers who have had training and experience.

In conclusion two tables were presented showing the relative expense of the school systems of seven towns: Emmetsburg, Humboldt, Eagle Grove, Clarion, Dows, Hampton and Belmond. Belmond ranked lowest among these towns in the amount of the new school tax levy per pupil enrolled and it ranked third from the highest in the cost of high schooll instruction per pupil per month.

Then there are the happy moving pictures which are so moving that they move the audience to a desire to throw bricks at them.

GOING INTO BANKRUPTCY

Wright County News: Going into bankruptcy does not always mean that a debtor is taking the easiest way out of his financial difficulties. It may be that he is. Time alone can tell. There is more to it than the monetary relief which comes when the law intervenes and wipes away the debts that had commenced to harass and perplex.

It is a nice, convenient way, no doubt, to step around the obligations contracted in good faith. The credit bestowed upon a man is generally predicated upon his ability and wiliingness to pay—his "squareness. Being square and honest, tho it takes the hide off, is immeasurably richer than fine gold.

There is always a disposition to question the motives of the man who seeks the solace of a bankrupt's court. It frees him, legally, from the oligations which the law does not consider as superior to the man's own self interest.

But Mark Twain, an involuntary bankrupt, rose to a greater height paying off a half million dollar debt that the bankruptcy court had deccreed should never be legally collected.

No man shoud take the step that leads him into bankruptcy proceeding without first exhausting every honorable way of meeting his obligations. The creditor who has trusted him in good faith, who has relied on his pledged honor for payment of the debt, loses more than the dollars and cents which stand on his ledger; he has lost a part of his faith in humanity; his belief in the honor and integrty of his fellow men.

The man going into bankruptcy makes it harder for the man who honestly needs credit to get it. The merchant, or business man, does not know whom to trust. He becomes more suspicious. His own self interests demands that he harden his heart to the appeal for credit. Therefore, the act of occasional individual affects his neighbors and friends as well as his creditors.

Occasionally a bankrupt will be discharged from his obligations in easier circumstances than some of the men whose oblgations are cancelled. A law which premits this condition to exist needs correcting. Too often the bankrupt reserves for himself the finest of the assets and the creditors must be satisfied with the leavings, because the law is abused.

Any man contemplating going into bankruptcy should first consider whether the value of a good name, a reputation for paying honest debts for being "square," is not better than taking the easier way.

Then there is another angle than self-interest to the question. The man who has trusted the bankrupt with money, or merchandise, or for proffessional services, may have done so in belief that in due time the obligation would be met. It may be that their own honor and integrity, their own record of success or failure, is involved in the debtor meeting the obligation.

The News hopes that Wright county escapes more forunately than some of her neighbor counties are escaping, Folks, everywhere, should consider more carefully not only their own responsibilities but the responsibilities of their friends.

Keeping the faith; holding to the good will and respect of your fellow man; bravely facing the adversities of life; battling against odds rather than bowing their heads in defeat; taking no mean or unfair advantage of any one; doing a man's part in a man's way; holding fast to the rugged virtures of old fashioned honesty, where a man's word was considered as good as his bond—that is the way out—the hard way, perhaps, the long way, but the way that will add honor at the end.

These well known young people have grown to manhood and womenhood in this vicinity and have a very large circle of friends who love and hold them in high esteem and who wish them a long and happy wedded life. Fred Stadtlander a brother of the bride acted as best man and Mrs. Fred Stadtlander a sister of the groom acted as bride's maid.

After the ceremony which joined this couple as man and wife, Rev. Wilkinson introduced to the relatives and friends, Mr. and Mrs. Muhlenbruch after which hearty congratulation were extended, when suddenly a shower of rice fell upon the newlyweds which caused much merriment for the dear ones present.

IOWA RANKS 8TH IN NEAR EAST RELIEF

Iowa ranks eighth among the states of the union in the extent of relief sent to the starving people of the Near East during the last six months of 1921, according to the official report for the last year given out by the State Director C. A. Montanus.

Iowa's contributions to the Near East Relief totaled $50,454 during the last six months as compared to $24,824 in the same period in 1920. The state is well on its way to raising the quota of $300,000 set for 1921-22, Mr. Montanus said. Farm organizations, churches and business men will co-operate in each county in Iowa in the relief drives to be launched during the coming winter and spring months.

Governor N. E. Kendall, state chairman of the Near East Relief in Iowa, has issued a special call to farmers of the state to contribute seed corn which will be shipped to the famine areas immediately and used in spring planting there under American supervision.

THE FARMER'S WIFE

Dishes for Brer Rabbit.

There are varieties of ways to serve rabbit as well as different ways to do everything else. You may transform Brer Rabbit in much the same way as you do any chicken. Among other suggestions are the following: canned rabbit (prepared like canned chicken); rabbit salad; rabbit rolled in bread crumbs, seasoned, browned and then put into the fireless cooker and cooked until tender; rabbit pie; and rabbit with dumplings.

Rabbit Pie.

Clean, dress and cut up the rabbit. Put in a stew pan with union, parsley, etc., cover with water and cook slowly until tender. When half done, add salt and pepper. Put a small cup in the center of baking dish, put the rabbit meat around it, with pie crust. Make incision in the crust around the pie. Bake in the oven until the crust rises and browns.

Dumplings.

The following recipe for dumplings should be followed to be used in combination with rabbit. Take 2 cups flour, 1-2 t. salt, 4 t. baking Mix and sift the dry ingredients. Mix ann sift the diy ingredients. Work in the butter with the finger tips and add milk gradually, mixing with a knife. Toss upon floured board, roll to 1-2 inch thickness, and with biscuit cutter. Place the dumplings in a buttered steamer, put over a kettle of boiling water and steam for about 12 minutes. If a steamer is not available, use a perforated pie tin.

Leland: While playing in a shed on the R. W. Branstad's place, some children found a box containing $500 in gold, and after making a search, Mr. Branstad disovered another box containing another $524, making in all $1024.00. The money is supposed to have belonged to Erick Davidson who, before his death, lived on the place with Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Branstad, but there is no certainty in regard to the ownership.

GET MACHINERY REPAIRED

Iowa farmers can reduce the cost of operation on the farm if they will utilize machinery that is good, except for a few repairs. According to J. B. Davidson, of the agricultural engineering extension department of Iowa State College, the use of considerable machinery is lost each year because repairs cannot be gotten at the last minute.

Get the needed parts while there is plenty of time to put them on the machine, and see that the tractor and other implements are ready for use, so that when spring season opens everything is in readiness.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is the skipper, Neils Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII. — Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.—Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer. Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

"We're discussin' you, Bart. 'Pears to me you've sort o' lost confidence in your old shipmate, ain't you? 'Pears that way to me when you act sneaky like."

McGuffey bridled. "I ain't a sneak."

"A rose by any other name'd be just as sweet," Mr. Gibney quoted. "You poor, misguided simp. If you ever see that three hundred dollars again you'll be a lot older'n you are now. However, that ain't none o' my business. The fact remains, Bart, that you conspired with Scraggsy to keep things away from me, which shows you ain't the man I thought you were, so from now on you go your way an' I'll go mine."

"I got a right to do as I blasted please with my money," McGuffey defended hotly. "I ain't no child to be lectured to."

"Considerin' the fact that you wouldn't have had the money to lend if it hadn't been for me, I allow I'm insulted when you use the said money to give aid an' comfort to my enemy. I'm through."

McGuffey, smothered in guilt, felt nevertheless that he had to stand by his guns, so to speak. "Stay through, if you feel like it," he retorted. "Where d'ye get that chatter? Ain't I free, white, an' twenty-one year old?"

Mr. Gibney was really hurt. "You poor boob," he murmured. "It's the old game o' settin' a beggar on horseback an' seein' him ride to the devil, or slippin' a gold ring in a pig's nose. An' I figured you was my friend!"

"Well, ain't I?"

"Fooey! Fooey! Don't talk to me. You'd sell out your own mother."

"Gib, you tryin' to pick a fight with me?"

"No, but I would if I thought I wouldn't git a footrace instead," Gibney rejoined scathingly. "Cripes, what a double-crossin' I been handed! Honest, Bart, when it comes to that sort o' work Scraggs is in his infancy. You sure take the cake."

"I ain't got the heart to clout you an' make you eat them words," Mr. McGuffey declared, sorrowfully.

"You mean you ain't got the guts," Mr. Gibney corrected him. "Bart, I got your number. Goodbye."

Mr. McGuffey had a wild impulse to cast himself upon the Gibney neck and weep, but his honor forbade any such weakness. So he invited Mr. Gibney to betake himself to a region several degrees hotter than the Maggie's engine room; then, because he feared to linger and develop a sentimental weakness, he turned his back abruptly and descended to the said engine room.

On his part, Adelbert P. Gibney entered the cabin and glared long and menacingly at Captain Scraggs. "I'll have my time," he growled presently. "Give it to me an' give it quick."

The very intonation of his voice warned Scraggs that the present was not a time for argument or trifling. Silently he paid Mr. Gibney the money due him; in equal silence the navigating officer went to the pilot house, unscrewed his framed certificate from the wall, packed it with his few belongings, and departed for Scab Johnny's boarding house.

"Hello," Scab Johnny saluted him at his entrance. "Quit the Maggie?"

Mr. Gibney nodded.

"Want a trip to the dark blue?"

"Lead me to it," mumbled Mr. Gibney.

"It'll cost you twenty dollars, Gib. Chief mate on the Rose of Sharon, bound for the Galapagos islands sealing."

"I'll take it, Johnny." Mr. Gibney threw over a twenty-dollar bill, went to his room, packed all of his belongings, paid his bill to Scab Johnny, and within the hour was aboard the schooner Rose of Sharon. Two hours later they towed out with the tide.

Poor McGuffey was stunned when he heard the news that night from Scab Johnny. When he retailed the information to Scraggs next morning, Scraggs was equally perturbed. He guessed that McGuffey and Gibney had quarreled and he had the poor judgment to ask McGuffey the cause of the row. Instantly, McGuffey informed him that that was none of his dad-fetched business—and the incident was closed.

The three months that followed were the most harrowing of McGuffey's life. Captain Scraggs knew his engineer would not resign while he, Scraggs, owed him three hundred dollars; wherefore he was not too particular to put a bridle on his tongue when things appeared to go wrong. McGuffey longed to kill him, but dared not. When, eventually, the railroad had been extended sufficiently far down the coast to enable the farmers to haul their goods to the railroad in trucks, the Maggie automatically went out of the green-pea trade; simultaneously, Captain Scraggs' note to McGuffey fell due and the engineer demanded payment. Scraggs demurred, pleading poverty, but Mr. McGuffey assumed such a threatening attitude that reluctantly Scraggs paid him a hundred and fifty dollars on account, and McGuffey extended the balance one year—and quit.

"See that you got that hundred and fifty an' the interest in your jeans the next time we meet," he warned Scraggs as he went overside.

Time passed. For a month the Maggie plied regularly between Bodega bay and San Francisco in an endeavor to work up some business in farm and dairy produce, but a gasoline schooner cut in on the run and declared a rate war, whereupon the Maggie turned her blunt nose riverward and for a brief period essayed some towing and general freighting on the Sacramento and San Joaquin. It was unprofitable, however, and at last Captain Scraggs was forced to lay his darling little Maggie up and take a job as chief officer of the ferry steamer Encinal, plying between San Francisco and Oakland. In the meantime, Mr. McGuffey, after two barren months "on the beach," landed a job as second assistant on a Standard Oil tanker running to the west coast, while thrifty Neils Halvorsen invested the savings of ten years in a bay scow known as the Willie and Annie, arrogated to himself the title of captain, and proceeded to freight hay, grain and paving stones from Petaluma.

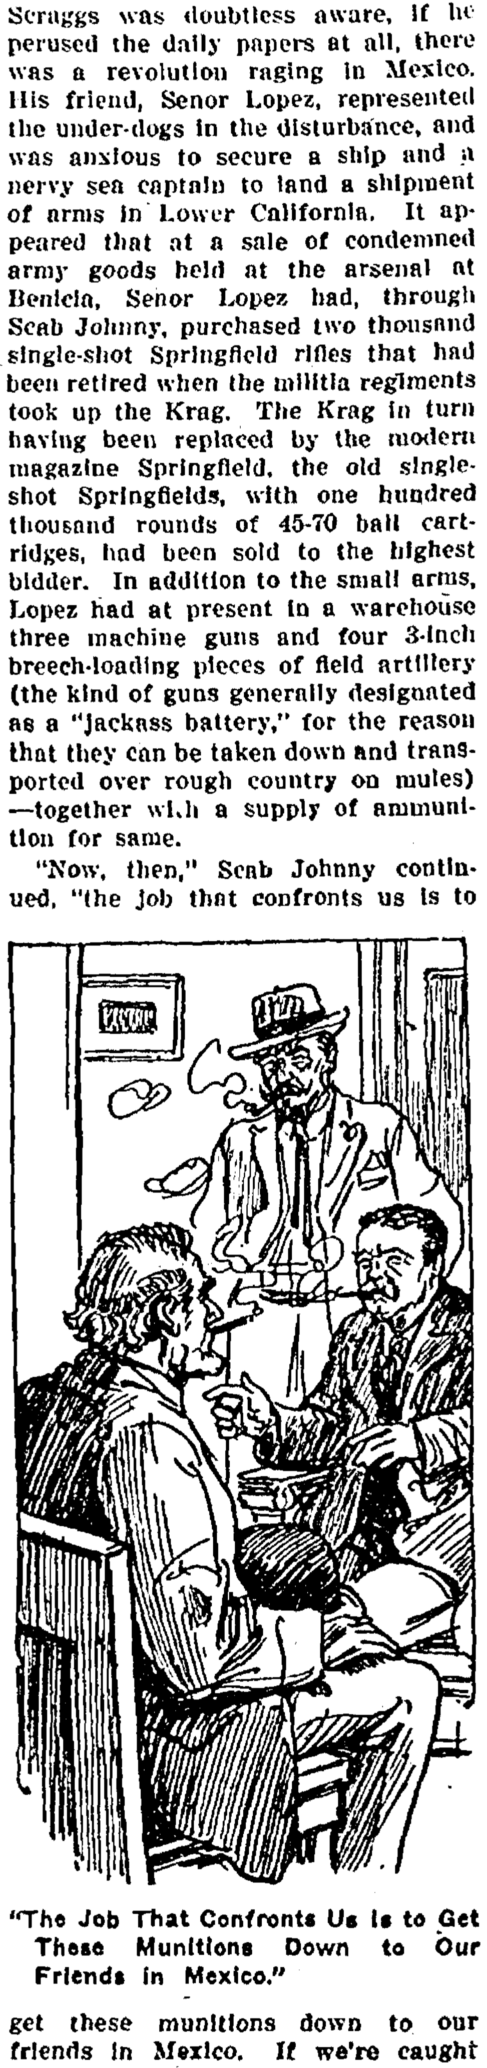
The old joyous days of the green-pea trade were gone forever, and many a night, as Captain Scraggs paced the deck of the ferryboat, watching the ferry tower loom into view, or the scattered lights along the Alameda shore, he thought longingly of the old Maggie, laid away, perhaps forever, and slowly rotting in the muddy waters of the Sacramento. And he thought of Mr. Gibney, too, away off under the tropic stars, leading the care-free life of a real sailor at last, and of Bartholomew McGuffey, imbibing "pulque" in the "cantina" of some disreputable cafe. Captain Scraggs never knew how badly he was going to miss them both until they were gone, and he had nobody to fight with except Mrs. Scraggs and when Mrs. Scraggs (to quote Captain Scraggs) "slipped her cable" in her forty-third year Captain Scraggs felt singularly lonesome and in a mood to accept eagerly any deviltry that might offer.

Upon a night, which happened to be Scraggs' night off, and when he was particularly lonely and inclined to drown his sorrows in the Bowhead saloon, he was approached by Scab Johnny, and invited to repair to the latter's dingy office for the purpose of discussing what Scab Johnny guardedly referred to as a "proposition."

Upon arrival at the office, Captain Scraggs was introduced to a small, fierce-looking gentleman of tropical appearance, who owned to the name of Don Manuel Garcia Lopez. Scab Johnny first pledged Captain Scraggs to absolute secrecy, and made him swear by the honor of his mother and the bones of his father not to divulge a word of what he was about to tell him.

Scab Johnny was short and to the point. He stated that, as Captain Scraggs was doubtless aware, if he perused the daily papers at all, there was a revolution raging in Mexico. His friend, Senor Lopez, represented the under-dogs in the disturbance, and was anxious to secure a ship and a nervy sea captain to land a shipment of arms in Lower California. It appeared that at a sale of condemned army goods held at the arsenal at Benicia, Senor Lopez had, through Scab Johnny, purchased two thousand single-shot Springfield rifles that had been retired when the militia regiments took up the Krag. The Krag in turn having been replaced by the modern magazine Springfield, the old single-shot Springfields, with one hundred thousand rounds of 45-70 ball cartridges, had been sold to the highest bidder. In addition to the small arms, Lopez had at present in a warehouse three machine guns and four 3-inch breech-loading pieces of field artillery (the kind of guns generally designated as a "jackass battery," for the reason that they can be taken down and transported over rough country on mules) —together with a supply of ammunition for same.

"Now, then," Scab Johnny continued, "the job that confronts us is to get these munitions down to our friends in Mexico. If we're caught sneakin' 'em into Mexico we'll spend the rest of our lives in a federal penitentiary for bustin' the neutrality laws. All them rifles an' the ammunition is cased an' in my basement at the present moment—and the government agents knows they're there. But that ain't troubling me. I rent the saloon next door an' I'll cut a hole through the wall from my cellar into the saloon cellar, carry 'em through the saloon into the backyard, an' out into the alley half a block away. I'm watched, but I got the watcher spotted—only he don't know it. Our only trouble is a ship. How about the Maggie?"



"The Job That Confronts Us Is to Get These Munitions Down to Our Friends in Mexico."

"I'd have to spend about two thousand dollars on her to put her in condition for the voyage," Scraggs replied.

"Can do," Scab Johnny answered him briefly, and Senor Lopez nodded acquiescence. "You discharge on a lighter at Descanso bay about twenty miles below Ensenada. What'll it cost us?"

"Ten thousand dollars, in addition to fixin' up the Maggie. Half down and half on delivery. I'm riskin' my hide an' my ticket an' I got to be well paid for it."

Again Senor Lopez nodded. What did he care? It wasn't his money.

"I'll furnish you with our own crew just before you sail," Scab Johnny continued. "Get busy."

"Gimme a thousand for preliminary expenses," Scraggs demanded. "After that Speed is my middle name."

The charming Senor Lopez produced the money in crisp new bills and, perfect gentleman that he was, demanded no receipt. As a matter of fact, Scraggs would not have given him one.

The two weeks that followed were busy ones for Captain Scraggs. The day after his interview with Scab Johnny and Don Manuel he engaged an engineer and a deck hand and went up the Sacramento to bring the Maggie down to San Francisco. Upon her arrival she was hauled out on the marine ways at Oakland creek, cleaned, caulked, and some new copper sheathing put on her bottom. She was also given a dash of black paint, had her engines and boilers thoroughly overhauled and repaired, and shipped a new propeller that would add at least a knot to her speed. Also, she had her stern rebuilt. And when everything was ready, she slipped down to the Black Diamond coal bunkers and took on enough fuel to carry her to San Pedro; after which she steamed across the bay to San Francisco and tied up at Fremont street wharf.

The cargo came down in boxes, variously labeled. There were "agricultural implements," a "cream separator," a "windmill," and half a dozen "sewing-machines," in addition to a considerable number of kegs alleged to contain nails. Most of it came down after five o'clock in the afternoon after the wharfinger had left the dock, and as nothing but a disordered brain would have suspected the steamer Maggie of an attempt to break the neutrality laws, the entire cargo was gotten aboard safely and without a jot of suspicion attaching to the vessel.

When all was in readiness, Captain Scraggs incontinently "fired" his deckhand and engineer and inducted aboard a new crew, carefully selected for their filibuster virtues by Scab Johnny himself. Then while the new engineer got up steam, Captain Scraggs went up to Scab Johnny's office for his final instructions and the balance of the first instalment due him.

Briefly, his instructions were as follows: Upon arrival off Point Dume on the southern California coast, he was to stand in close to Dume cove under cover of darkness and show two green lights on the masthead. A man would come alongside presently in a small boat, and climb aboard. This man would be the supercargo and the confidential envoy of the insurrecto junta in Los Angeles. Captain Scraggs was to look to this man for orders and to obey him implicitly, as upon this depended the success of the expedition. This agent of the insurrecto forces would pay him the balance of five thousand dollars due him immediately upon discharge of the cargo at Descanso bay. There was a body of insurrecto troops encamped at Megano rancho, a mile from the beach, and they would have a barge and small boats in readiness to lighter the cargo. Scab Johnny explained that he had promised the crew double wages and a bonus of a hundred dollars each for the trip. Don Manuel Garcia Lopez paid over the requisite amount of cash, and half an hour later the Maggie was steaming down the bay on her perilous mission.

The sun was setting as they passed out the Golden gate and swung down the south channel, and with the wind on her beam, the aged Maggie did nine knots. Late in the afternoon of the following day she was off the Santa Barbara channel, and about midnight she ran in under the lee of Point Dume and lay to. The mate hung out the green signal lights, and in about an hour Captain Scraggs heard the sound of oars grating in rowlocks. A few minutes later a stentorian voice hailed them out of the darkness. Captain Scraggs had a Jacob's ladder slung over the side and the mate and two deckhands hung over the rail with lanterns, lighting up the surrounding sea feebly for the benefit of the lone adventurer who sat muffled in a great coat in the stern of a small boat rowed by two men. There was a very slight sea running, and presently the men in the small boat, watching their opportunity by the ghostly light of the lanterns, ran their frail craft in under the lee of the Maggie. The figure in the stern sheets leaped on the instant, caught the Jacob's ladder, climbed nimbly over the side, and swore heartily in very good English as his feet struck the deck.

"What's the name of this floating coffin?" he demanded in a chain-locker voice. It was quite evident that even in the darkness, where her many defects were mercifully hidden, the Maggie did not suit the special envoy of the Mexican insurrectos.

"American steamer Maggie," said the skipper frigidly. "Scraggs is my name, sir. And if you don't like my vessel—"

"Scraggsy!" roared the special envoy. "Scraggsy, for a thousand! And the old Maggie of all boats! Scraggsy, old tarpot, your fin! Duke me, you doggoned old salamander!"

"Gib, my dear boy!" shrieked Captain Scraggs and cast himself into Mr. Gibney's arms in a transport of joy. Mr. Gibney, for it was indeed he, pounded Captain Scraggs on the back with one great hand while with the other he crushed the skipper's fingers to a pulp, the while he called on all the powers of darkness to witness that never in all his life had he received such a pleasant surprise.

It was indeed a happy moment. All the old animosities and differences were swallowed up in the glad handclasp with which Mr. Gibney greeted his old shipmate of the green-pea trade. Scraggs took him below at once and they pledged each other's health in a steaming kettle of grog, while the Maggie, once more on her course, rolled south toward Descanso bay.

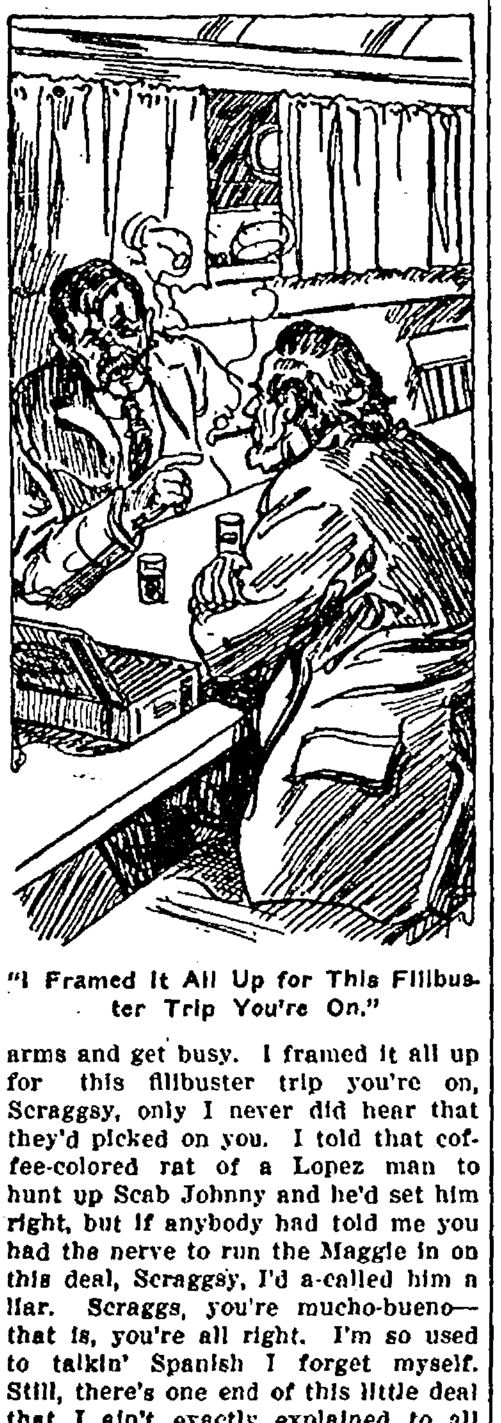
"Well, I'll be keel-hauled and skull-dragged!" said Captain Scraggs, producing a box of two-for-a-quarter cigars and handing it to Mr. Gibney. "Gib, my dear boy, wherever have you been these last three years?"

"Everywhere," replied Mr. Gibney. "I have been all over, mostly in Panama and the Gold coast. For two years I've been navigatin' officer on the Colombian gunboat Bogota. When I was a young feller I did a hitch in the navy and become a first-class gunner, and then I went to sea in the merchant marine, and got my mate's license, and when I flashed my credentials on the president of the United States of Colombia he give me a job at 'dos cienti pesos oro' per. That's Spanish for two hundred bucks gold a month. I've been through two wars and I got a medal for sinkin' a fishin' smack. I talk Spanish just like a native. I don't drink no more to speak of, and I've been savin' my money. Some day when I get the price together I'm goin' back to San Francisco, buy me a nice little schooner, and go tradin' in the South seas. How they been comin' with you, Scraggsy, old kiddo?"

"Lovely," replied Scraggs. "Just simply grand. I'll pull ten thousand out of this job."

Mr. Gibney whistled shrilly through his teeth.

"That's the ticket for soup," he said admiringly. "I tell you, Scraggs, this soldier of fortune business may be all right, but it don't amount to much compared to being a sailor of fortune, eh, Scraggsy? Just as soon as I heard there was a revolution in Mexico I quit my job in the Colombian navy and come north for the pickin's. . . . No, I ain't been in their rotten little army. . . . D'ye think I want to go around killin' people? . . . There ain't no pleasure gettin' killed in the mere shank of a bright and prosperous life . . . a dead hero don't gather no moss, Scraggsy. Reads all right in books, but it don't appeal none to me. I'm for peace every time, so right away as soon as I heard of the trouble, says I to myself: 'Things has been pretty quiet in Mexico for twenty years, and they're due to shift things around pretty much. What them peons need is a man with an imagination to help 'em out, and if they've got the money, Adelbert P. Gibney can supply the brains.' So I comes north to Los Angeles, shows the insurrecto junta my medal and my honorable discharges from every ship I'd ever been in, includin' the gunboat Bogota, and I talked big and swelled around and told 'em to run in some arms and get busy. I framed it all up for this filibuster trip you're on, Scraggsy, only I never did hear that they'd picked on you. I told that coffee-colored rat of a Lopez man to hunt up Scab Johnny and he'd set him right, but if anybody had told me you had the nerve to run the Maggie in on this deal, Scraggsy, I'd a-called him a liar. Scraggs, you're mucho-bueno—that is, you're all right. I'm so used to talkin' Spanish I forget myself. Still, there's one end of this little deal that I ain't exactly explained to all hands. If I'd a-known they was charterin' the Maggie, I'd have blocked the game."



"I Framed It All Up for This Filibuster Trip You're On."

"Why?" demanded Captain Scraggs, instantly on the defensive.

"Not that I'm holdin' any grudge agin you, Scraggsy," said Mr. Gibney affably, "but I wouldn't a-had you no more now than I would when we was runnin' in the green-pea trade. It's because you ain't got no imagination, and the Maggie ain't big enough for my purpose. Havin' the Maggie sort of puts a crimp in my plans."

"Rot," snapped Captain Scraggs. "I've had the Maggie overhauled and shipped a new wheel, and she's a mighty smart little boat, I'll tell you. I'll land them arms in Descanso bay all right."

"I know you will," said Mr. Gibney sadly. "That's just what hurts. You see, Scraggsy, I never intended 'em for Descanso bay in the first place. There's a nice healthy little revolution fomentin' down in the United States of Colombia, with Adelbert P. Gibney playin' both ends to the middle. And there's a dog-hole down on the Gold coast where I intended to land this cargo, but now that Scab Johnny's gone to work and sent me a bay scow instead of a sea-goin' steamer, I'm in the nine-hole instead o' dog-hole. I can never get as far as the Gold coast with the Maggie. She can't carry coal enough to last her."

"But I thought these guns and things was for the Mexicans," quavered Captain Scraggs. "Scab Johnny and Lopez told me they was."

Mr. Gibney groaned and hid his face in his hands. "Scraggsy," he said sadly, "it's a cinch you ain't used the past four years to stimulate that imagination of yours. Of course they was purchased for the Mexicans, but what was to prevent me from lettin' the Mexicans pay for them, help out on the charter of the boat, and then have me divert the cargo to the United States of Colombia, where I can sell 'em at a clear profit, the cost bein' nothin' to speak of? Now you got to come buttin' in with the Maggie, and what happens? Why, I got to be honest, of course. I got to make good on my bluff, and what's in it for me? Nothin' but glory. Can you hock a hunk of glory for ham and eggs, ... Scraggs? Not on your life. If it hadn't been for you buttin' in with your blasted, rotten hulk of a fresh-water skiff, I'd—"

Mr. Gibney paused ominously and savagely bit the end of his cigar. As for Captain Scraggs, every drop of blood in his body was boiling in defense of the ship he loved.

"You're a pirate," he shrilled.

"And you're just as big a hornet as you ever was," replied Mr. Gibney. "Always buzzin' around where you ain't wanted. But still, what's the use of bawlin' over spilt milk? We'll drop into San Diego for a couple of hours and take on coal, and about sunset we'll pull out and make the run down to Descanso bay in the dark. We might as well forget the past and put this thing through as per program. Only I saw visions of a schooner all my own, Scraggsy, and—well, what's the use? What's the use? Scraggsy, you're a natural-born mar-plot. Always buttin' in, buttin' in, fit for nothin' but the green-pea trade. However, I guess I can turn into my old berth and get some sleep. Put the old girl under a slow bell and save your coal. We'll have to fool away four or five hours in San Diego anyhow and there ain't no sense in crowdin' the old hulk."

"Gib," said Captain Scraggs, "was that really your lay—to steal the cargo, double-cross the insurrecto junta, and sell out to a furrin' country?"

"Of course it was," said Mr. Gibney pettishly. "They all do such things in the banana republics. Why should I be an exception? There's half a dozen different gangs fightin' each other and the government in Mexico, and if I don't deliver these arms, just see all the lives I'll be savin'. And after I got the cargo into Colombia and sold it, I could have peached on the rebels there, and got a reward for it, and saved a lot more lives, and come away rich and respected."

"By the Lord Harry," said Captain Scraggs, "but you've got an imagination, Gib. I'll swear to that. Gib, I take off my hat to you. You're all tight and shipshape and no loose ends bobbin' around you. Don't tell me th' scheme's got t' fall through, Gib. Great snakes, don't tell me that. Ain't there some way o' gettin' around it? There must be. Why, Gib, my dear boy, I never heard of such a grand lay in my life. It's a absolute winner. Don't give up, Gib. Oil up your imagination and find a way out. Let's get together, Gib, and make a little money. Dang it all, Gib, I been lonesome ever since I seen you last."

"Well," replied Mr. Gibney, "I'll turn in and try to scheme a way out, but I don't hold out no hope. Not a ray of it. I'm afraid, Scraggsy, we've got to be honest."

Saying which, Mr. Gibney hopped up into his berth, stretched his huge legs, and fell asleep with his clothes on. Captain Scraggs looked him over with the closest approach to affection that had ever lightened his cold gray eye, and sighing heavily, presently went on deck. As he passed up the companionway, the first mate heard him murmur:

"Gib's a fine lad. I'll be dad burned if he ain't."

At six o'clock next morning the Maggie was rounding Point Loma, heading in for San Diego bay, and Captain Scraggs went below and awakened Mr. Gibney.

"What's for breakfast, Scraggsy, old kid?" asked Mr. Gibney.

"Fried eggs," said Captain Scraggs, remembering Mr. Gibney's partiality for that form of nutriment in the vanished days of the green-pea trade. "Ham an' fried eggs an' a sizzlin' pot o' coffee. Thought a way out o' our mess, Gib?"

"Not yet," replied Mr. Gibney as he rolled out of bed, "but eggs is always stimulatin', and I don't give up hope on a full stomach."

An hour later they were tied up under the coal bunkers, and at Mr. Gibney's suggestion some twenty tons of sacked coal were piled on top of the fo'castle head and on the main deck for'd, in case of emergency. They lay in the harbor all day until about four o'clock, when Mr. Gibney, by virtue of his authority as supercargo, ordered the lines cast off and the Maggie steamed out of the harbor. Off Point Loma they veered to the south, leaving the Coronado islands on the starboard quarter, ten miles to the west. Mr. Gibney was below with Captain Scraggs, battling with the problem that confronted them, when the mate stuck his head down the companionway to report a large power schooner coming out from the lee of the Coronados and standing off on a course calculated to intercept the Maggie in an hour or two.

Captain Scraggs and Mr. Gibney sprang up on the bridge at once, the latter with Scraggs' long glass up to his eye.

"She was hove to under the lee of the island, and the minute we came out of the harbor and turned south she come nosin' after us," said the mate.

"Hum!" muttered Mr. Gibney. "Gasoline schooner. Two masts and baldheaded. About a hundred and twenty ton, I should say, and showin' a pretty pair of heels. There's somethin' up for'd—yes—let me see—ye-es, there's two more—holy sailor! It's a gunboat! One of those doggoned gasoline coast patrol boats, and there's the federal flag flyin' at the fore."

How cold was it Tuesday morning? The Independent editor asked five different people, that morning, and every one of 'em had a different degree of coldness, from 17 to 25 below. The Belmond teams completely wiped the map with the Dows basket ball team last Friday night, winning both of the games by good margins. It was just a case of too much speed, the Belmond teams, both girls and boys, being too fast for the neighboring town. Both games were excellent exhibitions of the sport, clean and exciting, and were attended by a large crowd of fans.

The Local school added another feather to its cap last Friday when the debating team defeated Eagle Grove.

LOCAL STUDENTS WIN FIRST MATCH OF THE SEASON

Division 2 of the Literary Society will give a program Friday afternoon at 2:30.

Friday was a big day for Belmond, as she had three victories to her credit.

Last Friday evening our fast quintet defeated the Dows High School Huskies to the tune of 22 to 11. No time during the game were our boys in danger of loosing the game, the half ending 16 to 4. Altho our boys all played star basket-ball, Madsen was the feature of the contest, making difficult shots from every angle. The Belmond girls defeated the Dows girls in an easy game of basket ball Friday night. The Dows girls sent the ball through the ring first, but made only five more points during the game. The Belmond girls played good team work throughout. Jumping Center Rierson missed only 3 tip-offs during the entire game. Although Leavy was much smaller than the Dows running center, she continually out jumped her. H. Haven played a defensive game entirely, making but few scores, but protecting M. Hauge, and at times guarding both. The guards, K. Thiltgen and C. Tyrrell cannot be given too much credit for keeping down the Dows score. They guarded well and evaded the visiting forwards, easily making some good catches which could have resulted in scores.

Monday evening the team played their return game at Swaledale, winning by 34 to 14, the first half ending 26 to 6. During the last half our boys spent most of their time practicing passing rather than shooting baskets. By using these tactics, we received some valuable practice for the hard games to be played within the coming months. They are: Clarion, Garner, Nashua and Hampton, all played on our home floor.

Mrs. T. C. Johnson, of Latimer, and Mrs. Henry Schultz were Kindergarten visitors the past week.

We need your help to give you all the news. We get some, but not all the happenings, and if, when you know some news, you will call 115 it will be very much appreciated. Thank You!

The short course for this winter has been abandoned, and will be held, according to present plans, next winter some time.

A good many boys who have been advised by their elder to be quick, seem to think that means to be "fast."

STORM LAKE AND BELMOND DEBATE FRIDAY

Creamery Holds Annual Meeting Last Saturday

Officers Elected For The Coming Year And Many Questions Are Discussed.

TO HOLD CREAMERY DAY

The local creamery held its annual meeting last week Saturday, at the Belmond township hall, and elected the following officers:

Geo. Elder, Secretary; Ole Thompson, Treasurer; A. C. Hinman, Frank Barry and Will Boelman, directors, the first named being re-elected to succeed himself.

Everything was found clear and the creamery free from debt. Much more butter was made this year than last, which goes to show that the farmers are getting back to the good old regular cream check.

The total poundage of butter made the past year was 167,373. The year before it was 145,617. Compare this to 1916 with 166,804, 1914 with a total of 207,484, and the banner year, 1913, with 222,841. In the large years named, however, the company was buying cream from outside stations, whereas now they buy only locally. It all points to the fact that the farmers are milking more.

It was the hope of the meeting that a tariff sufficiently high would be placed on foreign butter to keep from having the influx of the foreign product ruin the home market.

Thirteen carloads of butter from Australia and New Zealand recently went thru Iowa on the way to the New York market. Denmark recently shipped a great quantity which had its effect on the market.

Freight rates are so high that the creamery, which sold almost exclusively to New York, now has to ship to Chicago.

Among the questions taken up and discussed was the holding of a Creamery Day here, probably, if conditions are favorable, in the early fall. It was decided too to keep open during the summer months two evenings a week

MRS. N. A. DAVENPORT

Nancie A. Christie was born at Heath, Mass., Aug 1, 1835, and died at her home south of Belmond Jan. 30, 1922.

She was married to Truair J. Davenport July 4, 1858, by "Mark Twain." They moved to Madison, Wis., and in the spring of 1863 to Belmond and settled on the farm south of town. Mr. Davenport was killed by lightning on June 12, 1868, which left the whole care of bringing up her family upon her, which was no small task when we remember that the nearest railroad was miles away. She was mother and father to her children.

She professed faith in Christ and was baptised in the Charlment river, at the same time that her father and mother were baptised and was received into the membership of the M. E. church at the age of 14 years.

Mrs. Davenport leaves five children, Terrance A, Jason C, Abbie J, wife of J. W. Sheriff, Frank J. and Truair N., all of Belmond, also ten grandchildren and eight greatgrandchildren, besides many other relatives and friends who mourn her departure. She rests from her labor and her works do follow her.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the Methodist church, Rev. Leinbach preaching the sermon, Rev. Wilkinson in charge, and interment was made in Franklin Grove cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We thank our friends and neighbors for the sympathy and kindness shown us at the time of the illness and death of our beloved husband and father. We are also grateful for the many flowers and spiritual bouquets.

Mrs. Pat Quigley and Children.

The Good Fellowship meeting to be held Friday night of this week, was put ahead to last evening, Wednesday, owing to the fact that the debate between the Belmond and the Storm Lake schools is scheduled for Friday.

The weather was anything but favorable, and consequently there were few farmers in from the country. A report of the meeting will be given in the Independent next week.

According to present plans, Judge Fry will be the speaker at a meeting of the club about the first of March, or late in this month. Judge Fry is an able speaker and his address will be well worth hearing. Plan to be there and have a good time with the "Good Fellows."

Judge Fry has rendered a decision in the drainage case of DeMaris et al vs the board of supervisors. The case as submitted at the December term of court and taken under advisement. In his opinion the judge says the appellants have shown that the assessments in each case were excessive as compared with other assessments in the district and are entitled to substantial reductions in the same. It appeared to the court that most of the lands through which drains run had an adequate outlet. It is quite apparent that the drainage system was constructed primarily for the purpose of taking care of the exceedingly swampy and marshy lands at the head of the old districts. These comprise several thousand acres and are largely reclaimed. After considering the matter pro and con the following reductions were made:

Demaris estate, seven tracts, from $791. 64 to $554; $709.20 to $568; $564 to $423; $451 to $350; $413.38 to $335; $265.68 to $200; $311.50 to $250.

H. J. Peddle, four tracts, $1407.78 to $1025; $759.75 to $650; $1270.10 to $1050; $539.11 to $450.

Mary Whitten, $256.50 to $200.

All costs are taxed against the drainage district, which is officially known as joint No. 7-146 Franklin and Wright counties.

Tuesday the board of supervisors let the contract of graveling the south Clarion road to C. Sorenson of Nevada, whose bid was 39.9 cents for the first mile and 9 cents for each additional half mile. There were six other bidders the next lowest being [illegible]5, cents and 12 for each half mile. The gravel will be taken from the Sheffield pit.

A marriage license was issued to Harry L. Martin and Lizetta Norris on January 21.

The Farmers Elevator Co., of Gold field claims the sum of $347. 62 due from Homer Kennedy for grain and other feed sold him and has petitioned the court for a judgement in that amount. The same plaintiff is suing W. H. Ellsworth on a similar account, the amount due is alleged to be $1327.81.

Johnson & Rosecrans of Belmond rented a certain tract of land to John Groh for the sum of $720. Defendant raised sugar beets thereon and later is alleged to have sold the crop to the Northern Sugar Corp., without paying the sum due for rent, hence the suit. Under similar conditions this plaintiff hopes to recover $225 from Robt. Maitland.

Cap. Tyrrell Celebrates His 75th Birthday

Former Belmond Resident Has Enjoyable Time Greeting Many Old Friends.

OLDEST BROTHER PRESENT

Beaumont Enterprise: Hale and hearty and with all the activities of a man in the prime of life, Capt. W. C. Tyrrell greeted in person approximately 75 friends at his home, 1347 Calder avenue yesterday, who had called to pay their respects on his 75th birthday. Captain Tyrrell came to Beaumont 22 years ago, but in the intervening years' time has dealt with him gently and few of his old busiess associates and friends could tell a change from the time when he first became a factor in the development of the great southwest.

In addition to the large number of local callers and relatives from various sections of the country, Captain Tyrrell received many letters and telegrams of congratulations. He received them placidly for his health and activity father many returns of the day. Refreshments were served from 3:00 to 5:00 to all of his local friends by his daughter, Mrs. J. W. Garth, assisted by Miss Tassie Polk and Miss Ara Brooks.

Brother Is Guest

The dining room and reception hall were decorated with roses given to Captain Tyrrell by his friends. One of the pleasing features of the event to Captain Tyrrell was to have as his guest his elder brother, Perry Tyrrell, of Iowa, who is now 79 years of age. This was his first visit to Texas. Perry practically all his life has made a business of raising thorobred cattle, and at this time has one of the finest herds in the country.

Relatives present were Harry C. Tyrrell, of Tulsa and Will C. Tyrrell Jr., of Belmond, Iowa, sons of Captain Tyrrell; G. P. Tyrrell and wife, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the former, aged 79, being Captain Tyrrell's oldest brother; C. H. Tyrrell, Captain Tyrrell's youngest brother, and son, Clarence, of Sioux Rapids, Iowa; C. Field, a nephew of Captain Tyrrell and wife, of Beaumont, Tyrrell Garth grandson of Captain Tyrrell, and wife, of course, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Garth, son-in-law and daughter of Captain Tyrrell, who make their home with him.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Chronicle—One Hampton enterprise at least is doing its part to make business normal, and that is the Earl Ferris Nursery. Not only have prices on all lines of Nursery stock been cut to the bottom, but the management is making every effort to continue its gross business on the upward trend. The Earl Ferris Nursery is probably the largest employer of labor of any concern in Hampton, and also furnishes employment indirectly to many people, who are employed by others who furnish supplies to the nursery.

Just now the nursery is sending out one batch of printed supplies which will cost more money than the total gross year's business of many of the smaller business institutions of Hampton. It means business for the Hampton Post-office, too, and it was largely through the postal business of the Earl Ferris Nursery that Hampton was able to secure city mail delivery service a few years ago. The batch of advertising matter being sent out this week by the nursery would greatly surprise most people in Hampton. Over 200,000 pieces of mail are being sent to various parts of the country. In each enclosure is a special color work catalogue, a four page special price list folder, an order blank, and in many of them special circular letters are enclosed. A large force of girls have been at work the past two weeks, addressing, folding and enclosing the printed matter. The 200,000 envelopes required for the job take a postage bill of $2,000, which is more than some of the Hampton merchants spend in a whle year for advertising alone.

WILLIAM DOMINY

William Sherman Dominy was born in Freeden, LaSalle county, Illinois, Oct. 12, 1878, and died at the home off his brother John Dominy, at Goodell, Iowa, Jan. 27, 1922. A short service was held at the home on Monday afternoon by Rev. Leinbach, after which the body was taken to Windsor, Mo., for burial. Mr. Dominy had been in poor health for a number of years as a result of a sunstroke and this winter he had been very poorly and his brother John went to Missouri and brought him back with him so as to be able to give him the necessary care but death relieved him from his suffering. He leaves four children, his aged mother, three sisters and three brothers.

RECEIPE FOR KISSES

(Editors Note—A reader handed this in, and its so good we pass it along. Read directions carefully before using.)

To one piece of dark piazza, add a little moonlight, take for granted two people, press in two strong hands one small soft one, sift lightly two ounces of romance one of attraction, add a large measure of folding, stir in a floating muffle and one or two whispers, dissolve half a dozen glances in a well of silence, dust in a small quantity of hesitation, one ounce of resistance, two of yielding. Press the kisses on a flushed cheek or two lips, flavor with screams and set aside to cool. This will be extremely successful in any cimate and will keep for years if directions are carefully followed.

Care must be taken in measuring the ingredients as an over amount is apt to sour on the stomach and affect the heart.

Timothy and wild hay for sale, in good condition. Prices reasonable. Inquire M. Halfwassen, Palsville.

NEW POSTMASTER TO TAKE OFFICE SOON

The Independent is informed that R. C. Morse, our present popular and efficient postmaster, will be relieved of the duties of the office within a week or two, and the new Nasby, Wallace Ramsay, editor of the Herald-Press, will assume the charge. Mr. Ramsay, it is stated, has received his commission.

It is with sincere regret that the Independent sees Mr. Morse leave the office, and we believe that we express sentiment of the vast majority of the public. "Rufe" has given Belmond one of the best administrations of the office that the town has ever had; he has earnestly and patiently devoted his time and efforts, along with that of his office force, toward giving Belmond efficient and speedy service, and, in the language of the day, "he sure delivered the goods." The new postmaster is welcomed to the office with the assurance that the public generally will be willing to co-operate and help to keep for Belmond one of the best mail services that exist in the country. Mr Morse has not decided as yet what his future intentions are to be. The present office force will remain we are informed.

SUGAR CO. AFTER ACREAGE

The Iowa Valley Sugar Company is making efforts to secure additional working funds so that it may operate the factory at Belmond this fall; and as a necessary step in such efforts is trying to find out what acreage it could secure for 1922 if an acceptable beet contract was put into the field.

Owing to the still unsettled conditions in the sugar industry and in business generally, it is not possible to state absolutely, now, what prices will apply to the beet crop itself and to the supplies, etc., the company have to furnish. Only a few sugar companies in the country have come out with actual beet and labor contracts, because they hesitate to make definite offers until labor and material markets become more stable. Prices at which hand labor and seed can be furnished, and the cost of fertilizer that the company must buy from dealers, are still indifinite. The few factories that have put out a contract may have to alter some of their terms if other factories' figures prove to be quite different.

The element of tariff on imported sugar is a very significant one; and if the present rate is lowered it is probable that some companies will not attempt to run in 1922. This tariff matter is still pending at Washington, and sugar beet representatives are still urging Congress to protect the domestic industry at least as much as it has been the past few years.

Farmers in the Belmond's factory's territory have had two years of rather unfavorable conditions to combat: in 1920 with exceptional rains and an inadequate supply of hand labor, in 1921 with dry weather hindering the development of all crops. With normal weather conditions prevailing in 1922, with lower prices for seed, fertilizer and labor, this year's crop should show a worth-while profit.

It should be remembered that although 1921 did not bring much profit to beet raisers, its returns should not be compared with those from the same crop in other years, but with other crops grown last year. Almost without exception, the country over, beets were the only cash crop; and likewise they were about the only one that assured the farmer a definite price from the very day he planted his seed. In numerous cases, other crops were "held for a raise" (notably corn for two years); and were sold eventually for less than they cost to produce. With many crops it was true that prices were changing frequently—and usually were falling.

The raising of several thousand acres of beets within a radius of forty miles from Belmond, with its attendant disbursements for the crop, labor and merchandise; the larger number of people who will live in and around the several towns; and the general impetus that factory operations invariably give to town business: these influnces will materially benefit the communities that participate. There have been some merchantile losses, due to indiscreet extensions of credit, as well as misunderstandings; these were controllable and need not occur again. There have been losses on the part of farmers who expected to grow a crop of beets without using suitable ground, and without reasonable attention to preparation, hand-work, cultivation and harvesting. But these losses to merchants and farmers can be avoided by the exercise of diligence, by not undertaking too large an acreage, and by proper co-operation with the officials.

The company is circularizing farmers living within hauling distance of its dumps: to ascertain as early as possible the acreage it can write in case a definite contract is offered. The outcome of its efforts to run in 1922 wll very largely depend on the acreage showing made in the very near future. Farmers are urged to carefully consider their plans for 1922, whether they be owners or tenants, and let the company know how much of their land they will put into beets. The sooner these figures are known, the sooner will the company be able to say whether it can undertake another campaign.

With this situation before them, it is believed that business men in the several towns will realize the community of interest existing between general business as they represent it, and that of the sugar company in its special field.

Two Teams to Battle For Forensic Honors

Belmond To Meet School That Won From Them In Debate Last Year.

HAVE THE NEGATIVE SIDE

On Friday night, February 3 at eight o'clock the debating team from Storm Lake will meet our team. We have the negative side again, and that will make it easier for our team. Plan on hearing this debate. You will find it worth your while, and the school needs your support. The high school orchestra will play so you will hear some good music as well as the debate.

Thursday night of this week at 8 o'clock the Belmond basket ball teams will meet the Clarion boys and girls on the local floor. This game promises to be one of the fastest games of the season, for Clarion is out to win and will fight to the finish because Belmond defeated Clarion on their own floor Dec. 17.

We need boosters and backers. Come out and help us win the hardest game of the season.

There will be no Community Night this week, because of the Clarion-Belmond basket ball game on Thursday night.

Friday afternoon each high school in the county sent a representative here to decide on arrangements for the County Declamatory. It will be held at Eagle Grove on February 24. The following people were here: Supt. Prall, of Clarion Supt. Smyie, of Dows; Supt. Halliday, of Rowan; Miss Camp, H. S. Principal of Eagle Grove.

Division II of the Literary gave a program Friday afternoon. A very clever farce was given. The Literary also elected officers for the second semester, as follows:

Lee Lowenberg	President
Raphael Kernan	Vice President
Leona Smith	Secretary
Everett Parsons	Treasurer
Lewis Parsons	Sargeant at Arms
Mr. Christie	Critic

The Rowan girls met the Belmond girls on the home floor and were defeated by a score of 20 to 8. Rowan has a good girls team. They have a neat system of play which is not easy to break up. Their centers worried the Belmond girls considerably. The Rowan forwards gave the Belmond guards a good stiff workout and the visiting guards caused the home girls more work than just basket shooting. The Belmond girls put more pep and fight into this game than into any yet played. We are proud that Rowan complimented us on a good clean game. We can say the same of them and wish them all good luck and only one more defeat, and that when we play them at Rowan.

Monday night our boys defeated Rowan by a 32 to 13 score. The game was fast, but ragged. Our boys showed exceptional team work but lacked the punch to carry the ball thru for a basket. Frequent fumbles might be excused due to several sprained fingers among our boys. However, we hope to be in tip top condition for our big battle Thursday night with Clarion. Come and Boost.

The grade teachers ask the co-operation of parents in securing perfect attendance. It does not seem necessary that pupils should come to school five or ten minutes tardy practically every morning as is the case with a number of the pupils

Gay Bohning and Anna Steenblock visited the fifth grade Friday afteroon.

Miss Mary Barry visited First grade last Wednesday.

The Legion supper last Wednesday by the ladies of the Auxiliary was very successful, and netted the ladies about $85. Many compliments were heard of the "fine feed.

CLIPPINGS

The annual meeting of the Norway Rural Telephone Company was held last Saturday afternoon. The officers and directors were all re-elected. The financial conditions of the company is reported very good, considering the fact that the lines have been rebuilt during the past year and they start the new year with very good prospects.—Kanawha Reporter.

A wedding in which the cordial interest of a wide circle of acquaintances centered took place in Hampton Friday evening when Mrs. Mary L. Gillett, widow, became the bride of Mr. O. G. Reeve, widower. The marriage was a surprise to all but the closest friends of the couple. Rev. W. G. Crowder preformed the ceremony at the bride's home on West Seventh street at 6:30 o'clock in the presence of a few relatives and friends.

The contracting parties are pioneer residents of Franklin county and their families have always been the closest of friends. The news o theh mating is sure to please acquaintances of this estimable couple.—Recorder.

At a number of places thruout the central states, merchants are paying five cents over the market price for corn, taking it as cash in the purchase of all kinds of merchanise. It looks like this might be a good thing to try out in Hampton. The plan is to sell the corn at one of the elevators, and a creditslip is issued which is honored by any merchant. —Chronicle.

ago the Republican made a semi-weekly issue for several months, though this paper never stated that the change was a permanent one. It was dropped here because it did not pay. A canvass of the business houses of Humboldt showed just one—the Peoples State Bank—that felt able to spend any money in a semi-weekly paper. This paper later dropped the issue, and we believe the News will also drop it after a thorough trial. Semi-weekly papers are usually Jonahs.—Humboldt Republican.

The Wright County News, published at Clarion, Iowa, has changed its issue to twice a week, and will hereafter come out as a semi-weekly. It will be remembered that two years

On Friday evening Dows bowed to a double defeat at the hands of the Belmond teams aided and abetted by said refree. The girls game proved to be a one-sided affair with Mr. T., calling five times as many fouls on Dows as Belmond. The first half was closely contested until the last few minutes of play when our captain was removed becuse of an injury. In the second half the Belmond girls insisted on pushing and over-guarding while Mr. Official rested his loins, and the victors ran up a large score as a result. The second game proved to be an even-up battle until the last five minutes of the first half when the home team ran wild and increased their margin. Dows seemed to be waiting for the Belmond team to stop scoring rather than trying to make them stop and the half ended 16-4 for Belmond. In the second period Belmond was outplayed and Dows managed to win the half by a small margin, much too small to make the game close. The game promised to be interesting until the refree vowed that our players would be called right and left. Final score 22-11.—Advocate.

Oliver Brager was in yesterday and incidentally happened to tell us what the farmers out in his part of the country hve been doing the past two months to get their roads graveled. First he made a deal with the trustees of Concord Township and the townships just across the county line in Cerro Gordo County to pay half the expense of graveling the county line from the paved road north. Then he got the farmers to do the work for half price, with the understanding that every farmer who would go on the job and stay until it was finished was to have the road graveled in his driveway. This covers the county line from the pavement straighe north for three miles and some of the side roads, and they are all graveled in fine shape. Clifford Brager alone hauled 182 loads, and some others hauled nearly as much. The haulers were able to make about $2.00 per day with a team, the counties got the work done for about 35 cents a yard, and we have some more good roads. A good scheme the whole thing, we think.—Garner Signal.

Goodell School Notes.

Omi Byellland, Pearl Engeseth and Mildred Remer received the quarter holiday Friday.

In the semester exams Omi Byelland received the highest average in the eighth grade and Mildred Remer in the seventh.

The Klemme basket ball teams defeated the Goodell teams on the former's floor last Friday evening. The final score in the girls' game, which was very close and interesting, was 17 to 15. The boys' game was a little onesided, partly because of the Goodell team two boys could not play, and partly on account of the greasy and slippery floor. The game ended with a score of 33 to 20.

Monroes silent reading test which was given to the high slhool pupils two weeks ago gave some interesting results. John Miller received the highest mark in comprehension and Harold Savogue the highest in rate reading. Others that had good scores were Eddie Boller, Louise Mason, Carl Sandberg, Dorothy Allaben, Helma Burgess.

The basket ball game between Goodell and Garner was called off. Remember the game between Cyrstal Lake and Goodell on Friday night, Feb. 3.

Florence Mason has the highest average in the primary room for the last month.

The following were neither absent nor tardy the past month: Walter Boller, Carrol Cordes, and Naida Wesenberg.

The county nurse visited our school last week and many underweights showed a marked gain.

Eunice Wesenberg, Cholm Houghton and Lucile Boller received the quarter holiday in the grades.

Those receiving the highest average in the Intermediate room were Lucile Boller, Cholmondley Houghton and Daphne Houghton.

Hygiene is being taught in the sixth grade this semester instead of history.

HAMPTON HAS $70,000 FIRE LAST THURSDAY

The citizens of Hampton were rudely awakened from their slumbers at 3:45 this morning by the wail of the fire siren. Fire had been discovered in the basement of the American Railway Express Company's office on Reeve street, and by the time the alarm was turned in had made considerable headway. When the fire company arrived smoke was pouring forth from every door and window in the buiding and also from the openings in the adjoining buildings occupied by the Hampton Mercantile Co., and it was some time before the seat of the fire could be located. By five o'clock it seemed that all the actual fire had been extinguished, altho the smoke was still rooling out of the windos and the majority of the large crowd of sleepy-eyed citizens, who had assembled returned to their beds. However, the members of the fire department remained on the job to guard against any possible second breaking out of the flames.

About 6:00 o'clock the alarm was souded again. This time there was no trouble in locating the flames as practically the whole building was in flames, as well as the building of the mercantile store. Altho the firemen worked faithfully in their efforts to check the flames it was of no avail as the start the fire had made in the walls of the building was too great to be stopped.

The building was completely gutted in less than half an hour and about 6:30 the walls began to fall in and it was not long before the building was completely demolished.

The department store stock of the Hampton Mercantile Company was entirely lost and practically the only thing saved from either of the buildings was the ledgers of the Mercantile Company. The stock of the Mercantile Company was valued at approximately $40,000 and was covered by $26,500 insurance.

The local lodge of the I. O. O. F. which had its lodge rooms on the second floor of the Mercantile Building suffered a loss on all of its parts phernalia, most of which had only recently been purchased. However they had most of their loss covered by $1,400 insurance.

The building occupied by the express company was owned by J. E. Coonley and Dr. L. E. Haecker, and was covered by only $2,000 insurance. The two big rooms occupied by the Mercantile Company were owned by W. L. Robinson and S. A. McDowell, and were covered by about $4,000 insurance. Altogether the total loss on the stock and buildings will aggregate about $70,000.

The fire started from a bad flue in the furnace of the express office and as it was a veneered building the fire spread so rapidly fter it was once started that there was no possible way of checking it. When the fire made its second appearnce it was in the second story between the two buildings, which shos how the flames crept along the walls for some time before breaking out.---Hampton Chronicle.

PERK UP!

Your nose may be battered, your jawbone nicked,
Your visage may be a sight,
But always remember you're never licked
While you can stand and fight.
No matter how badly they mess your map,
It won't be beyond repair.
And there is still a chance that you ll win the scrap,
As long as the punch is there.

You'll make mistakes and you'll do things wrong,
The best of them always do;
But as soon as you get to going strong,
Your grit will see you through.
They smashed Paul Jones to a fare-you-well
But he didn't observe "good-night."
He merely paused in his tracks to yell
That he'd just begun to fight.

There'll be plenty of folks to peddle gloom,
There'll be plenty of folks to say
That they see the terrible day of doom
Hurrying on its way.
But the fellow who knows that the fight is hard,
And still has the nerve to grin,
And never gets rattled ad drops his guard,
Is the fellow that is going to win!

The evening was spent in pleasant games after which lovely refreshments were served. This was the gentlemens debut at showers and they seemed to enjoy themselves very much. The method of securing partners for supper caused much merriment as the ladies were obliged to place their hands thru a curtain for the gentlemen to choose. We think the gentlemen better study their wives hands in the future so fewer mistakes will be made. The happy couple were the recipients of many useful and beautiful presents. The hostess of the evening were Mesdames Ed Miller, Bert Pelly, Theo Hansen, S. B. Stout, Harold Gates, Guy Stumph, W. R. McCallum, George Aldrich and Miss Laura McCallum. MANY OUT FOR PATENTS

Meservey's inventors are busy, but the question just now is, who peeked; that is what is puzzling L. Jones and son and J. J. Reickens. They both have applied for a patent on a steel post. Both posts resemble each other in some respects; the result is that both parties have samples of their posts on the way to the patent office. The result is watched with interest. Each claim to have originated the idea and neither of the parties claim to have any knowledge of the other's affairs.

But the question of who peeked is still unsettled and unless some of our ameteur lawyers and judges are able to settle the question and fasten the guilt on the party that peeked— no doubt our district court will be asked to settle matters.

Henry H. Pals, a farmer living 3 miles south of Meservey has word from Washington that his patent on a swinging hog door has been allowed. Mr. Pals has had this door in use on his farm for some time and has found it to be of great value in keeping the draft out of his hog house. The door always remains closed except when a hog is passing thru, and is so arranged that it can be opened by a small hog and there is no danger of hurting the hog that may be following. The invention no doubt will find a ready sale as anything that will increase the health of the hog is worth looking into. He has had several offers from manufacturers but so far as we have learned he has not made any contract but is waiting for his final papers from Wshington. We have a cement block building that is vacant on the south side that could be used;; why not start the factory in Meservey?

Melvin Smith, our rural carrier, has applied for a patent on a coin holder for rural mail boxes. That looks as tho he was thru carrying mail if this is approved by the postal department.

Four patents being asked for at the same time from a small town is something unusual and here is hoping that they win out.

LOOKING BACKWARD ON IOWA'S HISTORY

[illegible] note—The following was given us by F. T. Meacham, and we believe it will interest many of our readers.)

"In 1846 probably nine-tenths of people lived in log cabins. The other fraction had houses of sawed native lumber, brick or stone. The cabin that had two rooms or an attic was regarded as an aristocratic residence. Thatched roofs still leaked and snow was driven through the crevices in the walls. There were no stoves, but open fire places, with chimneys built out of sticks plastered with mud.

"Doors had wooden hinges and they were locked with wooden latches inside. Pioneer hospitality, was proverbial and was expressed in the phrase which still endures, "The latch string hangs outside." The lat string was a cord which was passed through a hole in the door. At night it was pulled in and then the door was locked.

"Many plows still had wooden mole boards, and the cradle and the scythe were the reaping and mowing machines, except when oxen were used to tramp out the grain, after the manner of the ancients. Much corn was eaten parched. Flour and meal were sometimes made with a pestle or a coffee mill; but water mills were being built. Rye, parched and ground, was a substitute for coffee. Wild game was plentiful, but for their every day diet the people preferred pork. Corn bread and pork and rye coffee were long staples.

"All prices were low, due largely to lack of outside markets and transportation. Hogs were killed in the winter time and hauled to river ports in a frozen state. A dollar and a half a hundred pounds was a common price. Sheep were quoted at a dollar or so per head and cattle at eight and ten dollars. All transportation was by wagon, or boats. Stage lines were opened all over the state. Schools were few and poor and the preachers were pioneer circuit riders.

"The pioneers danced a great deal and one judge of the supreme court had a reputation as a fiddler for such occasions. Whiskey was common and cheap, often as low as thirty cents per gallon. A grocery store was a place where whiskey was sold at retail. Clothing was home spun and cotton goods were dyed in native preparatins, such as walnut, sumac and so on.

"Life was full of hardships, but the people were hardy and most of them lived happy lives. Now, with ten thousand miles of railroads, telegraph and telephone lines and a half a million automobiles the people are, perhaps, no happier. The golden age is still either in the past or in the future. The hope that things will be better is forever new. The discontent and the hope, both ages old, are the things that spell progress.

"The seventy-five years of statehood are a rich inheritance to all Iowans. They are proud in achievements and records. Iowa has furnished her share of great statesmen to the nation, Grimes and Kirkwood, Harlan and Allison, an outstanding national orator, Dolliver, and the man who created the national department of agriculture, James (Tama Jim) Wilson. The state took a glorious part in the Civil War and played her part well in the Spanish and World wars.

"The three hundred miles between the two great rivers of the continent, and balanced so equitably between the cold of the north, and the heat of the south, constitute the richest and most productive part of the United States. The state is still in her agricultural and industrial infancy. In the future even more than in the past Iowa ought to be an empire of wealth and prosperity and may it also be the seat of human achievements and human happiness.

CHAPIN FARMER TOPS CHICAGO MARKET

Sylvester A. Deam, of Chapin, brought home the record sale for cattle at the Chicago market last monday. He was there with a load of choice Herefords, which he has been feeding, a large part of the time on rough feed. He purchased the cattle one year ago at ten cents a pound, and at one time it looked like he was to get his "trimming" with most every other cattle feeder. However the cattle brought $9.50 in Chicago last Monday, topping the market over all other sales by thirty-five cents, and as a result Mr. Deam did not have to put the returns from that car load of cattle on the red side of the ledger.

The average weight was 1,650, a good gain made during the year, and besides this gain Mr. Deam cashed in on a fine drove of hogs which have been running with cattle.—Hamptn Chronicle.

What Men Know, but Don't Tell Their Wives

Every man knows that a woman can make a dollar go twice as far as he can, but will he admit it? He also knows that he ought to see to it that the wife has the ready money to buy the Groceries and Dry Goods, then her natural gift of driving a bargain will exert itself and she will buy the Dry Goods and Groceries where she can buy the best for the least---at this store, of course---where quality is unquestioned and prices are an incentive.

School Notes.

Last week there was an epidemic of colds among us and consequently our absent marks were increased.

We commend the parents for keeping children at home, when they are suffering from colds. Nothing among children is more treacherous thro bad colds. Remember the prolonged seige that little George Polmateer has recently passed through as a result of a cold at the beginning. By the way little George has again re-entered school.

Please do not think that we are a war like, when you observe the number of soldier uniforms being worn by our school boys. Like a bomb from an unknown source, a catalog from a mail order house in Pennsylvania, dropped into our midst—hence the epidemic of soldier suits. A few of the boys discarded the uniforms when the French Cabinet resigned and war talk became pretty loud.

Our next picture show will be Tuesday Feb. 7. The films are entitled "Hooping Up", showing process in barrel manufacturing; "Romance of Glass," manufacturing of glass from the early times to the present and a comedy, "Too Young to Marry."

Last Monday night Miss Wilma Foughty entertained her high school friends by giving a party at her home. Those present report an unusually good time. The time for gohome and Alva's father came all too soon.

We play Latimer next Saturday night at Latimer. We are sorry that we were unable to play Rowan last Friday night on account of one or two of our players on each team being unable to play.

Mr. Jerry Beenen a former Alexander high school student, has disposed of his interest in the T. C. Johnson general store at Latimer. We understand that Mr. Bohlen takes Jerry's place. By the way, Mr. Bohlen is one of our former pupils. It does us good to see our boys taking their places in the social and business world.

Last Saturday, Mrs. A. D. Mohr our mathametic teacher took cursory observation of the schools at Chapin, Sheffield, Rockwell and Mason City.

Last Friday afternoon the 7th 8th and high school pupils held their first convention for the nomination of officers. They acquitted themselves just like real voters and ran true to voting for the canidate whose name appears first on the list.

"What can you tell us about Davenport? asked one of our geography teachers, directing the question to a bright faced boy whom we call Johnie for convenience. "Well, I can tell you what papa says but I hate to say some of the words." It is well enough that the quick wit of the teacher grasped the situaion and excused the pupil from reciting. The chances are we could not have printed what papa said. The teacher of course meant Davenport, Iowa. The youngster had in mind Davenport of telephone fame. Teaching school is not such a dry job after all.

OBITUARY

William Reed was born on October 1st, 1850 at Woodbine, Ill. He was joined in marriage to Carrie Buss on December, 15, 1880. After their marriage they lived in Woodbine, Ill. seven years, and from there they moved to Lena, Illinois, where they lived 11 years. It was in the year of 1900 that they came to Axelander, Iowa.

To Mr. and Mrs. Reed were born eight children, five of whom have already gone before to meet him on Yonder shore.

Three died in infancy, Stella at the age of 18 years and Lottie Schomburg at the age of 25 years.

Mr. Reed joined the Methodist church at Holly Grove, Ill., in 1895 and after he came to Alexander united with the Congregational church to which he has been faithful unto death.

Mr. Reed's health had been failing for some time, while however he tried to be faithful to his duties and never was heard to complain much, yet his friends and those who knew him could see that he was suffering. His sickness was heart trouble and was three weeks ago that he was confined to his bed and after much patient suffering he passed away on January 25th at the age of 71 years, 3 months and 24 days.

He leaves to mourn his death his wife and three children; Lee, Leslie and Mrs. Fred Dunn, besides these, those who share their grief are six grand-children and three brothers Amos of Stockton, Ill., Bian of Elizabeth, Ill., and Lee of Bird Island Minnesota, who at this time is also seriourly ill.

Thus one of Alexander's foremost citizens has gone beyond; who is willing to step into line and take his place? He is one who will be missed in this community, we will miss him among his friends, e will miss his cheerful words and we will miss him in the House of the Lorl. The whole community shares the sorrow of his loved ones and extend their sympathy to them.

Out there where the winds are blowing we have committed his body to Mother Earth with the assurance that his soul has gone home to Him that gave it home to that city of which the Book tells us, home to that place for which we are all longing.

"I am going to a city where the living never die, where no sickness and no sorrow can molest, From this body to release me, He is speeding from on high, He will greet me and escort me to my rest.

The funeral services were held at the Congregational church and conducted by Rev, A. D. Mohr. The text was taken from, Rev. 22:14.

HARD TIMES IN THE PAST

(Monitor.)

Newspaper files make interesting reading and furnish the only complete history of the community. The Monitor is entering on its fifty third year, and practically all of its files are intact. It has been our purpose to reprint items this winter which would be of interest. A review of the file of 1897, January to March inclusive, is particularly pat just now, as conditions then were very similar to those prevailing at the present time. A stormy presidential campaign the fall previous retired Cleveland from the presidency, and resulted in the victory of McKinley, republican, over Bryan, candidate of the free silver wing of the democratic party.

Financial conditions were very unstable and bank failures numerous. The farmers of this section had also troubles of their own that year, since the country was full of corn whose market price in Chicago was 22 1-2 cents. Worse than that much of it was soft and unfit for shipping. A Rowan buyer took 3000 bushels one Saturday in February at ten cents. Chicago quotions for butter were: creamery, 14 to 20 cents; dairy, 9 to 17 cents; fresh eggs, 16 to 17; hogs, $3.20 to $3.55; cattle, $3 to $5 potatoes per bushel, 17 to 27 cents; wheat, 72, oats 16. One advantage the consumer of a quarter century ago enjoyed, was lower prices for most commodities than we pay at present. The shoe store advertised its best wares at $3.19; in view of hard times the restaurant reduced the prices of meals from 25 to 20 cents. Coal operators in the Des Moines district engaged in a price war which reduced that commodity from $2 to $1.50 and $1.25 at the mines.

The farmers met and passed resolutions. There were local meetings at Rowan and Cornelia and a county meeting at Clarion. At the latter J. G. Mechem presided, and T. P. Harrington acted as secretary. It was the sentiment of these meetings that the farmer was not enjoying the profits of his labor. That he was being plundered by organized greed and legalized robbery. The resolutions protested against high freight rates, against code revision by the legislature against trusts and combines, against the landlord collecting rent to exceed one-half the market price of the renter's crp. The meetings are favored tax revision, reduction of officials' salaries, the taxation of real estate mortgages and exemption of corresponding indebtedness.

At that time J. D. Rowen of Clarion, was state senator, and S. N. Hinman of Belmond representative. The latter was present at the county meeting of the farmers, and explained the progress being made in the legislature in the enactment of laws in which farmers were especially interested. There was an extra session that year to accomplish a code revision, and many complaints were made about this added expense, although it was generally conceeded the resulting reforms and economies were mainly acceptable.

Legislators and other public officials were called upon then, as now, to do a deal of explaining, especially in matters of finance. As one editorial expresses it. "The harder the times, the more interest in the question of taxation. When one's income is boomy, and a profitable rush of business is demanding constant attention, there is little time for disposition to grumble about taxes. The money to pay them comes easy and it goes easy, but when a man has nothing to do but sit and figure how much he is losing every day he groans internally, infernally and enternally and insists on some reform which will give relief."

POOL HALL AT KLEMME ROBBED

Times—While the proprietor,John Etchen, of the pool hall, was at supper Saturday evening betwween six and seven o'clock, a thief, or thieves, entered his place of business through a window and rifled the cash register of $15.00 in bills and silver. They did not take the small change or checks, but overlooked some bills which were among the checks in the cash drawer.

They left the building through a rear door. This is the first instance of petty robbery reported here for several years.

Taste is a matter of tobacco quality

We state it as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield are of finer quality (and hence of better taste) than in any other cigarette at the price.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. – Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is skipper, Neils Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.–With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.–A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.–Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.–Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.–The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.–Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII. – Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.–Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer. Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

CHAPTER X.–Our three adventurers form a "syndicate," with the gunboat, which they have renamed the Maggie II, as their base of operations. They sail for the South Sea islands, where they plan to obtain valuable black coral.

"Let's put back to San Diego bay," quavered Captain Scraggs. "I'll be durned if I relish the idee o' losin' the Maggie."

"Too late," said the philosophical Gibney. "We're in Mexican waters now, and she can cut us off from the bay. The only thing we can do is to run for it and try to lose her after dark. Tell the engineer to crowd her to the limit. There ain't much wind to speak of, so I guess we can manage to hold our own for a while. Nevertheless, I've got a hunch that we'll be overhauled. Of course, you ain't got no papers to show, Scraggs, and they'll search the cargo, and confiscate us, and shoot the whole bloomin' crowd of us. I bet a dollar to a doughnut that fellow Lopez sold us out, after the fashion of the country. I can't help thinkin' that that gunboat was there just a-waitin' for us to show up."

For several minutes Mr. Gibney continued to study the gunboat until there could no longer be any doubt that she intended to overhaul them. He made out that she had a long gun for'd, with a battery of two one-pounders on top of her house and something on her port quarter that looked like a Maxim rapid-fire gun. About twenty men, dressed in white cloth, could be seen on her decks.

Presently Mr. Gibney was interrupted by Captain Scraggs pulling at his sleeve.

"You was a gunner once, wasn't you, Gib?" said Captain Scraggs in a trembling voice.

"You bet I was," replied Mr. Gibney. "My shootin' won the trophy three times in succession when I was on the old Kearsarge. If I had one good gun and a half-decent crew, I'd knock that gunboat silly before she knew what had hit her."

"Gib, I've got an idee," said Captain Scraggs.

"Out with it," said Mr. Gibney cheerfully.

"There was four little cannon lowered into the hold the last thing before we put on the main hatch, and the ammunition to load 'em with is stowed in the after hold and very easy to get at."

Mr. Gibney turned a beaming face to the skipper, reached out his arms, and folded Captain Scraggs in an embrace that would have done credit to a grizzly bear. There were genuine tears of admiration in his eyes and in his voice when he could master his emotions sufficiently to speak.

"Scraggsy, old tarpot, you've been a long time comin' through on the imagination, but you've sure arrived with all sail set. I always thought you had about as much nerve as an oyster, but I take it all back. We'll get out them two little jackass guns and fight a naval battle, and if I don't sink that Mexican gunboat, and save the Maggie, feed me to the sharks, for I won't be worthy of the blood that's in me. Pipe all hands and lift off that main hatch. Reeve a block and tackle through that cargo gaff and stand by to heave out the guns."

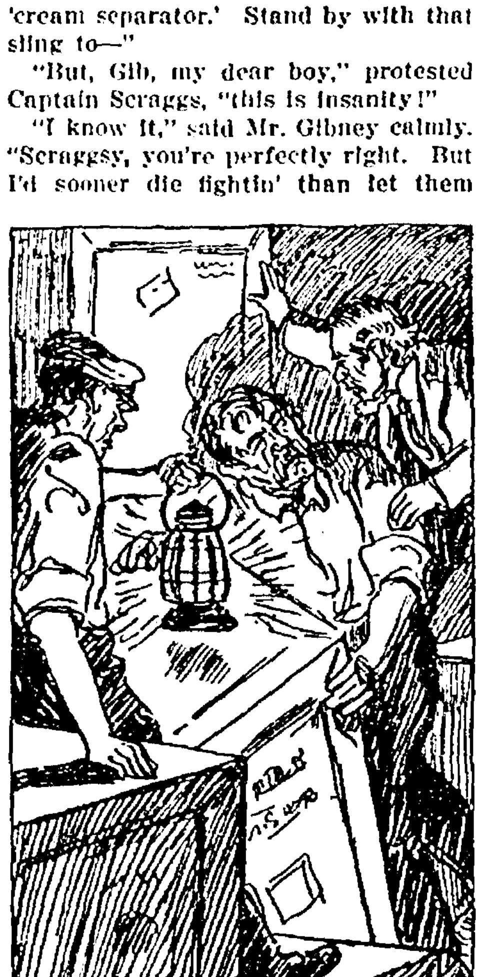
But Captain Scraggs had repented of his rash suggestion almost the moment he made it. Only the dire necessity of desperate measures to save the Maggie had prompted him to put the idea into Mr. Gibney's head, and when he saw the avidity with which the latter set to work clearing for action, his terror knew no bounds.

"Oh, Gib," he wailed, "I'm afraid we better not try to lick that gunboat after all. They might sink us with all hands."

"Rats!" said Mr. Gibney, as he leaped into the hold. "Bear a light here until I can root out the wheels of these guns. Here they are, labeled 'cream separator.' Stand by with that sling to—"

"But, Gib, my dear boy," protested Captain Scraggs, "this is insanity!"

"I know it," said Mr. Gibney calmly. "Scraggsy, you're perfectly right. But I'd sooner die fightin' than let them stand me up agin a wall in Ensenada. We're filibusters, Scraggsy, and we're caught with the goods. I, for one, am goin' down with the steamer Maggie, but I'm goin' down fightin' like a bear."



"I'd Sooner Die Fightin' Than Let Them Stand Me Up Agin a Wall in Ensenada."

"Maybe—maybe we can outrun her, Gib," half sobbed Captain Scraggs.

"No hope," replied Mr. Gibney. "Fight and die is the last resort. She's eight miles astern and gainin' every minute, and when she's within two miles she'll open fire. Of course, we won't be hit unless they've got a Yankee gunner aboard."

"Let's run up the Stars and Stripes and dare 'em to fire on us," said Captain Scraggs.

"No," said Mr. Gibney firmly, "my old man died for the flag an' I've sailed under it too long to hide behind it when I'm in Dutch. We'll fight. If you was ever navigatin' officer on a Colombian gunboat, Scraggs, you'd realize what it means to run from a Mexican."

Captain Scraggs said nothing further. Perhaps he was a little ashamed of himself in the face of Mr. Gibney's simple faith in his own ability; perhaps in his veins, all unknown, there flowed a taint of the heroic blood of some forgotten sea-dog. Be that as it may, something did swell in his breast when Mr. Gibney spoke of the flag and his scorning to hide behind it, and Scraggs' snaggle teeth came together with a snap.

"All right, Gib, my boy," he said solemnly, "I'm with you. Mrs. Scraggs has slipped her cable and there ain't nobody to mourn for me. But if we can't fight under the Stars and Stripes, by the tail of the Great Sacred Bull, we'll have a flag of our own," and leaving Mr. Gibney and the crew to get the guns on deck, Captain Scraggs ran below. He appeared on deck presently with a long blue burgee on which was emblazoned in white letters the single word Maggie. It was his own houseflag, and with trembling hands he ran it to the fore and cast its wrinkled folds to the breeze of heaven.

"Good old dishcloth!" shrieked Mr. Gibney. "She never comes down."

"D—d if she does," said Captain Scraggs profanely.

While all this was going on, a deckhand had reeved a block and tackle through the end of the cargo gaff and passed it to the winch. The two guns came out of the hold in jig time, and while Scraggs and one deckhand opened the after hold and got out ammunition for the guns, Mr. Gibney, assisted by the other deckhand, proceeded to put one of the guns together. He was shrewd enough to realize that he would have to do practically all of the work of serving the gun himself, in view of which condition one gun would have to defend the Maggie. He had never seen a mountain gun before, but he did not find it difficult to put the simple mechanism together.

"Now, then, Scraggsy," he announced cheerfully when the gun was finally assembled on the carriage, "get a sizeable timber an' spike it to the center o' the deck. I'll run the trail spade up against that cleat an' that'll keep the recoil from lettin' the gun go backward, clean through the opposite rail and overboard. Gimme a coupler gallons o' distillate an' some waste, somebody. This cosmoline's got to come out o' the tube an' out o' the breech mechanism before we commence shootin'."

The enemy had approached within three miles by the time the piece was ready for action. Under Mr. Gibney's instructions Captain Scraggs held the fuse setter in case it should be necessary to adjust with shrapnel. Mr. Gibney inserted his sights and took a preliminary squint. "A little different from gun-pointin' in the navy, but about the same principle," he declared. "In the army I believe they call this kind o' shootin' direct fire, because you sight direct on the target." He scratched his ingenious head and examined the ammunition. "Not a high explosive shell in the lot," he mourned. "I'll have to use percussion fire to get the range; then I'll drop back a little an' spray her with shrapnel. Seems a pity to smash up a fine schooner like that one with percussion fire. I'd rather tickle 'em up a bit with shrapnel an' scare 'em into runnin' away."

He got out the lanyard, slipped a cartridge in the breech, paused, and scratched his head again. His calm deliberation was driving Scraggs crazy. He reminded Mr. Gibney with some asperity that they were not attending a strawberry festival and for the love of heaven to get busy.

"I'm estimatin' the range, you snipe," Gibney retorted. "Looks to be about three miles to me. A little long, maebbe, for this gun, but—there's nothin' like tryin'," and he sighted carefully. "Fire," he bawled as the Maggie rested an instant in the trough of the sea—and a deckhand jerked the lanyard. Instantly Mr. Gibney clapped the long glass to his eye.

"Good direction—over," he murmured. "I'll lay on her waterline next time." He jerked open the breech, ejected the cartridge case, and rammed another cartridge home. This shot struck the water directly under the schooner's bow and threw water over her forecastle head. Mr. Gibney smiled, spat overboard, and winked confidently at Captain Scraggs. "Like spearin' fish in a bath tub," he declared. He bent over the fuse setter. "Corrector three zero," he intoned, "four eight hundred." He thrust a cartridge in the fuse setter, twisted it, slammed it in the gun, and fired again. "Over," he growled.

Something whined over the Maggie and threw up a waterspout half a mile beyond her.

"Dubs," jeered Mr. Gibney, and sighted again. This time his shrapnel burst neatly on the schooner. Almost simultaneously a shell from the schooner dropped into the sacked coal on the forecastle head of the Maggie and enveloped her in a black pall of smoke and coal dust. Captain Scraggs screamed.

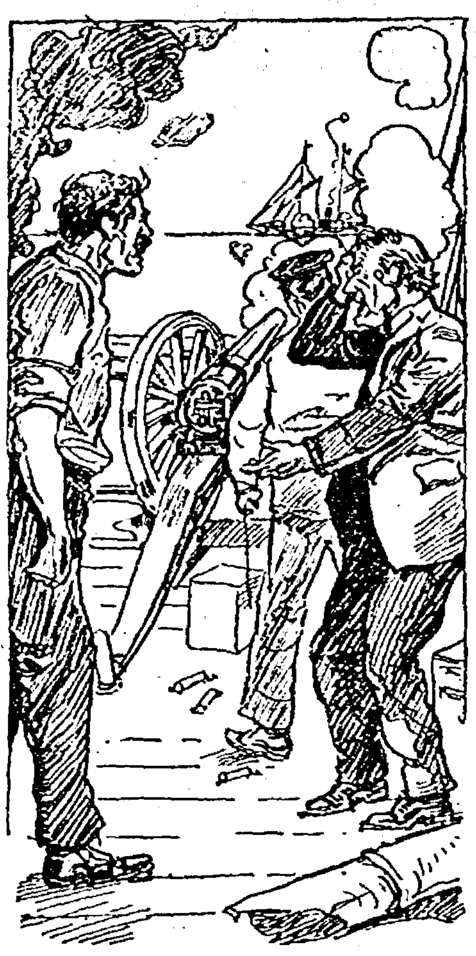
"Tit for tat," the philosophical Gibney reminded him. "We can't expect to get away with everything, Scraggsy, old kiddo." The words were scarcely out of his mouth before the Maggie's mainmast and about ten feet of her ancient railing were trailing alongside. Mr. Gibney whistled softly through his teeth and successfully sprayed the Mexican again. "It breaks my heart to ruin that craft's canvas," he declared, and let her have it once more.

"My Maggie's tail is shot away," Captain Scraggs wailed, "an' I only rebuilt it a week ago." Three more shots from the long gun missed them but the fourth carried away the cabin, leaving the wreck of the pilot house, with the helmsman unscathed, sticking up like a sore thumb.

"Turn her around and head straight for them," the gallant Gibney roared. "She's a smaller target comin' bows on. We're broadside to her now."

"Gib, will you ever sink that Greaser?" Captain Scraggs sobbed hysterically.

"Don't want to sink her," the supercargo retorted. "She's a nice little schooner. I'd rather capture her. Maybe we can use her in our business, Scraggsy," and he continued to shower the enemy with high bursting shrapnel.



"My Maggie's Tail Is Shot Away."

When the two vessels were less than two miles apart the one-pounders came into action. It was pretty shooting and the wicked little shells ripped through the old Maggie like buckshot through a roll of butter. Mr. Gibney slid flat on the deck beside his gun and Captain Scraggs sprawled beside him.

"A feller," Mr. Gibney announced, "has got to take a beatin' while lookin' for an openin' to put over the knockout blow. If the old Maggie holds together till we're within a cable length o' that schooner an' we ain't all killed by that time, I bet I'll make them skunks sing soft an' low."

"How?" Captain Scraggs chattered.

"With muzzle bursts," Mr. Gibney replied. "I'll set my fuse at zero, an' at point-blank range I'll just rake everything off that schooner's decks. Guess I'll get half a dozen cartridges set an' ready for the big scene. Up with you, Admiral Scraggs, an' hold the fuse setter steady."

"I'm agin war," Scraggs quavered. "Gib, it's sure h—ll."

"Rats! It's invigoratin', Scraggsy. There ain't nothin' wrong with war, Scraggsy, unless you happen to get killed. Then it's like cholera. You can cure every case except the first one."

They had come inside the minimum range of the Mexican's long gun now, so that only the one-pounders continued to peck at the Maggie. Evidently the Mexican was as eager to get to close quarters as Mr. Gibney, for he held steadily on his course.

"Well, it's time to put over the big stuff," Mr. Gibney remarked presently. "Here's hopin' they don't pot me with rifle fire while I'm extendin' my compliments."

As the first muzzle burst raked the Mexican Captain Scraggs saw that most of the terrible blast of lead had gone too high. Nevertheless, it was effective, for to a man the crews of the one-pounders deserted their posts and tumbled below; seeing which the individual in command lost his nerve. He was satisfied now that the infernal Maggie purposed ramming him; he had marveled that the filibuster should use shrapnel, after she had ranged with shell (he did not know it was percussion shrapnel) and in sudden panic he decided that the Maggie, mortally wounded, purposed getting close enough to sink him with shell-fire if she failed to ram him; whereupon the yellow streak came through and he waved his arms frantically above his head in token of surrender.

"She's hauled down her rag," shrieked Scraggs. "Be merciful, Gib. There's men dyin' on that boat."

"Lay alongside that craft," Mr. Gibney shouted to the helmsman. The schooner had hove to and when the Maggie also hove to some thirty yards to windward of her Mr. Gibney informed the Mexican, in atrocious Spanish well mixed with English, that if the latter so much as lifted his little finger he might expect to be sunk like a dog. "Down below, everybody but the helmsman, or I'll sweep your decks with another muzzle burst," he thundered.

The Mexican obeyed and Captain Scraggs went up in the pilot house and laid the terribly battered Maggie alongside the schooner. The instant she touched, Mr. Gibney sprang aboard, quickly followed by Captain Scraggs, who had relinquished the helm to his first mate.

Suddenly Captain Scraggs shouted, "Look, Gib, for the love of the Lord, look!" and pointed with his finger. At the head of the little iron-railed companion-way leading down into the engine room a man was standing. He had a monkey wrench in one hand and a greasy rag in the other.

Mr. Gibney turned and looked at the man.

"McGuffey, for a thousand!" he bellowed, and ran forward with outstretched hand. Captain Scraggs was at Gibney's heels, and between them they came very nearly dislocating Bartholomew McGuffey's arm.

"McGuffey, my dear boy," said Captain Scraggs. "Whatever are you a-doin' on this heathen battleship?"

"Me!" ejaculated Mr. McGuffey, with his old-time deliberation. "Why, I'm the chief engineer of this craft. I had a good job, too, but I guess it's all off now, and the Mexican government'll fire me. Say, who chucked that buckshot down into my engine room?"

FARM BUREAU ITEMS OF INTEREST

Shipment of Several Dozen Of Woolen Blankets Has Been Received

A shipment of woolen blankets consisting of several dozen high quality blankets, has just arrived at the county agents office and is being distributed to those farmers who placed orders after shipping their 1921 crop of wool. Arrangements were made with the Iowa Fleece wool Grower's Association through the county agents office for having the virgin wool made into woolen blankets and those who have made use of their wool in this way are highly pleased with the quality of the blankets which have arrived. This method of having wool made into such articles which are useful to the home has been very practical, especially since the price of wool was at such a low mark last fall. This is one method of having a low priced product converted into something which is useful to the farmer and producer.

Successful Meetings Held.

A series of meetings covering the entire week with two meetings per day, one in the afternoon and one in the evening, was completed Saturday night, February 4th, when the last meeting was held in Vernon township.

A. J. Shinn, of Woodbine, Harrison county, a practical farmer who owns and operates a six hundred acre farm near Logan was the speaker at these meetings. Mr. Shinn came to Wright county as an authorized speaker of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation and succeeding in giving out information which was very convincing as the accomplishments of the State and National Farm Bureau Federations. Mr. Shinn's practical experience as a farmer and his convincing manner held the attention of his listeners in every meeting which was held. Mr. Shinn is not an orator but simply a farmer who knows the work of the farm bureau federation from a practical standpoint and who has made a study of it from A. to Z.

According to Mr. Shinn the criticisms which are being made against the farm bureau and its activities are the result of one of three things: 1. Lack of information. 2. Misinformation. 3. Lack of interest. He made an urgent plea to every farm bureau member who heard him to be sane and sensible in forming his opinions in regard to the farm bureau federation and not be led astray by radicalism which is presenting itself in many different forms and through many sources.

Clarion had quite a bit of excitement last week, when blood hounds were secured to trail some would-be robbers, who were scared away before they could steal a lot of valuable furs. The hounds trailed them to the railroad tracks, where they lost the scent, the would-be thieves probably taking the rear end of a freight out of town.

The meeting last Friday evening of the good fellowship club was very well attended, over fifty of the local citizens being present. This, considering, the blizzard that was raging was an exceptional attendance, and no one who was present had cause to regret it. A short program was given before the address, Albert Chamberlin and O. L. Varland rendering two very much appreciated solos. Following this, the address of the evening was given by Rev. F. E. Drake, pastor of St. Mark's Episcopal church, Fort Dodge. Rev. Drake fully lived up to the expectations of the audience, and to the record made at his former visit. His address was pronounced one of the best yet, and he kept the crowd in an uproar from start to finish. While those present knew Rev. Drake had a limitless fund of stories, he seemed to have gathered another large store in addition, and he entertained his audience with some sound, substantial facts and reasoning which he drove home with the humor. The usual "feed" was enjoyed and an hour or more spent in a social smoker. Altogether the meeting was pronounced a huge success..

The next meeting of the club will be held on February 15th at which time it is expected that Clarence H. Hanson, of Fort Dodge, candidate to succeed Judge Wright in the district court, will speak. Mr. Hanson is pronounced an able and forceful speaker, and the evening will be worth attending.

March 1st Judge Fry will be the speaker, according to present plans.

HAVE LIVING COSTS DECREASED?

The Independent recently made a canvass of a number of the stores in Belmond, and obtained some interesting figures regarding the reduction in various commodities in Belmond during the past year. The figures given are those at which the respective articles were sold at retail in January 1921, and January 1922, and show the reduction made in the retail price in the twelve months. Prices given are the average, being arrived at from several different prices on each article. Next week we will present an article giving the prices received by farmers last January and this, on the various farm products.

Article	One Year Ago	This Year
Flour	$ 3.50	$ 2.40
Potatoes	1.50	1.75
Post Toasties	.22½	.15
Sugar	11.50	6.50
Eggs	.71	.30
Butter	.60	.32½
Ham (Smoked)	.50	.35
Bacon	.50	.32½
Beefsteak	.32½	.25
Lard	.25	.16½
Suit of Men's Clothes	65.00	45.00
Men's Dress Shoes	9.50	6.50
Silk Ties	3.50	1.50
Work Shoes	4.50	3.00
Gingham	.25	.25
Percales	.30	.20
Muslin	.20	.15
Tennis Flannel	.25	.15
Washing Machines	108.00	70.00
Heating Stoves	45.00	30.00
Cook Stoves	130.00	100.00

The above prices are per pound, yard, etc., and the hardware the average on electric washers, ranges and best grade heaters. In furniture, clothing, hardware, the percentage of reduction locally is, taking the lines straight thru:

Furniture	37 1-2
Clothing	33 1-3
Hardware	30

Groceries, on the average, were hard to figure, as there are many "wildcat" varieties on the market which fluctuate the prices, but generally taken the average drop is from 30 to 35 per cent. Everyday commodities were taken from each line, and a fair idea can be gained of the reduction in living costs in Belmond from the figures given.

Clarion Cagers Go Down to Defeat Before Belmond

Two Local Teams Take Two Games Thru Speed And Better Team Work.

BOYS WIN 32-18; GIRLS 17-2

Last Friday evening the Belmond high school basket ball teams, boys' and girls, took the county seat cagers into camp in two fast and exciting, but easy, games. It was simply a case of too much speed, the home teams moved too fast and passed the ball too quick for their opponents, who, however, put up a hard fight

The girls' game, played first, was too one-sided to be interesting, the Belmond girls taking the game 17 to 2, the two points for Clarion being made on free throws. Speed, team work and caging ability was the whole story. The boys' game was a whiz of speed from start to finish, and the local boys had the speed. While the final result was 32 to 18, the 14 points difference in the score does not tell the hard fight the Clarion boys put up, especially in the second half. The two games were decidedly interesting and worth while, and the good sized crowd present had the worth while of their money. The Belmond teams are a couple of fast outfits, and are making a record the school and town can be proud of.

The next hard fight will be on next Tuesday, when the two teams from Garner come down after the scalps of the Belmonders. Do they get it?

FORESTER'S HOLD ANNUAL BALL WEDNESDAY EVE.

The Foresters held their Annual ball last evening, and while the Independent goes to press too early to give an account of the affair, we do not hestitate to say that it was undoubtedly a success as these affairs are always of interest to the entire community and are largely attended. The ladies of the St. Francis church served a supper at five o'clock, and at 11 p. m. on a midnight supper was served. The dance was held during the evening, and we venture to say was well attended. A more detailed report of the affair will be give in the next issue of the Indeptndent.

The groom's parents and the parents and brother of the bride were present. The couple will reside on a farm near Renwick, and are on a short honeymoon to Des Moines.

How About Band For Belmond This Summer?

Some Move Should Be Made At Once If Belmond Plans On Summer Concerts.

MUST CUT AMOUNT IN HALF

What about a band for Belmond this coming summer? Are we going to have one? If we are, is it not about time that some move was being made to line up one, or to at least see whether the band boys who have been favoring us for several years are willing to play again? The Independent is inclined to think that every business man in Belmond wants the band, but it is the almost universal sentiment that they will not put up the same amount of money as they did last year. In fact, we are inclined to believe that the amount will be just about half of last year's quota. Will the band boys play? And will they play for this sum? Belmond cannot afford to be without the band; there is no question of that. The municipal tax is the only logical solution of financing a band; the business man cannot be expected to carry the burden always; but this tax, should it be called and passed will not help us with a band this year. We need one; need to get busy NOW, unless Belmond is to be so dead this summer that every depot will be a tombstone and every road lead to the cemetery. What about it? The business men will put up $1,000; will the band play? Lets hear from both sides before it is too late.

GARNER AGITATING A LOWER LIGHT RATE

Article Printed In The Signal Brings Three Column Reply By Electric Company.

Up at Garner they seem to be having more or less of a dispute over the rates that shall be paid for electric service. Garner, like Belmond, is supplied from the Iowa Falls Electric Company, and the Signal in a recent article gave figures on rates paid in various towns, for service, which brought back a three-column reply in the way of paid advertisement from the company, in which the company states that they offered Garner the Belmond rate, which it appears is lower and as we get it, it was not accepted, this offer being made some time ago. The company gives towns who pay a higher rate than Garner. The Belmond rate is the first 20 K. W. H. at 16c, the next 20 at 13c, and all over 40 at 9c.

Belmond High Wins Debate From Storm Lake Friday

Local School Wins Another Round In Battle For State Championship.

DECISION IS UNANIMOUS

B. H. S. added another victory to the list for the year when on last Friday evening our debating team defeated the Storm Lake team by a 3 to 0 decision. Both teams were well prepared and displayed ability in the art of debating. The interest and enthusiasm of the Belmond team was one of the outstanding features throughout the debate. The same question will be debated by our team February 17, when we meet the Harris H. S. team at Harris.

Tuesday night February 14, the Garner High School will send its boys and girls basket ball teams to Belmond to play our teams.

The Garner Girls Team is one of the fastest teams in this part of the state, having entered and won eleven games. Our girls have lost but one game, hence a "Battle Royal" is promised.

Our boys won on the Garner floor two weeks ago, but Garner's star player, Kris, was not in the game. Garner won from Kanawha by a good margin last Friday. Hence, the boys game will not be slow. Only three more games this year. Don't miss it.

Belmond girls won from the Clarion girls in an easy game last Thursday night. Through the game Clarion forwards failed to make a single field basket. Their two points were made from the foul line. Martin of Goldfield refereed. He sees too many fouls to permit as fast a game as has been played by the girls, but it is hoped our team will soon be playing the kind of basket ball which will premit a fast game. We like this work. It makes for clean ball.

Last Thursday night the Belmond basket ball fans had a chance to see the best basket ball game ever played on the local floor. Clarion, having spent the entire week at stiff practice, was in her prime and ready to fight and win. The Belmond boys altho suffering from slight injuries received in the Garner and Rowan games were full of fight and determined to take the game from Clarion.

The game opened at lightning speed, Clarion scoring first on Scott's long basket from the center of the floor. In rapid succession, Madsen dribbled through Hill, Clarion's Center, pivoted Crabtree, Clarion's right guard, and shot a beautiful basket, drawing two free throws from Crabtree in his fruitless attempt to stop our speedy forward. T. Johnson, throwing one of the two attempts at the free throw line, gave Belmond the lead which was never overcome.

Every player on our team played a steller brand of ball, both on defense and offense. Madsen was by far the outstanding pointgetter, but the guarding of Vestweber and Christie, along with Tyrrel's and Johnson's ability to follow the ball and feed Madsen, made it possible for Belmond to win 32-18.

Line up as follows:

Belmond		Clarion
Madsen	RF	Scott
Tyrrell	LF	Shupe
Vestweber	C	Hill
Christie	RG	Crabtree
T. Johnson	LG	Crabtree

Substitutes: L. Parsons for Tyrrell, Shupe for Crabtree, Tyrrell for L. Parsons, E. Parsons for Christie, L. Parsons for Vestweber.

Field Goals: Madsen 7, Scott 3, Tyrrell 2, Christie 2, Hill 2. Johnson; L. Parsons: E. Parsons; Shupe, free throws, Johnson 8 out of 12, Scott 6 out of 17.

The second teams play their return game at Klemme on Wednesday afternoon Feb. 8.

Mrs. Bert Anfinson, Mrs. H. F. Luick and Mr. Herman Schultz were kindergarten visitors the past week.

Mrs. W. H. Ramsay of Garner visited the First grade last Thursday morning.

Mrs. H. F. Luick and son Wilbur were fourth grade visitors Friday morning.

The Women's Foreign Missionary society met last week Thursday at the home of Mrs. Gowdy. A very interesting lesson was conducted by Mrs. Pullin, the subject being "Problems of India." Mrs. Ray Morris conducted the Mystery Box, which was "If every letter stood for one of the black-skinned pagans of Africa, how many Bibles would it take to represent these people?" The problem was worked on the blackboard by answers to 27 questions of the Mystery Box.

BLOOD HOUNDS TRAIL ROBBERS AT CLARION

Monitor—Between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock Monday night a bold attempt was made to gain an entrance to the basement at the H. H. Fritze residence in which was stored $2000 th of furs.

The would be thieves first entered the Fritze garage and from there were able to watch the movements of the family within the house. Soon after the hired man went to the stock yards to care for some hogs Mr. Fritze had occasion to go down town. Armed with a brace and bit the thieves entered the cellar way and proceeded to bore a series of holes in a circle just above the sliding bolt on the inside. When completed this circle would have admitted a man's hand and the rest of the trick would have been easy. The mink and other valuable furs were in piles and it would not have taken five minutes to clean out the whole lot.

Luckily Mr. Fritze came home at thise time. Mrs. Fritze was much frightened and told her husband of having heard noises coming from the direction of the basement for some time previous. Mr. Fritze turned on the lights in the cellar and proceeded to investigate. He found the door in the above condition and figures that if he had remained down town ten or fifteen minutes longer it would have proved an expensive stay.

He telephoned Sheriff Lang and had him send to Waterloo for the bloodhounds, which arrived on the early morning train. They were placed on the scent at the cellar door and immediately started for the street. The hunt ended in the Great Western yards near the round house at a point where one of the cabooses had stood all night. The car was attached to its regular north bound run a short time before the dogs arrived. The dogs were again placed on the trail and this time they followed the wagon road west to Holmes where they entered the Rock Island depot and seemed to lose the scent.

It was one of the most daring attempts at robbery in Clarion for many years and is generally believed to be the work of home talent.

PRICES TO CHANGE SOME

Farmers will benefit a little thru the decline of commodity prices in 1922, according to E. G. Nourse, agricultural economist at Iowa State College. However, Mr. Nourse says that he does not want to place too much faith in this fact. With purchasing power reduced both at home and abroad, no possible marketing system, co-operative or private, could perform the miracle of getting prices to a satisfactory level.

"The farmer, to get the best of his labors, will have to follow a program of efficient labor and keep production costs down so that low priced products will return a profit," says Mr. Nourse. "Study the management of the farm and reduce the unprofitable ventures. Do not experiment in crops at this time, but be sure of a fair return for labors expended.

"In marketing get the support of a local cooperative association and cut all needless and wasteful expenditures in selling."

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

CIGARET TAX BRINGING IN RETURNS

Tax payers of Iowa generally, and especially the members of the 9th General Assembly, will be interested to know the workings of the cigaret law, since July 4th, when it went into effect.

It has produced a good revenue and I think has resulted in prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors most thoroughly. When a report comes to us that a person or firm is thought to be evading the law, we immediately investigate and usually have a conviction within a week. The following figures and data will be interesting.

The total revenue received from sale of stamps, July 4th to January 1, is $324,074.00, from which we estimate that there will be at least a clear revenue of $50.000 per month or $600,000 a year, which will go into the General Revenue, along with ordinary taxes.

There are 3200 permit holders, and they have paid about $225,000 to the cities and towns for permits or licenses. We have under way or completed thirty-one prosecutions, and have failed of conviction in one case only. This does not include prosecutions brought without our knowledge by local parties.

This office collects a like amount in the Inheritance tax department.

In 1920 there was collected $680,-839,,00, and in 1921 there was $626,-633.00 collected, and owing to the falling off in this revenue, we are considering a re-organization of this work. We expect to put new men and energy into this department, and hope to make a showing of increased receipts.—W. J. Burbank, Treasurer of State.

GARNER KICKS ON RATES

The franchise of the Iowa Falls Electric Co., in Garner expires March 22, and there has been much talk recently of organizing a new company and installing a new plant. Last Wednesday afternoon representative of the three companis of farmers who own lines extending out of Garner met with the Garner city council and discussed the matter. A committee was appointed to take up the matter, find out what it would cost to install a new plant, etc., and report at a meeting that will be held soon.

There has been much dissatisfaction for some time over the rates in effect here, and from what we learn, the rates are higher than the franchise called for. But when you are in the clutches of some big concern you just about have to pay what they say. The rates charged in Garner are the highest we have been able to learn of in the state. A year or so ago, we met a representative of the big electric company at Humboldt, and told him what the rates were in Garner. He said we were mistaken, as there was not a town in the state that had raes that high.

The franchise as now in effect calls for a rate not to exceed the average rate paid by towns similarly located within radius of 50 miles of Garner.

The rate that is being charged is as follows: Users of 10 K. W. H. or less are charged 18c; users of 10 to 25 K. W. H. 16c; 25 to 35 K. W. H. 15c; 35 to 50 K. W. H. 13c; 50 to 60 K. W. H. 12c; 60 K. W. H. and up 10c. In comparison with the rates of other towns it may be seen that the heavy user is getting a rate that is not so far out of reason, but the small user is getting a rate higher than any other company is asking. Also that in most towns a cash discount is allowed, which is not allowed here, and that many towns have lower minimum charge than we have and none are higher.—Leader.

FOREST CITY GIRL IS FOUND HANGING

The fatal step may end the most happy life. The most cultured, refined, beautiful and best loved are no exception to the same fact. A father's devotion, a mother's fond care and love, or a brother's or sister's companionship will not shield them whom they decide to take the step,

Such was the illustration last evening, when one of the highest educated, most refined, vivacious girls was found in the home parlor, surrounded by all the luxuries that should go to make up a happy life.

Late in the evening she was missed and a careful search failed to reveal her whereabouts. The telephone was used without results. Her friends were called in to help search for her, but no one was able to locate her. Finally the almost heartbroken mother returned to the parlor and there, to her surprise, she found her beloved girl hanging. How must that mother been affected by the sight that met her gaze! There was that daughter hanging to her sweetheart's neck, begging him to buy her a pound box of chocolates.—Summit.

CLIPPINGS

It is stated that Dick Hines, formerly of Livermore, has struct oil on some of his holdings in Texas, and that he is now in possession of a real gusher. The Livermore Gazette hopes that he will use his influence in having the price of oil reduced.—Humboldt Republican.

At the University of Iowa at Iowa City a girl not engaged wears her overshoes unbuckled. If she is engaged, she buttons them up tight. If married but still willing to talk things over she wears one overshoe unbuckled. If divorced, she turns them down and buckles them at the back.—Eagle.

The carnival and dance given by the Auxiliary ladies of the American Legion last Tuesday evening was one of the most successful affairs of the kind ever attempted in Clarion. The various schemes for obtaining money from the large crowd present would put the famous P. T. Barnum to shame, were he alive today. There was no end of stands, booths, etc., upon which to lavish one's nickels and dimes. Then there was the picture gallery and the bathing beauties to attract the unsophisticated. The latter hoax proved to be two kewpie dolls and other make believes were along similar lines. Stewart's orchestra furnished music for the dance which was enjoyed by many. The ladies realized $382 from their entertainment and wish to thank all who contributed to its success.—Monitor.

One night last week an auto containing several bottles of corn wiskey about two gallons in all, was located on Main street by Policeman Fred Johnson. He called Sheriff Lang to his assistance and they took possession of the car, which was later claimed by Ed. Holmes and Earl Ewing. They were placed under arrest and later released on $500 bonds. Each bottle of booze had a corn cob in it for a stopper.—Monitor.

The Clarion Commericial club had a nice little balance left over from the Fourth of July celebration fund, and recently a petition was circulated around town asking the donors to sign it over to the sportsmen who are looking after protecting the fish in Cornelia. Practically every one signed it and we understand a pump has been ordered to keep the air circulating through the lake waters during the time the ice covers the lake. But there is now a twenty-inch covering of ice and Dunc Eley, who is going to look after the pumping, said it was sure going to be hard on the fish unless the pump arrives pretty quick. However, it was expected to get here this week. Sportsmen interested in the fishing there are hoping that there will not be a repetition of the hard luck of two winters ago, when many of the fish were killed during the winter.—News.

Not as a matter of news, for the announcement appeared in the dailies some weeks back, but just as an agreeable duty, the Monitor mentions the reappointment of Miss Eva Keith as postmistress at Goldfield. Miss Keith entered Uncle Sam's employ in January, 1900, and has been postmistress continuously since, twenty-two years. She has given her patrons exceptional service, and has fine support in her home town. Her appointment covers four years, beginning January 17th. Congratulations.—Monitor.

CHICAGO GREATWESTERN RAILROAD STATISTICS

Notwithstanding you ride half as many more times now, half again farther each trip and doubtless spent half as much more time in railway travel, yet the danger to your life is less than half as great as it use to be

If you have ridden once in the last 33 years, your chance of being killed were one in 91,000,000. Or,if you have taken one trip each year during that period, you came as near losing your life as one is near to 2,760,000. One ride taken last year imposed a hazard on your life of only one in 5,673,000, and on your twelve customary journeys you are as far from jeopardy as 473,000 is greater than one.

Altogether, the railways of the United States carried in 1920 about 1,300,000,000 passengers, with one killed for each group of 5,673.000 carried, while a total of 472,000,00 people carried in 1889 the death rate was 1,523,000. The danger to life of railway travelers in 1920 was therefore less than one-third of what it was in 1889, most of the reduction accruing since 1907. To be sure there have been very bad years, but the general trend throughout the whole period has been decidedly towards the increasing safety of the traveling public.

At their meeting Wednesday evening of this week, the building committee of the American Legion decided to complete their building this year, and took steps to arrange for the necessaries for the move. Notice was served on the occupants of the present buildings to vacate within thirty days, and the balance of the money subscribed will be called in and everything done to rush the movement.—Humboldt Republican.

Synopsis—Episode Two

"THE CYCLE BULLET"

WEDNESDAY FEB. 15, 1922

Hutch dives off the cliff and drags Nancy from the whirlpool to the bank, where Big Bill Hogan, a friend of Tigerly's knocks Hutch out and carries Nancy off. Hutch, in pursuit, gains time by crossing a chasm over the river, walking on a trolley rope used to convey buckets. With more daring risks, he rescues Nancy and takes her home.

The successful operation of the paper mills worries Marlow. Nancy has refused to marry him; he has failed to obtain the scarf and a big contract for paper is offered Nancy that, unless she can be prevented from signing it, will mean that Marlow cannot foreclose his mortgage.

Nancy goes to New York to sign the contract. Marlow and Ann Haviland accompany her—Ann hoping to secure the scarf; Marlow to prevent the signing of the contract. Bella learns of Marlow's scheme and tells Hutch. He grabs a motorcycle and starts after the train. After crossing a trestle, leaping a broken bridge over the train, and dashing in front of it at several crossings, he secures a handhold, but not a foot hold on the rear car. The speeding train drags his feet along the ground.

DON'T READ THESE ECHOS OF ELECTION

As they may hurt you. The schoolhouse bond election of $60,000.00 of Meservey, Ia., closed at 6 p. m. Jan. 12, 1922, with the result of the majority against the issuing of bonds, but those that thought the matter was now settled got fooled. As the old truth: "There is no rest for the wicked" was readiy in evidence, as immediately there was a second petition circulated for a new election 5 weeks hence they boast of that it was only 20 or 30 minutes, that shows good. But now, let us analyze that petition a miunte and see who signed it, and we find, over one-half of the required number were not freeholders.

But dear farmer brothers, it would be unfair and greatly unjust to those signers if you put put all the blame on them, of having the gall and taking the right, not to abide by a good majority of election and force you to a second election, then if the case should be that the second election majority voted bonds, then you freeholders out on the farm should have the same right to call another election to undo the second one.

But we must dig a little deeper and there you find "the powers to be behind the curtains," none of the real drivers will appear on the petition, but by supple action pushed these noncombatants to the front, to avoid the brunt of the battle, and they stand hiding and grinning behind the screen, but—Oh, consistency thou art a jewel!

There is much said and written of a thorough investigation on the subject, and then vote intelligently, and by doing so we find, that there was not any dissatisfaction about the schoolhouse in Meservey among pupils and patrons of the community. But the disturbance was made by two former employees of the Meservey school the one drew $2800.00 for 180 days into his household, and the other drew at the squandering rate of $2125.00 for himself alone. But under their management we finished teachers which are getting now $100 for 20 days work or play, and as long as we can do that, I think we are doing remarkable well, and ought to be well pleased with results. And they all were too!

So we see all the disturbance is made and instigated by other authorities, those who sucked the life blood out of the community and had a one-half dozen farmers and their wives work for them as slaves or the equivalent of one-half dozen farmers incomes so they could live on the top shelves, or them State officials or inspectors who live on the high salaries of the fat of the land. Even those inspector reports admit that the equipment of the manual training department was more than necessary, the little lack in school equipment was supplied, and their hope that the gas plant in the near future would be in perfect condition was complied with for Domestic science, to boil the water for dishwashing scientifically, for cold packing fruits of all kinds, and frying sugar, eggs, cream, butter, etc., together.

All their complaint boiled down is mainly: the building is of wood, and the seats are not attractive enough for pupils to take hold of learning. Right there we might say: that a child can not learn any more in an upholstered quarter sawed oak or a mahogany seat as in an ordinary seat that was good enough for their honorable and loving parents, as a person can have as much brain in a common $3.00 rocking chair as many that sit in $12, $25 or $147.00 rockers, as has often been proven.

Apparently as salaries increased, efficience decreases. There is much written late years by high authorities in state papers, that about one half of the teachers of the state are incompetent to teach, therefore the boards of education should raise the wages to get good teachers. But we find on the examination that the teachers of 5 or 6 years before the war for $35, $40 or $45. per month taught their pupils the art of arithmatic in school and they are excellent business men or ladies of today, but after increasing the salaries to three or four fold of the former, this new kind of teachers shifts that burden of art to the pupil's parents, to work with them all evenings to learn a little arithmatic, even under crying of the dear children, that their mother don't know nothing of these newfangled frills and frizzles,, that these progressive (?) teachers want them to do, any fool can look over the examples after the pupil has them made right or wrong, but it takes labor, brain and duty to instruct them the art of doing.

Further I would suggest to those who have not taken part in the election, to make up your mind which way you want it. Do you want to make or save all these thousands which they have so clever arrayed before your eyes, and this legacy? Of $60,000 with which you shall inherit your children for 40 years without any effect of their own only hold up their hand in a strawvote in the schoolhouse if they want it. But they were sly enough not to tell you that on these figures and terms, without any interest on the investment (as some believe should be figured) or compounding interest, yes this simple bagatelle of $60,000 will be the enormous fortune of say, and write it down $138,000 when paid up. Then vote yes. But if you are carring all you can at present and not any more, with your second years income from the farm on prewar level, and all the suckers around you with 3 or 4 fold salaries of your income, and if you believe that turning out able teachers as fast and good as we have done in the past is sufficient, then vote no. But you can not stay at home, but must come to the polls and make it known.

And I would give you the exhortation of men of old thus: Be strong and steadfast as men (Oh ye Philistines) that you be not servants (or slaves) unto these taskmasters, be men and fight" these words may not be exact translation, but it is the sense and meaning of it. They fought with the sword and felled 30,000 men, I only wish to fight with the ballot so they may see "the handwriting on the wall" like the Democratic party did at the last election, and abided by it.

Extravagance and squandering of school money knows no bounds.

Some years ago we were asked to vote $50,000 for a court house from the whole county and many considered it a burden but now they ask $60,000 from a little over one half of a township, and no wonder the majority of the tax payers said no! But some county or state officials have published a book with compiled figures of total expenditures of different schools which is amusing for disinteresting parties. We find Meservey school expenditures for 1917-18, $11,539.73, alone for teachers $4,361.20, total expenditure for year 1919-20, $15,622.57, alone for teachers $8,035.00. Venturas total expense for 1917-18, $4,374.10. Venura's total expense for 1920-21, $27,554.25. These are only a few of the many they have represented, and only then they go on to compare the increase of expenditures of the different schools in percentage to their gain in expense and they find that Meservey has only increased it expense to 178 per cent of former while Plymouth stands at 220 per cent and beats them all.

According to all reading it appears that they fully put their approval upon the most extravagence, where really a penalty should be affixed to it strict. As our great McAdoo advocated during war time, any one should not be considered a loyal American if he would not wear half soled pants, as they had to pay and be pinched until it would hurt, and quit extravagance and learn economy, even in government, state and individual life. Therefore let us ponder a little and get light, as we started our consolidated school in 1915-16 we had an able professor paid him $1000 for the season and a full set of teachers for $2745 total $3,745 in 1916-17 same professor and a full set of teachers for $5945 now notice the difference in three years from figures above for $8,035 or an excess of $4,090 in a year paid more than 3 years ago which they get cause of war bonus.

Even the drivers felt jubilant of war bonus and drew the mere bagatelle of $5,494.00 for 1920-21. But as some of them had to help pay it, they come to their senses and 1921-22 the same faithful workers are glad and do the same work for $2930 or a difference in saving of $2564 which would be if teachers were giving up their differece, 4,090 a total of $6654 a year.

A Plain Sensible Plan. Come now, and let us reason together—though your iniquitiees be as scarlet, "they shall be as white as snow" and all be forgotten. We have seen the excess of teachers from before the war and the extras for drivers after the war amount to $6,654 a year. Now brother farmer you have paid a tax of 70 mills in 1918 and your brother across the road in the township chool district 48.9, in 1919, 43 mills and you paid 105.28 mills in 1920 or an increase of a little over 50 per cent Well done! And you will pay 102.77 mills in 1922. "Its all in getting used to it," they say. If that be so and you possible can carry that load, keep on paying it for five years as you have done for 3 years past as my plan is very simple and very practical: viz: If our corps of teachers will agree to work at prewar and beginning of the war salaries $55 $60 and $75 and professor of 1915-16 of $1000 for 990 hours not like the breadeater of 1920-21 of $2125 for season or $2.14½ cent per hour, then we can take above $6,000 excess money every year and put it in a sinking fund for 5 years and the accumulation of interest will bring another $4,500 without compounding and we have the sum of $34,500 ready to build Struggle 5 years more and you have capital and interest all paid up, and you can point with pride to your own nice school house.

May the good Lord open your eyes that you see clearly what you are going into, and be not all doughheads and I hope the staff of teachers will cooperate with you in this plan of a new school house with suitable working conditions and all say: "Amen, it shall be so!" that would be real cooperation as they all know perfectly well that they have not any more brain now, as they had before the war. And you have sold your grain already of years crops with two-thirds and three-fourth and some four fifths off of former prices.

Now let everybody think this plan over, and get together. What do you say about such or a similar plan?

Yours for progress and economy,

J. C. Janssen.

MR. and MRS. HULSEBUS WRITE

Obersprockhovel
1-5-22

Dear All:

Greetings. We arrived here 12-13 at Barmen where Br. Beims, sister Anna and daughters met us, and this sure was a meeting; had not seen each other for 40 years.

From Barme we took electric railway to Hasslinghausen, about 3 miles and then walked to Obersprockhovel, about 1 mile. Barmen and Elberfeld are two large cities in the Wupper Valley about 400,000 inhabitants. This is in Rheinland. Here are all factories and very large houses for exports of silk, ribbon, iron, etc.

The river Wupper runs thru both cities and over this river hangs suspended the Schwebebahn, the only only railway in the world where the rails hang suspended by pillars from each side of the river; on these run the wheels which are held by arms. The cars hang and run below. Br. Beims and I took a ride last week from Barmen to Elberfeld.

Now about our staying here at Beins. We are having a fine visit and they certainly do all they can to make it homelike for us. Mr. is Headteacher here, also two other teachers. This is a large school buildig, each teacher has 7 living rooms. Below are the school rooms. This country is all industry, many hills, coal mines all over; houses are built of quarry stone. Br. Beins one son Hans came home from the hospital where he was four years. Doctors were trying to save his leg but it had to be taken off after all. This was six weeks ago, after his 12 operation. He returned to the hospital today.

We leave for Steinfelde again Saturday. In the spring we want to go to Eisenact to see the Wartburg, where Dr. Luther was in the time of Reformation, also to see the Coln and other wonderful places on the Rhine.

Glad to say that we are well and hope same of you. Give all people our best wishes and regards. Write soon. Love to you all. We are lovingly your Father and Mother.

NEW KIND OF HOLDUP

One of our farmers drove his Lizzie to Mason City some time ago. When he was on his return trip home just south of the Mercy Hospital he noticed that he was short on water, and not thinking of holdups, he went to the nearest house south of the road and asked for some water. The man of the house appeared very kind and volunteered to carry the pail; when the radiator was full the farmer turned to thank the obliging man, but was informed that the charges were 50 cents. The request came so sudden and unexpected that nothing was said for some time—but finally some one in the car suggested that 25c would be a good price. The obliging man insisted that water was 50c a pail the Clear Lake road—the bill was paid in full but no receipt was taken. Some day a party of Meservey people may accompany this farmer to see his friend on the Clear Lake road, and it may cost him more than 50 cents to get his face patched up.

The sooner that we all learn that we cannot live for ourselves alone—the sooner will the present discontent be a thing of the past. We must learn that no one can build his own business by tearing down the other man's, whether it be the farm, laborer or other business.

What we need most in times of depression like these is a sane policy of right thinking, right living and the application of the golden rule, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you." Conditions are largely what we make them. Nothing would ever be accomplished if all the people would say, "It can't be done."

Did you ever stop to think that it requires no special gifts to be a "knocker?" Anyone can try to belittle the good work another is doing. The most ignorant can criticise the President, or Congress or others who are in authority through the greatest and best form of government ever devised by man, a Democratic form of government. Can they do better? Have they accomplished anything worth while or must their life be summed up as having done nothing constructive and all things destructive? Verily, "By their fruits you shall know them."

STEAL FOUR PUREBREDS

John L. Reeve, southeast of Hampton, lost four good hogs one night about ten days ago. They did not stray away, either, as some fellow who evidently knew Mr. Reeve was not to be at home took advantage of the opportunity and got away with the four porkers which weighed about 250 pounds each. The Reeve family were in Hampton and no one was at home that night. The "mystery thief" of that vicinity remains unsolved, as several robberies of late remained unsolved as to who is doing the "thieving" around here.—Chronice.

If some 2,700 out of 3,100 doctors announce that they have never found it necessary to use radium in their practice, isn't a statute against its use justified?

PUBLISHER APOLOGISES FOR MAILING STATEMENTS

Over in Belmond the Independent sent out statements of subscription accounts, and last weeks issue contained an apology, stating that the books were badly balled up and the publisher was simply trying to straighten things out. Woudn't that jar you?

We never did have a wholesale house apologise for sending us a statement, and never expect to. We have been doing all the apologising for many years, and were mighty glad to have a chance to make the apology if we let accounts over-run their limit.

And then, why shouldn't a man send a statement to another man who owes him? The man who gets insulted at being reminded of an account he owes is a good man to have trade with the other fellow.—Humboldt Republican.

(Glad you told us that it was an apology, brother; first we knew of it.)

What would happen to your body if you neglected to portake of food regularly? We all know what the consequences would be Did you ever ask yourself the question: "What will happen to my soul if I neglect to partake of the spiritual food? Come to church next Sunday and worship with us if you are not in the habit of going to any other church. We believe that if those persons, who relieved some of our friends of their chickens last Sunday had been to church they could not have been so mean and do a thing like that. We are sorry that there are such people living around here, for in our estimation a man who steals chickens has sunk very low. It all goes to show that there are yet many around us who need to come under the influence of the great friend of mankind, the Saviour of men. The Book tells us "That righteousness exaltath a nation." Shall we not help to exalt our nation?

School Notes

Last Thursday and Friday the eighth grade county examination was held here for the benefit of the eighth graders from rural districts. Only two pupils appeared for the examination. They were Kenneth Myers and Ruby Myers from District No. 7, Wisner township.

The monthly weighing of school children resulted in the following brief summary: 13 per cent showed a loss; 20 per cent showed no gains; 67 per cent showed substantial gains. The children are weighed each month.

Last Friday night our high school played the Latimer high school a double header basket ball game. Honors were divided. The Alexander boys won and the Latimer girls successfully carried away the wreath of victory. The games were played on the Latimer floor.

Our next movie program to be given next Tuesday night, February 14th will consist of three reels: "Made Game," manufacturing of athletic goods; "Fable of the Olive and the Orange," showing these industries from the beginning up to the eating of the olive by people who pretend to be fond of them. The comedy is "Jerry Beenen takes Gas."

Several of the rooms are taking extra pains in decorating for St. Valentine's Day. Little Dan Cupid will have no cause for feeling slighted this year. It makes a big difference when the teachers take a heartfelt interest in paying him homage.

Th Misses Alma and Ruth Johnson spent the week-end at their home in Latimer. Miss Emma Eickmeyer also was a week-end visitor at her home in Sheffield.

IOWA HAS 90 PER CENT OF CORN QUOTA TO RAISE

Governor N. E. Kendall, state chairman of the Near East Relief, has issued a reminder that Iowa has 90 per cent of her 300,000 bushel quota of gift corn to raise within the next five weeks.

Free transportation on gift corn expires February 28, Gov. Kendall says. This leaves only three week for Iowa to make up the remainder of her quota.

Approximately 21,000 bushels of corn have been shipped from Iowa, acerding to C. A. Montanus, state director. Ten thousand additional bushels are ready to ship within the next few days. The past few weeks have been witnessed a boom in responses to the call of the Near East Montanus said. Council Bluffs began Sunday January 22 a drive for five carloads of corn to match five carloads already pledged by the farmers of Pottawattamie county.

Story County, Cear Lake and Mason City are in the second week of campaigning. Other cities in various parts of the state are expected to take up the movement within the next few weeks.

RED CROSS PAGEANT TO BE GIVEN

Picturing the whole story of the development of humanitarian work throughout the world, from the time of the good Sanaritan to the preent, roles. The big spectacle will open a great pageant and historical spectacle will be presented here the week of March 7 as a special feature of the Central Division convention of the American Red Cross.

It will be one of the largest pageants or spectacles ever presented west of the Mississippi, according to national officers of the Red Cross who arrived in Des Moines from Washington D. C., to begin preparations for the event. More than 3,500 persons will participate in the acting. There will be a mammoth chorus of 1,000 voices and an orchestra of 50.

State officials, men and women who won honors and citatins during the world war, will assume the leading roles. The big spectacle will open with events which took place before the time of Christ and will trace the humanitarian work which has been symbolized by the Red Cross from that date until this. The Knights of the Round Table, the Sisters of Mercy, war service, home service, rehabilitation work will be depicted.

Mrs. Ruth Mougey Worrell of Washington, D. C., author of the pageant, has come to Iowa to take personal charge of the staging. H. B. Dickson, national director of enrollment for the Red Cross, and producer of the recent big pageant of "The Wayfarer" has also been brought to Des Moines to direct the work of preparation.

Plans are now under way whereby special delegations may be brought to Des Moines from all parts of the state to witness the pageant the week of March 7.

FOLKS NOW LIVE A YEAR LONGER

That a year has been added to the averge of humn lifetime within the past five years and that thousands of dollars have been saved to the citizens of Iowa within the past year by the reduction of the sickness rate through public health work to a greater extent than ever before is the claim which will be made when health workers from all over the state gather at the Hotel Savery, Des Moines, on Wednesday, February eighth for the annual meeting of the Iowa Tuberculosis Association.

Plans will be made at that time for further inroads upon tuberculosis and other preventable diseases thru public health education and community organization, the scope of the work being based upon the results of the recent Christmas seal sale, which is almost the sole means of financing the state and county voluntary associations.

Iowa's health record will be reviewed. For three years this state has led the nation in the teaching of health habits in the public schools. The annual report to be presented by President John H. Peck will mention the fact that 361,405 school children were enrolled in the Modern Health Crusade, 30 county tuberculosis and child welfare clinics were held, pubic heath nursing service was promoted in 61 counties, a milion and a half pieces of health literature were distributed, a monthly health magazine was published, several hundred public meetings including 44 teachers institutes were addressed, health legislation was successfully promoted, and local health agencies were established or assisted in many ways.

The Housing Bureau (formerly State Housing Association) and the Iowa Trudeau Society will meet jointly with the Tuberculosis Assciation; the Des Moines Council of Social Agencies and Polk County Medical Society are invited to special sessions, and the State Conference of Social Work will consider the entire day's program as a regional conference of its own organiztion with special reference to health.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is the skipper, Neils Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII. — Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.—Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

CHAPTER X.—Our three adventurers form a "syndicate,' with the gunboat, which they have renamed the Maggie II, as their base of operations. They sail for the South Sea islands, where they plan to obtain valuable black coral.

"Admiral Gibney did it," said Scraggs. "The old Maggie's alongside and me and Gib's filibusters. Bear a hand, Mac, and help us clap the hatches on our prisoners."

"Thank God," said Mr. Gibney piously, "I didn't kill you. Come to look into the matter, I didn't kill anybody, though I see half a dozen Mexicans around decks more or less cut up. Where you been all these years, Mac?"

"I been chief engineer in the Mexican navy," replied McGuffey. "Have you captured us in the name of the United States or what?"

"We've captured you in the name of Adelbert P. Gibney," was the reply. "I been huntin' all my life for a ship of my own, and now I've got her. Lord, Mac, she's a beauty, ain't she? All hardwood finish, teak rail, well found, and just the ticket for the island trade. Well, well, well! I'm Captain Gibney at last."

"Where do I come in, Gib?" asked Captain Scraggs modestly.

"Well, seein' as the Maggie has two holes through her hull below the waterline, and is generally nicked to pieces, you might quit askin' questions and get back aboard and put the pumps on her. You're lucky if she don't sink on you before we get to Descanso bay. If she sinks, don't worry. I'll give you a job as my first mate. Mac, you're my engineer, but not at no fancy Mexican price. I'll pay you the union scale and not a blasted cent more or less. Is that fair?"

McGuffey said it was, and went below to tune up his engine. Mr. Gibney took the wheel of the gunboat, and sent Captain Scraggs back aboard the Maggie, and in a few minutes both vessels were bowling along toward Descanso bay. They were off the bay at midnight, and while with Mr. Gibney in command of the federal gunboat Captain Scraggs had nothing to fear, the rapid rise of water in the hold of the Maggie was sadly disconcerting. About daylight he made up his mind that she would sink within two hours, and without pausing to whine over his predicament, he promptly beached her. She drove far up the beach, with the slack water breaking around her scarred stern, and when the tide ebbed she lay high and dry. And the rebel soldiers came trooping down from the Megano rancho and falling upon her carcass like so many ants, quickly distributed her cargo amongst them, and disappeared.

Captain Scraggs sent his crew out aboard the captured gunboat to assist Mr. Gibney in rowing his prisoners ashore, and when finally he stood alone beside the wreck of the brave old Maggie, piled up at last in the port of missing ships, something snapped within his breast and the big tears rolled in quick succession down his sun-tanned cheeks. The old hulk looked peculiarly pathetic as she lay there, listed over on her beam ends. She had served him well, but she had finished her last voyage, and with some vague idea of saving her old bones from vandal hands, Captain Scraggs, sobbing audibly, scattered the contents of half a dozen cans of kerosene over her decks and in the cabin, lighted fires in three different sections of the wreck, and left her to the consuming flames. Half an hour later he stood on the battered decks of the gunboat beside Gibney and McGuffey and watched the dense clouds of smoke that heralded the passing of the Maggie.

"She was a good old hulk," said Mr. Gibney. "And now, as the special envoy of the Liberal army of Mexico, here's a draft on Los Angeles for five thousand bucks, Scraggsy, which constitutes the balance due you on this here filibuster trip. Of course, I needn't remind you, Scraggsy, that you'd never have earned this money if it hadn't been for Adelbert P. Gibney workin' his imagination overtime. I've made you a chunk of money, and while I couldn't save your ship, I did save your life. As a reward for all this, I don't claim one cent of the money due you, as I could if I wanted to be rotten mean. I'm goin' to keep this fine little power schooner for my share of the loot. She's nicked up some, but that only bears evidence to what a bully good shot I am, and it won't take much to fix her up all shipshape again. Usin' high bursts shrapnel ain't very destructive. All them bumps an' scratches can be planed down. But we'll have to do some mendin' on her canvas—I'll tell the world. She's called the Reina Maria, but I'm going to run her to Panama and change her name. She'll be known as Maggie II, out of respect for the old girl that's burnin' up there on the beach."

Captain Scraggs was so touched at this delicate little tribute that he turned away and burst into tears.

"Aw, shut up, Scraggsy, old hunks," said McGuffey consolingly. "You ain't got nothin' to cry about. You're a rich man. Look at me. I ain't a-bawlin', am I? And I don't get so much as a bean out of this mix-up, all on account of me bein' tied up with a lot of hounds that quits fightin' before they're half licked."

"That's so." said Captain Scraggs, wiping his eyes with his grimy fists. "I declare you're out in the cold, McGuffey, and it ain't right. Gib, my boy, us three has had some stirrin' times together and we've had our differences, but I ain't a-goin' to think of them past griefs. The sight o' you, single-handed, meetin' and annihilatin' the pride of the Mexican navy, calm in th' moment o' despair, generous in victory and delicate as blazes to a fallen shipmate, goin' to work an' namin' your vessel after him that way, is somethin' that wipes away all sorrer and welds a friendship that's bound to endoor till death us do part. If McGuffey'd been on our side, we know from past performances that he'd a fit like a tiger, wouldn't you, Mac?" (Here Mr. McGuffey coughed slightly, as much as to say that he would have fought like ten tigers had he only been given the opportunity.)

Captain Scraggs continued: "I should say that a fair valuation of this schooner as she stands is ten thousand dollars. That belongs to Gib. Now I'm willin' to chuck five thousand dollars into the deal, we'll form a close corporation and as a compliment to McGuffey, elect him chief engineer in his own ship and give him, say, a quarter interest in our layout, as a little testimonial to an old friend, tried and true."

"Scraggsy," said Mr. Gibney, "your fin. We've fought, but we'll let that go. We wipe the slate clean and start in all over agoin on the Maggie II, and I'm free to state, without fear of contradiction, that in the last embroglio you showed up like four aces and a king with the entire company standin' pat. Scraggsy, you're a hero, and what you propose proves that you're considerable of a singed cat—better'n you look. We'll go freebootin' down on the Gold coast. There's war, red war, breakin' loose down there, and we'll shy in our horseshoe with the strongest side and pry loose a fortune somewhere. I'm for a life of wild adventure, and now that we've got the ship and the funds and the crew, let's go to it. There's a deal of fine liquor in the wardroom, and I suggest that we nominate Phineas Scraggs, late master of the battleship Maggie, now second in command of the Maggie II, to brew a kettle o' hot grog to celebrate our victory. Mac—Scraggsy—your fins. I'm proud of you both. Shake."

They shook and as Captain Gibney's eye wandered aloft, First Mate Scraggs and Chief Engineer McGuffey looked up also. From the main topmast of the Maggie II floated a long blue burgee, with white lettering on it, and as it whipped out into the breeze the old familiar name stood out against the noonday sun.

"Good old dishcloth!" murmured Mr. Gibney. "She never comes down."

"The Maggie forever!" shrieked Scraggs.

"Hooray!" bellowed McGuffey. "An' now, Scraggsy, if you've got all the enthusiasm out of your blood, kick in with a hundred an' fifty dollars an' interest to date. An' don't tell me that note's outlawed, or I'll feed you to the fishes."

Captain Scraggs looked crestfallen, but produced the money.

CHAPTER X.

"Well, Scraggsy, old hunks, this is pleasant, ain't it?" said Mr. Gibney, and spat on the deck of the Maggie II.

"Right-o," replied Captain Scraggs cheerily, "though when I was a young feller and first went to sea, it wasn't considered no pleasantry to spit on a nice clean deck. You might cut that out, Gib. It's vulgar."

"Passin' over the fact, Scraggs, that you ain't got no call to jerk me up on sea ettycat, more particular since I'm the master and managin' owner of this here schooner, I'm free to confess. Scraggsy, that your observation does you credit. I just did that to see if you was goin' to take as big an interest in the new Maggie as you did in the old Maggie, and the fact that you object to me expectoratin' on the deck proves to me that you're leavin' behind you all them bay scow tendencies of the green-pea trade. It leads me to believe that you'll rise to high rank and distinction in the Colombian navy. Your fin, Scraggsy. Expectoratin' on the decks is barred, and the Maggie II goes under navy discipline from now on. Am I right?"

"Right as a right whale," said Captain Scraggs. "And now that you've given that old mate of mine the course, and we've temporarily plugged up the holes in this here Mexican gunboat, and everything points to a safe and profitable voyage from now on, suppose you delegate me as a committee of one to brew a scuttle of grog, after which the syndicate holds a mettin' and lays out a course for its future conduct. There's a few questions of rank and privileges that ought to be settled once and for all, so there can't be no come-back."

"The point is well taken and it is so ordered," said Mr. Gibney, who had once held office in Harbor 15, Master and Pilots Association of America, and knew a fragment or two of parliamentary law. "Rustle up the grog, call McGuffey up out of the engine room, and we'll hold the meetin'."

Twenty minutes later Scraggs came on deck to announce the successful concoction of a kettle of whisky punch; whereupon the three adventurers went below and sat down at the cabin table for a conference.

"I move that Gib be appointed president of the syndicate," said Captain Scraggs.

"Second the motion," rumbled McGuffey.

"The motion's carried," said Mr. Gibney, and banged the table with his horny fist. "The meetin' will please come to order. The chair hereby appoints Phineas Scraggs secretary of the syndicate, to keep a record of this and all future meetin's of the board. I will now entertain propositions of any and all natures, and I invite the members of the board to knock the stopper out of their jaw tackle and go to it."

"I move," said Captain Scraggs, "that B. McGuffey, Esquire, be, and he is hereby appointed, chief engineer of the Maggie II at a salary not to exceed the wage schedule of the Marine Engineers' Association of the Pacific coast, and that he be voted a one-fourth interest in the vessel and all subsequent profits."

"Second the motion," said Mr. Gibney, "and not to hamper the business of the meetin', we'll just consider that motion carried unanimous."

B. McGuffey, Esquire, rose, bowed his thanks, and sat down again, apparently very much confused. It was evident that he had something to say, but was having difficulty framing his thoughts in parliamentary language.

"Heave away, Mac," said Mr. Gibney.

"Cast off your lines, McGuffey," chirped Scraggs.

Thus encouraged, McGuffey rose, bowed his thanks once more, moistened his larnyx with a gulp of the punch, and spoke:

"Feller members and brothers of the syndicate: In the management of the deck department of this new craft of ourn, my previous knowledge of the worthy president and the unworthy secretary leads me to believe that there's goin' to be trouble. A ship divided agin herself must surely go on her beam ends. Now, Scraggsy here has been master so long that the juice of authority has sorter soaked into his marrer bones. For twenty years it's been 'Howdy do, Captain Scraggs,' 'Have a drink, Captain Scraggs.' 'Captain Scraggs this an' Captain Scraggs that.' I don't mean no offense, gentlemen, when I state that you can't teach an old dog new tricks. No man that's ever been a master makes a good mate. On the other hand, I realize that Gib here has been a-pantin' and a-bellyachin' all his life to get a ship of his own an' have folks call him 'Captain Gibney.' Now that he's gone an' done it, I say he's entitled to it. But the fact of the whole thing is, Gib's the natural leader of the expedition or whatever it's goin' to be, and he can't have his peace of mind wrecked and his plans disturbed a-chasin' sailors around the deck of the Maggie II. Gib is sorter what the feller calls the power behind the throne. He's too big a figger for the grade of captain. Therefore, I move you, gentlemen, that Adelbert P. Gibney be, and is hereby nominated and appointed to the grade of commodore, in full command and supervision of all of the property of the syndicate. And I also move that Phineas Scraggs be appointed chief navigatin' officer of this packet, to retain his title of captain, and to be obeyed and respected as such by every man aboard with the exception of me and Gib. The present mate'll do the navigatin' while Scraggsy's learnin' the deep sea stuff."

"Second the motion," said Captain Scraggs briskly. "McGuffey, your argument does you a heap of credit It's—it's—dog my cats, McGuffey, it's masterly. It shows a keen appreciation of an old skipper's feelin's, and if the move is agreeable to Gib, I'm willin' to hail him as commodore and fight to maintain his office. I—I dunno, Gib, what I'd do if I didn't have a mate to order around."

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Gibney, beaming, "the motion's carried unanimous. Captain—chief—your fins. Dook me. I'm honored by the handshake. Now, regarding that crew you brought down from San Francisco on the old Maggie, Scraggs, they're a likely lot and will come in handy if times is as lively in Colombia as I figger they will be when we arrive there. Captain Scraggs, you will have your mate pipe the crew to muster and ascertain their feelin's on the subject of takin' a chance with Commodore Gibney. If they object to goin' further, we'll land 'em in Panama an' pay 'em off as agreed. If they feel like followin' the Jolly Roger we'll give 'em the coast seaman's scale for a deep-water cruise and a five per cent bonus in case we turn a big trick."

Captain Scraggs went at once on deck. Ten minutes later he returned to report that the mate and the four seamen elected to stick by the ship.

"Bully boys," said the commodore "bully boys. I like that mate. He's a smart man and handles a gun well. While I should hesitate to take advantage of my prerogative as commodore to interfere with the normal workin's of the deck department, I trust that on this special occasion our esteemed navigatin' officer, Captain Scraggs, will not consider it beneath his dignity or an attack on his office if I suggest to him that he brew an*other kettle of grog for the crew.*"

"Second the motion," replied McGuffey.

"Carried," said Scraggs, and proceeded to heat some water.

"Anything further?" stated the president.

"How about uniforms?" This from Captain Scraggs.

"We'll leave that to Gib," suggested McGuffey. "He's been in the Colombian navy and he'll know just what to get us."

"Well, there's another thing that's got to be settled," continued Captain Scraggs. "If I'm to be navigatin' officer on the flagship of a furrin' fleet, strike me pink if I'll do more cookin' in the galley. It's degradin'. I move that we engage some enterprisin' Oriental for that job."

"Carried," said Mr. Gibney. "Any further business?"

Once more McGuffey stood up. "Gentlemen and brothers of the syndicate," he began, "I'm satisfied that the back-

Eat More Corn

THE WEEK BEGINNING MONDAY, FEBRUARY 6th HAS BEEN DESIGNATED "CORN WEEK" IN IOWA

Corn represents 55 per cent of the total value of our grain products and is grown in every state in the Union. To produce that much of our Country's raw food material at a loss to the producer cuts deeply into the buying power of the whole nation.

See that one food produced from corn is on your table at least once each day. Eat delicious food, cheap in price, but rich in food value, and create a demand for America's food staple which will bring its price to a fair value.

See Our Corn Window Display this Week

On Thursday we will have on display foods made from corn prepared by the Domestic Science Department of our Public Schools. Recipes for the various dishes may also be obtained.

A GREAT BIG FISH

But a d— small fry is what I think of a tinhorn sport that stopped his big car out in front of our mail box and shot our tame squirrel one day last week. We had a tame squirrel around here the last three or four years, but it went over in the Elder timber some time ago and made its nest in a tree. It came back every morning and ate with the chickens and pigs until the middle of the afteroon, then it went back to its nest.

This hungry hawk came along just as it crossed the road, and saw it. He stopped his car, grabbed his gun ad chased it down in the timberland and shot it. He may say he "did not know it was a tame squirrel," if he didn't he hasn't as much sense as our old maltese cat; she knew it was tame, and never tried to harm it. They say "hunger will make some people steal," but I think stealing is a gentleman's job when compared with shooting tame squirrels.

The Political Bees Are Beginning To B-z-z-z-z!

Rumors Galore Being Wafted Forth Upon The Breeze Of Public Favor

WHO'S GONNA GET STUNG?

The political bees are being heard stronger and stronger every day, and from the looks of things there will be as many canidates for the local political offices as Heinze has varieties of pickles. Many and varied are the tales being told, of this 'n and that'n and 'tother, and the "dope" is becoming as mixed as a plate of spaghetti.

So far, but one ticket has been openly announced, the same being framed one evening last week and consisting of E. F. Bailey for Mayor, supported by the Councilmen, W. T. Gfeller, C. C. Benson, Adolph Skovlin, Clyde Jennings and John Greenlander, Cyril McGuire as treasurer.

There be others reported in the running, and many ears are laid to the ground to catch the sounds of approaching battle. It looks like we were to have a warm spring. Variety is the spice of life, so 'tis said, and it appears as tho local voters were going to have plenty ot variety from which to choose, who ya bettin' on?

You've heard the latest, no doubt, two fellas meet and one says; "Politically speaking, how are ya?" ....

And don't forget, gentlemen, that the ladies vote this year! Election cigars will have to be interspersed with candy. If the candy is as awful as the cigars usually are—the feminine voters have something coming.

FARMERS ASK $12 PER YEAR PHONE RENTAL

News: The writer has talked with some of the farmers out of Clarion regarding the petitions they are signing for the lower phone rates and they say that the company will be asked to make a flat rate of $12 per year rental or service charge and unless this request for a lower rate is granted, the phones will be taken out. It is understood that practically every phone line out of Clarion has been solicited either wholly or in part, and more than ninety per cent of the patrons have signed the agreement to dispense with the phones unless they get the rate asked.

The farmers also state that they feel that the book keeping charge of $1.50 for a change from one phone to another is an extra they should not be compelled to pay, and while this effects only a small majority of the patrons, yet the matter is cause for irritation.

When asked as to what they would do in the event they could reach no agreement with the phone company, the men told the writer they might decide to build their own lines, or buy the ones already built. The owners of the local lines have intimated they would consider selling the rural lines and fix a satisfactory rate for switching charges at the local exchange.

The matter will probably be presented to the telephone officials in a short time, as the petitions signed call for definite action before the first of March.

BELMOND AND DOWS DIVIDE BALL HONORS

The Belmond girls won and the local boys lost in a double header game of basket ball played with the boys and girls' teams of Dows at the latter place last Friday. Low ceiling in the gym is blamed by the local teams for their poor showing, as they are used to the high ceiling in the local gymnasium. The games, however, were interesting, and were attended by a goodly crowd, about four auto loads from here going down.

On Tuesday night of this week the Garner boys won from Belmond by one point, the score being 17 and 18.

OBITUARY

Elizabeth, daughter of August J. and Anna Traeger, was born July 29, 1920, and died Feb. 10, 1922, aged one year, six months and eleven days. Thus another of earth's sweet blossoms has been plucked and carried to the Father's home on high before the storms of sin and woe had blighted it. A short funeral service was held at the home on Sunday afternoon conducted by Rev. S. U. Leinbach, after which the body was laid to rest in the Franklin Grove cemetery.

THOMPSON'S SALE OF PURE BREDS GOES FINE

Good Prices Are Received For Offerings And Owner Well Satisfied

The Geo. Thompson sale of pure bred Duroc Jersey hogs held recently was one of the most successful held in this vicinity for some time. A total of 25 head were sold, and the prices received were excellent. The highest price paid for any one animal at the sale was $56, but they all sold well and the average price on the total sold was a trifle better than $38. Some were sold to parties at Clarion, the most of them, however, going here. Mr. Thompson was very well pleased with the results of the sale, and states that he was satisfied with the prices received. The Independent regrets that lack of space prohibits giving the list of buyers.

His brother wrote, that they were killing their last horse for food and all that they had to eat was potato and pumpkin puddings which were given them These people live 90 miles from a railroad town, which means that it will be a long time before relief can reach this district. If seed is sent them they have no horses left to till the ground, as all have been killed for food. When spring comes, and the snow goes off, the ground will be strewn with skeltons of men, women and children who have started out to hunt food and either died from starvation or exhaustion by the wayside. Yet the Kaiser, who is mostly to blame for European conditions is living in luxury.

WHAT IS YOUR OPINION ON THE BAND?

Why Wait Until It's Too Late Before Getting The Band Started

Interest in a band for Belmond this summer is present among the citizens and business men of the town, but nobody appears to want to take the initative in getting it started. There is no question of the fact that a band is wanted—the universal opinion is favorable, in fact, that the town cannot afford to be without one—but the buck is being passed along.

The plain facts are these: last year $2000 was put up by the business men for sixteen weekly concerts. This year they will not put up that amount, but they will put up $1000. They all want the band, but they feel that under present conditions $1000 is all that can be afforded.

Will the band boys play for this amount? If they will, the quicker they announce it, the better it will be. There are only these two things to settle before a definite understanding can be arrived at—let's get them steeled NOW, not wait until the last minute and then grab anything—or lose out.

The Independent suggests that the question of the band is one which rightly belongs to the Chamber of Commerce, and that the Chamber could do the community a great service in looking after it before it is too late. Gentlemen let's have a little action: let's look alive, so that Belmond this summer will be something besides a dot on the map.

DECLAMATORY AND DEBATE LISTED THIS WEEK

Carol Tyrrell To Represent The School In Declamatory At Goldfield.

There will be no Community Night at the school house this week, due to the Legion play Thursday and Friday evenings.

The basket ball season is drawing to a close. Only two more games are scheduled, Nashua Feb. 25 and Hampton March 3. The date for the postponed Garner girls' game has not been set.

Will Belmond support a Girls' Basket Ball Tournament? Entertainment must be furnished visiting girls in private homes. If you favor holding a tournament let us know.

Miss Thomas was absent from school Monday afternoon due to the serious illness of her father.

The Eighth grade held a class party in the gymnasium Saturday evening.

On Friday, February 17, Goldfield will hold the sub-District declamatory contest. Carol Tyrrell will represent Belmond schools at Goldfield.

Our debating team will go to Harris, Iowa, Friday afternoon to debate the Harris team. Heretofore our team has debated the negative side of the question, but at Harris they must support the affirmative side. B. H. S. is out to win, and we know that Elaine Rierson, Lee Lowenberg and Teddy Johnson, with Wm. Vestweber as alternate, will be victorious at Harris.

Last Friday our boys journeyed to Dows to play their return game on the Dows gym. Altho our boys were handicapped thruout the game, playing on a floor with a 11 1-2 foot ceiling, combined with projecting beams and pipes, they were able to hold the Dows quintet to a 8 to 6 score in favor of Belmond at the end of the first half. The last half was loosely played by both teams, being featured by continuous blocking from every angle.

Early in this period our guards were ruled off the floor by the referee on personals. Due to the fact that our guards were disposed of, helped Dows to overcome Belmond's lead and win by a score of 9 to 15.

Belmond girls defeated Dows girls in a rough game of basket ball on the Dows floor Friday. In view of the fact that this was the first time this referee had ever officiated at a girls' game and but two fouls were called on Dows during the entire game the home girls continued to play basket ball rather than foot ball. At the end of the first half the score stood 10 to 4 in our favor. The second half we made but one basket.

WRIGHT COUNTY FARM BUREAU NOTES

A Few Facts About the Tax Levy For Support Of The Farm Bureau

By R. M. Edwards

An Eastern Viewpoint

The following editorial clipped from the New York World of January 30, shows the effect of the strong farmers' organization is having on the eastern opinion:

The Power Behind the Bloc

"An observer looking about for the most powerful political figure in the United States at present would have to pass over the president, who has been defied by congress and also the old-line party leaders within congress, who have been defied by the agricultural bloc. He would have to pass over the bloc itself for it has been doing a number of things it didn't want to do, and search for the organization or the man who has been dictating to those middle western representatives and senators, who hold the balance of the legislative power. The organization is not hard to find. It is the American Farm Bureau Federation, and James R. Howard is the president.

"Two years ago Mr. Howard was a farmer in Iowa, a dirt farmer though he has a college degree. Now he sits in Washington and tells the adminstration where it gets off. Behind his word is the grim conviction of several million of men who have had an unusual run of hard luck lately that the government has never paid enough attention to agriculture and that when favors are being distributed in the future the farmer will realize on a few campaign promises or know the reason why. The disconcerting phrase of the matter is the absolute sincerity of Mr. Howard and his followers and the absence of radicalism in their platform. They are content with the economic system as it stands, but they want the business overhead reduced and a voice in decisions as well as a larger share in returns.

"Seemingly they do not realize how revolutionary all this must appear to the old guard. Wall street has always had the dominant bloc at Washington. Can the tradition be shaken? There are no institutions tottering to a fall, but there are changes impending."

Farm Machinery

A list of machinery for sale will be printed in the March issue of the Farm Bureau Exchange and all farmers who have second-hand implements or pieces of machinery of any kind, which could be put in working condition with a few repairs, are urged to list this machinery in the March issue of the Exchange in order to help those who are in need of such farm implements.

A special department listing machinery for sale will be run in the next issue of the Exchange and those having machinery for sale or trade are requested to write Count Agent before February 25th.

A Few Facts

1. The tax levy on each Wright county taxpayer for the support of the farm bureau is less than three-

HOW ABOUT AN ALL HOME BALL TEAM?

Talk Of Forming Entirely Home Team This Summer Being Heard

Base ball fans have been warming up a little as spring approaches, and are talking of a team for Belmond this summer. The talk so far seems to be all for a home team, to be composed of all home men, with, possibly, the exception of a pitcher, but not hiring any other players. This appears to be the right "dope" on the problem, for Belmond has plenty of material for a good team without going outside. A hired team is not the desire of the vast marority of base ball fans here, and such a team would not receive their support. An all home team is the almost universal desire, and that kind of a team will receive the support of the fans.

There has been some talk of forming a "League," with six of the neighboring towns, including Belmond, as members and this idea is a good one. Such an organization would be run with rules and regulations, and would create more enthusiasm than games scheduled hither and yon. The Independent favors such a league, each team restricted to one hired player—or at most, two—and games played under a set of rules governing all teams. It seems to be the most logical solution of the base ball problem. The Independent will not favor a hired team, nor one that is not "home run" and does not believe the public generally will. What have you to say about a league?

All Ladies of City and Country Asked To Join

Drive Is Starting To Add Many New Members To City's Livest Club.

ASK LADIES ALL TO JOIN.

The Community Welfare club will hold their annual membership drive between now and the next meeting, February 24. Mrs. Gowdy is chairman of the drive.

The committee hope all who were members last year will join again for the coming year, and many new members will be added.

The Community Club is doing good work, is doing all in its power to benefit and uplift the community. One of the big things it is doing is maintaining the rest room in the city hall. Some thought the ladies of the country should not be urged to join as they received no benefit from the club and its work but that is all a mistake, many farmer's wives, especially those with children go to the rest room when they come to town to shop. There they find cozy chairs, a cot to rest or lay the baby on, a dressing room, toilet and everything necessary for their comfort. Hundreds of out of town and country ladies visit the rest room during the year. And Miss Boughton the efficient matron makes everyone feel comfortable and at home.

The country ladies who do not care to use the rest room but take pride in their home town will gladly join the club and help in making their home town the best town in the county.

The club also helps the library, bought the play ground equipment and the shrubbrey on the city hall and library grounds. Also does charity work, and many other worth while things.

So ladies if you are proud of your home town join the club and help boost the club and town. The yearly dues are only one dollar.

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL

The Consolidated School octipus at Goodell is showing signs of life. Its' eyes are on the surrounding country, it is ready to stretch out its' claws to pull in more territory. Brother Farmers around Goodell, let's be on our guard so they don't slip it on to us while we are sleeping as they done in other places.

If you haven't got the laws of 1921 you should at once write to P. E. McClenahan, Supt. of Public Instruction, Des Moines, Iowa, for school "laws and amendments passed by the last General Assembly," so you can inform yourself with the laws for consolidated schools. If you are a reader of the Belmond Independent, if not try and get a copy of Feb. 9 and read the article written by J. C. Janssen, a farmer near Meservey, in the Meservey Section. It deals with these school problems, it's the best article I have read in many a day. In a way the same conditions exists everywhere today.

Yours for cutting expenses somewhere in proportion to our incomes,

S. A. BOHNING.

CONGREGATIONAL NOTES

We would like to see a full attendance at the Bible study on Thursday night. Sabbath school at the regular hour. We are glad that the bad weather did not keep many away last Sabbath. We are still a good lead ahead of what we had last year at this time and we hope that we will not fall below the hundred mark any day this year. The morning worship at 11 and the evening at 7:30. Remember next Sunday night that the choir is going to give a sacred concert which will consist of solos, duets, quartettes and a full choir, also a piano-logue. They are working hard and we hope that there will not be a vacant seat in the house. There ought not to be for it will be a service which will long be remembered. Miss Ely will preside at the organ and the two instruments will add greatly to the melody. We invite you to come to all the services. An offering will be received at the evening services for the general work of the Kingdom.

FORD'S RADIO MESSAGE

It is certainly wonderful to sit here in my office and say a few words of greeting to you Ford Dealers ot the Cleveland territory. The radio is an outstanding tribute to man's inventive genius. They say there is nothing new under the sun, but we are constantly inventing new things, every day bringing some big improvemet over the previous day's methods.

Manfacturing operations have undergone some wonderful revolutionary changes during the past few years—we are all familiar with the big improvements in transportation methods, but the oldest industry has been the most backward in the acceptance or adoption of the new and up-to-date methods of doing things, and that is the farming industry. Being a farmer, I am vitally interested in all farm improvements, and with this in mind, I have spent years of time and millions in money in the development of the Fordson Tractor, which I really think is one of the biggest possible helps to profitable farming.

As a general thing, the farmers have bettered their financial condition during the past eighteen months, but the production costs of farm products are still too close to selling prices to allow fair margins of profit. What the farmer must do to put his business on a paying basis is to lower the cost of planting, cultivating and harvesting of his crops. This alone will increase his profits, and with this thot in mind it has been our constant aim to lower the price of the Fordson so that every farmer in the land could afford to own one. It is a pleasure, therefore, to announce thru you Ford dealers that we have today decided that the tractor price should again be reduced, and in considering a reduction, naturally my thot has been to make it possible for the largest number of farmers to share in the benefits to be derived thru the use of our tractor, and consequently effective tomorrow, Jan. 27, 1922, the new price of the Fordson Tractor will be $395, f. o. b. Detriot. This is a cut of $230 off the present price, and while in making this big reduction we have taken upon ourselves a gigantic task in the reduction of manufactoring costs, still that task, in my opinion, is not larger than the farmer's problem of today, and I am glad to do my part in bringing about a period of increased prosperity for the farmer. Your part is to carry this message to the farmer, thereby enabling him to produce more with less cost and shorter hours.

I am glad to have this opportunity of talking with you and you have my best wishes.

EX-SERVICE MAN GIVES WAY UNDER HARD STRAIN

John Hagen, of Dows, an ex-service man, was brought to Clarion Wednesday and an examination of his mental condition showed that he was in need of a course of treatment at the state hospital at Cherokee. He was taken there that night. Since coming home he has gradually grown worse, suffering from a delusion that enemies were trying to poison him. He also could not sleep. It is thot that he may be restored to a normal mental state under the care of the state hospital physicians.—News.

THE LAND OF OPORTUNITY

Much has been written of America as the "land of opportunity," where all men are created free and equal, and one has as much chance as the next. Very true, in many ways; altho not, by any means, in all. But that this is truly the land of opportunity no one can gainsay. Nowhere in the world is there a country where a man can rise as he can here; no place where he can go as far on his own individual efforts. American history is filled with examples of this, of the lowly railsplitter who became president of his country; of the destitute boy who, at his death, was the greatest figure in railroad history; of the immigrant who became a nationally known character.

But to this paper, one of the greatest examples in the way of persistant determination, of idealistic dreams that were fullfilled, is that of Henry Ford. Ford is a man about whom there are many things admired and many forcibly condemned, but that he has "risen from the ranks," that he has grasped the opportunity America offered, no one can deny. Ford had a vision; the vision of future transportation that he has seen fullfilled, and which he, in great measure, has been instrumental in bringing about.

He dreamed of a standard automobile, turned in immense numbers, at low production cost because of this, and sold at a figure which would place his car within the reach of the average family. He was jeered, hooted, called a visionary, his theories scoffed at and ridiculed. Seventeen years ago last Thanksgiving Ford could not get credit for a chicken; he spent most of the day seeking some one who would trust him for the chief article for a Thanksgiving dinner. In 1921, Ford's income tax paid to the government was nearly eighty million dollars. That was what American opportunity an idealistic dream, and persistance brought about. From nothing to an annual income of $103,000,000 in seventeen years.

Why? Because he gave the public something it needed and wanted, something it could use, and he manufactured it in great quantities. He organized his plants as no one had ever organized before, he divided with the men who worked for him.

Ford is a big man; and a small one. Some of his ideas most of us class mere piffle, but that he is a big man in his field no one can doubt. and that he has realized the opportunities of America is self evident.

HARD TIMES IN '96-97

Monitor—Last week we gave a resume of the economic conditions prevailing in Wright county twenty-five years ago this winter. Many features were found to be similar to those of the present time. In that winter as in editorial paragraph the Monitor decried that fact twenty-five years ago, saying that "From the variety of public entertainments given and the number of social gatherings held for the pleasure of our citizens, a stranger would hardly think the cry of hard times was justified." Now we are inclined to be more charitable, and believe that there is a psychological connection in this similarity of conditions. With less active employment and a lessened inspiration for business undertakings, the "dull" winter season finds people more interested in the pleasures derived from social gatherings of an inexpensive nature than is usual.

Reviewing Monitor files from January 1 to April 1, 1897, we find social diversions numerous in Clarion and neighboring towns as is true of the present.

In Belmond there was a benefit concert for the band. Belmond also had a dramatic club that season, which gave several plays, one as a benefit to the Sons of Veterans.

The annual "bean supper" was a time honored institution in those days and one was given in Belmond and also in Clarion that winter. The latter was held in the U. B. church, and was given by the G. A. R and W. R. C. Supper was served from 5 to 8, followed by a program, consisting of music by the Mandolin club. [illegible] comrades and local ministers, patriotic songs, etc. No such affair was complete without an address by Comrade Ladd, who appear- on the program in question.

The above little piece of poetry, portrays the several family duties to which members are assigned in Hancock county a few weeks ago, but things have changed, and many whose favorite pastime was mixing the festive "hootch" have been forced to resort to more laborious but considerably more elevating employment to gather sheckles with which to procure their daily bread. The fellow on watch at the Henry Groh place in Erin township, was evidently asleep at his post one day the fore part of the week, and failed to notice the approach of Sheriff Hanson. Evidence about the place convinced the sheriff that an illicit still had been in operation. Groh plead guilty to the county attorney's information, was taken to Mason City before Judge Clark and drew a fine of $150 and costs. Mrs. Erdman, whom we mentioned last week as being in the sheriff's drag net, entered a plea of guilty as the information charged. She was assessed a fine of $50 and costs. And thus surely does the transgressor of the Volstead act get his just reward. —Leader.

'TROT 'EM OUT. TROT 'EM OUT!

News: The Belmond Independent is worried over politics. It fears that the Belmond citizens are paying taxes without representation. But doesn't the Independent know that if there are any citizens up there who are yearning for official life, there is a trial heat coming off next June. Trot out your hawses, Col, trot 'em out, and we'll see if they're gogetters or not.

The editor of the Traer Star-Clipper states that after looking at one of the party dresses he is convinced that an adequate supply of clothing is not being produced. It reminds one of the old farmer who attended a banquet in the city. His wife asked him what the ladies wore. He said he didn't know; that he hated to get down and look under the table.—Humboldt Republican.

Synopsis—Episode Three
"THE MILLIONTH CHANCE"

To warn Nancy of a danger threatening her, Hutch is forced to follow her to New York on another train. Nancy and Ann are the guests of Marlow at his suburban home, the Towers.

Ann secures the silver scarf, but she gives it to Marlow when he tells her that he will tell Nancy that Ann stole it. But they cannot see the thread that tells the secret.

To prevent Nancy signing the big paper contract, Marlow locks her in her room. Hutch arrives is told Nancy is asleep, and is invited to stay for the night. He too, is locked in. When he hears Nancy pounding at her door, he lowers himself from his window, which is over the river, on a rope of sheets and swings, pendulum fashion, until he can grasp a tree and reach the ground.

The police see him climb a trellis to Nancy's window, and a terrific fight ensues Realizing the presence of the police assures Nancy's safety, Hutch decides on a quick getaway. He dives out of the window into the river, swims across, and evades his pursuers by rolling under a moving freight train, transferring himself from the top of a moving train to a bridge, and swinging across a street on a rope. There, however he is met by more police and roustabouts, who overwhelm him.

FOURTEEN-YEAR-OLD BOY GETS THE DEVIL

Some few weeks ago we printed a sensational bit of news in the Independent telling of the devil who made his appearance at a questional dance at Hutchinson, Minn., and other resorts. The devil was a great mystery and no one could solve the riddle. The following news dispatch from Fairmont, Minn., tells the story:

Fairmont, Minn., Feb., 7.—The mystery of the Devil, who broke up a questionable dance in the vicinity of Hutchinson, Minn., by appearing in the middle of the dance floor with fire streaming from eyes, mouth and tail, has been solved, according to a story told by Miss Louise Miller, who has returned from a visit with relatives in that part of Minnesota.

His Satanic Majesty did not stop with one appearance, according to Miss Miller's report, but appeared at several barn dances, each time frightening the dancers away, until finally a reward of $5,000 was offered among those who frequented these dances to anyone who would shoot the Evil One on his next appearance.

A 14 year old boy took the dare.

The Devil, shot through the abdomen proved to be a human and was rushed to a hospital where he is still in a critical condition, according to the report.

His Satanic costume was a very wonderful affair, equipped with electric batteries to give the effect of fire. He came down on a rope thru the cupola spreading terror as he came.

The man who conceived of this idea to put an end to the dance evil and who so nearly proved a martyr to the cause is said to be a Methodist minister of that vicinity.

SCHOOL NOTES

3rd and 4th grades

The fourth grade took the eighth county spelling examination last week. Three of the class passed. Thery were Mildred Janssen 94, Neva Muller 88, and Harriet Sprau 86. The majority of the class got above 50 per cent.

Tuesday afternoon the third grade gave their surprise on the fourth grade which consisted of a Valentine Box, Valentine tree, and a very short program. The Queen of Hearts and her attendants presented the visitors and children with Valentine cookies which were made by Mother Goose. About eight hundred Valentines were distributed by the good St. Valentine mail man.

The third grade donned their class colors of gray and rose for the first time on Tuesday afternoon.

5th and 6th grades

The fifth and sixth grades and high school observed Valentine's day Friday afternoon. Appropriate excercises were given by all.

The Philomathean Society gave a fine program last Friday. Songs, readings, two minute talk's and debates were given. George Abels discussed "The Road Problems," Verne Schluter talked on "The Farmers Bloc." The debate was a quadangular debate, the soldier, the poet, the orator and the teacher.

Miss Agnes Fisher defended the "soldier," Miss Eva Sprau, the "orator," Miss Esther Reverts, the "poet" and Merle Brogan, the "teacher."

New officers were installed for the new semester.

After the program a spelling contest was held each grade appointing a speller. Herman Witt won for the tenth grade. This was followed by a contest on quotations from standard authors. This was a spirited contest and certainly spoke well for the teaching of classes. The eleventh grade carried off the honors in this altho the ninth came in close second.

A number of new scholars have started to attend school. We have not the exact number, but several in the Primary room and the fifth and sixth grades, they all come from one family the rodent family, better known as the rat family. At present they are only practicing excercise lessons.

There will be a small play given by the 11th and 12th grades Friday p. m. in Meservey High school building.

The 5th and 6th grades had their Lincoln program and Valentine box Friday afternoon.

Good English week has been started in all the grades in school.

Mrs. James Faaborg, Mrs. Braga, Mrs. Abbles Mrs. Henry Frey, Gertie Pals, and Mrs. C. F. Ralston were among the visitors in the fifth and sixth grades Friday afternoon.

Elianor Muller and Ruth Schlesselman visited the fifth and sixth grades last Friday.

A BOY'S PLEA

I am only a high school boy. I am struggling hard to finish my high school year.

I do not expect or I cannot expect more from my father than the schoolin which he can give me, and that which I obtain thru my own efforts.

There are other boys in the Meservey school that the only legacy they will receive will be their schooling.

I, as a boy, cannot cast a vote; I cannot express my desires as yet by ballot.

I have stood on the streets and in the stores and I have listened to the arguments for and against a new school house.

There are those who are opposed to the bonds that tell us all a boy needs is an eighth grade education.

There are those who say that if the bonds are not voted we can get along with a tenth grade.

There are others who tell us that all we need is an education like our fathers and our grandfathers had.

There are others who tell us that the school does not need to be approved

But in studying our histories of the march of mankind we have learned that in order to meet with competition one must have a trained mind, even tho he can never rise higher han a clerk or bookkeeper or a farmer of the future.

The farmer of the future will be different from the farmer of the past; he must have a trained and disciplined mind

But I do not presume as a boy or a student in school to argue this question: neither do I presume to tell men how to vote, but I am making a plea, I am asking, that I shall not be compelled and that other boys who have finished the eighth grade shall not be compelled, to go away from home for a high school training.

Mr. Janssen's article stated that none of the Meservey school children ever complained about the school building. Very likely Mr Janssen does not know the condition of the Meservey school buildings. The school children of the Meservey high school will gladly show Mr. Janssen, or any other man or woman, the condition of the Meservey school building and outbuildings.

To the voters of the Meservey consolidated district, the boys of the Meservey school make their plea.

CHILDREN'S PLEA FOR A BETTER EDUCATION

We cannot vote but we think we have a right to express our opinion in regard to the 'new' school building. We feel that it is unfair for those who vote not to consider our conceptions, for we, the tax-payers of tomorrow will be the financeers of this construction. You voters of today have but one duty in this matter and that is to vote and vote correctly. We, the present school children are the ones who will foot the "bill". There is no question concerning the need of a new building. One of the first and main reasons for a new school house is the great danger we children are in in case of fire. We would have no means of escape only down a wooden stairway which is far from being safe. Are the lives of these children valued at dollars and cents? Are not these lives worth more than the cost of a new building?

A new building would provide for an assembly room and auditorium. In a room of larger dimensions and different conveniences, our programs, plays and society meetings would be greatly benefited. This room would serve the farmers as a judging room, banquet or picnic hall and also as a bureau meeting place.

Again, our class rooms are too small. They are dingy and the circulation of air is poor. As most of our youth is spent in these rooms, they should be healthful and cheerful in appearances. With such crude conditions it is impossble to ventilate our rooms properly. The heating system is too irregular; in one case part of the pupils abide in the torrid zone, while the remainder are seated in the frigid zone.

There are many possibilities that lie hidden for the children of our school, and it is up to you voters to make your vision of the ideal future come true, just as your forefathers sacrificed and planned for you to gain the education which you have.

It is not difficult for anyone to see that the men and women of tomorrow must have a broader and deeper education than those of today. A true citizen does not vote for his own selfish needs but votes for the welfare of the community as a whole. Don't let your own ideals deprive your community of the most valuable of public institutions.

If our district does not vote the bonds we will go away to finish our course, at the district's expense. Now we do not wish to leave our homes if it is possible to finish our work here. We are too young to rely altogether on our own opinions; we must have the advice of older ones and who are better advisers than our parents. One is liable to get out from the influence of the church and a good citizen must respect the church

A school to attend during these years is a foundaton for future years. You voters lay the foundation for us and we will build, support and finance our schools.

EVA SPRAU, EVELYN THOMAS, AGNES FISCHER, OLLIE PALS

School Notes

The class in Agriculture has completed a series of lessons upon the subject of measurements of the Capacity of bins, mows, stacks, etc. The work while intensely practical, no doubt seemed superfluous to the class. The majority if not all, are intent upon forsaking the farm for the lure of the bright lights of the city. Even the girls in Home Economics are digging hard and delving deep into the subject only to be more efficient in supervising the work of their servants in the alluring future.

The high school pupils paid their homage to Dan Cupid last Friday night by means of a Valentine party. Games were played. Light refreshments were served. The affair closed at 11 O'clock. All high school parties are scheduled to chose at this hour—that is these held in the school building.

The Fact that we have the usual movie each Tuesday night has ceased to be news. We mention it in order for you to know the program. The reels for Feb. 21 are "The Serpent's Tooth," or saw manufacture. The original saw teeth wer serpent's teeth.

A Pilgrimage showing historical scenes.

A comedy "Daisy the Demonstrator." Don't know what this is, your guess is as good as ours.

Clara Ostendorf, who was injured about the head when the school bus was blown over, is again pursuing her studies in the fifth grade.

Master Johnnie Schulte was absent from school last week. He is suffering from tonsilitis. We understand that he had his tonsils removed and will be able to resume his studies in a few days.

Last Thursday evening our faculty and their wives and husbands were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Greenfield. An excellent 3-course dinner was served, after which a social hour was spent in general conversation and story telling. Rev. Mohr even though it was prayer meeting night won the prize in story telling.

The Alexander town team and the Hampton town team played a game of basket ball on the local floor last Wednesday evening. The large attendance pronounced it one of the best and most interesting games played upon our floor for many moons. The Alexander team won. The Hampton boys are good losers; you'll search far and wide before you will find a more agreeable group of young men.

The songs, chorouses, and the repartee of the end men were very much enjoyed by the audience. The Legion will benefit to the sum of about $200 by the show.

Last Sunday evening Rev. H. Tomkinson preached a sermon on the subject "Was Lincoln a Christian?" The pastor cited cases in the life of this great American which proved beyond a shadow of doubt that Lincoln was not only one of the first statesmen but also first saints. Despite the cold stormy morning there was a fine congregation.

JUST SO

A Humboldt lady received a post card greeting from a friend in California. It ran as follows:

"Dear little post card, swiftly go
Back to the land of ice and snow,
And bear this kindly message, please,
To those dear friends of mine who freeze;
Our California's fine—just listen:
You simply don't know what you're missing."

The Humboldt lady sharpened her pencil and her wits and replied thus:

"I know that I am missing much—
Your posies and your fruit and such
Your balmy breezes in the air,
Delightful fragrance everywhere;
Your charming scenes on land and sea,
Your beaches and—your busy flea.
But though I stay indoors and freeze
While you sit 'neath your shady trees;
And though back in the land of snow
I shiver wheresoe'er I go,
I thank my stars that though I shake
The ground beneath me does not quake."

RESULTS OF VILLAGE RIVALRY AND BETTING ON GAMES

Humboldt Republican.—Over in Illinois they have stirred up a national foot-ball scandal through the rivalry of two villages to see which should win a foot-ball game. The matter is given space here not because it is related to local matters, but because it represents the outcome of village rivalry—the same sort that is threatening the smaller towns of the middle west.

Two Illinois villages were football rivals. One village won, and the next year the other imported a player to help the local team.. The next year the other village went after some college players, until last fall one village hired nine foot ball players from the University of Illinois, and the other hired the entire Notre Dame foot ball team—or thought they did. The players from the Illinois university won.

The game was the talk of the countryside The story gradually worked itself into the state papers. More than $100,000 had been bet on the game. Now comes the sequel.

The story reached the ears of the Illinois University. The officials there investigated and found nine of the best players on the team guilty. They have all been barred from amateur sports and thrown off the Illinois teams in every department. They have accepted money for their playing skill and are professionals.

This is the logical result of village rivalries, such as are creeping into Iowa villages. If the indiscriminate hiring of outside players to help local teams beat village rivals, is not stopped, it will bring about in Iowa the results that have been developed in Illinois.: Betting should be stopped. With it go the incentive to hire outside men. If the towns will all play home boys who play for fun, there will be no scandal and no ruined athletic aspirations.

MOTHER GOOSE UP TO DATE

Because she got frisky
On moonshiner's whiskey
The cow jumped over the moon.

The leap was tremendous;
It sure was stupendous—
The funeral is Saturday noon.

The song of the licker
Makes quick action quicker
It leads to the home and the hearse;

If you value your health
And cherish your wealth
You will stop ere your habits get worse.

Poor little Jack Horner
As he sat in his corner
And drank up the bootlegger's rye;

It made him feel glum,
It worried him some,
It took him five minutes to die.

Bold Jack and Sweet Jill
Had built them a still
Where they ground out that bootlegger's rye;

They called it still gin,
And the stuff they put in
Filled the grave yards a half a mile high.

Dispute Between Telephone Company and Farmers Over

"War" Is Ended By "Armistice" And Compromise Is Made On The Rates.

MONTHLY RATE TO BE $1.25

The dispute between the Belmond Telephone Company and its rural patrons around Belmond and the various exchanges, has been settled. Settlement was made by compromise. An "armistice" has been signed, and rural telephones are again carrying the news of the day.

The agreement reached between the company and its rural patrons fixes a monthly charge on country phones of $1.25, if paid by the 10th of the month, if not paid by then the charge is to be $1.50.

The company agrees to replace the phones of those who had them removed, free of charge. Those who brought their phones in are to have them back, installed, and the lines placed in order without charge.

The charge for installation of telephones remains the same as before, but the charge for changing name on the book is discontinued.

Toll calls remain the same, as this is something over which the Belmond Telephone Company has no jurisdiction, the charge being fixed by the Bell and Western Electric companies. Line calls for community affairs are to be free of charge, but personal benefit calls, such as farm sales will be as before, and line calls thru other towns to be charged as station to station calls.

About all of the phones are either back or will be back as soon as they can be installed, and the "telephone war" has become a matter of history.

PETERSON HAS UNIQUE THEATRE STUNT

The following from the Hampton Chronicle will interest Charley's home town folks.

Charles Peterson, manager of the Windsor theatre, has put Hampton on the map, theatrically speaking. The recent novel publicity which the the Windsor theatre gave to the "Old Nest" in the form of a miniature farm on the stage was considered good enough to demand the following notice on the exhibitor's page of a recent issue of the New York Telegraph:

" A most novel exploitation stunt was used for an advance advertisement of the showing of Goldwyn's photo-play, "The Old Nest," at the Windsor Theatre, Hampton Iowa.

"In the space between the silver-sheet and the front of the stage the manager had built a miniature model farm, with house, barn, silo, windmill and other buildings. Miniature telephone wires were strung along the road.

"On the left of the stage was the frame farm house, set back in a spacious yard, with a woodshed near by. Across the road was the barn and windmill with several shocks of corn showing in the foreground.

"In the road was a truck operated by a mechanical contrivance which ran it down the road and up to the door of the farm house. The blade of an electric fan was used to represent the windmill in motion. A small sign board, connecting the display up with a civic boost or Hampton, was placed in the yard.

"This display was shown every night for several days before the screening of 'The Old Nest'."

SACRED CONCERT AT CONG'L CHURCH

The Sacred Concert given by the choir of the Congregational church last Sunday evening was of unusual interest and enjoyed by a large audience.

Much time and work in the choosing of the selections given, resulted in a very satisfactory and pleasing entertainment.

The chorus consisting of 10 voices sang several beautiful anthems, interspersed with solos, duets and trios.

The ladies quartette gave two numbers and Mrs. Amy Peterson read a selection from Longfellow's Evangeline.

Miss Elizabeth Lienbach gave "That Sweet Story of Old," with music accompaniment.

The male quartette sang two selections followed by a solo by Herbert Nelson, Miss Ely at the organ and Miss Boughton at the piano as accompanists added much to the artistic program.

Art Cuppett came down from Minnesota, where he has a farm, on Tuesday for a visit with old Belmond friends and relatives.

SCHOOL NEWS ITEMS OF INTEREST

Friday night, February 24 will be the last number of the 1921-22 Lecture Course. At that time Mr. Ratto, an impersonaer, will entertain us. He comes recommended to us as one of the best entertainers in his particular line.

Now is the time to Boost Belmond. The Athletic teams are selling Metal Auto Name Plates, enameled in blue, with white letters. These plates, according to our contract, must be sold for $1.50 per pair. They are neat, attractive, and far more durable than a penant, and are made to place just above or below the auto number. The money received by the teams for the sale of the plates will be used to finance a tournament trip for the teams. Now is the time to put one on your car and advertise Belmond wherever you drive your car.

Remember that Thursday night is Community night and the time to make use of the gym. If you don't wish to play on the floor, you are welcome to watch the games from the balcony.

Saturday night of this week the Belmond boys will play the fast Nashua team from North Eastern Iowa. Martin of Goldfield will referee the game, and a fast game is promised.

We are trying to arrange for a game between B. H. S. girls and the undeafeated Garner girl's team for Saturday night, but to date have not received definite answer from Garner.

Our debating team was defeated in the third round of the state series at Harris, Friday evening. The debate was very close and our debaters were a credit to themselves and their school. It was 2 to 1 decision. Elaine Rierson, Lee Lowenberg Teddy Johnson, William Vestweber, accompanied by Miss Thomas made the trip.

Carol Tyrrell represented B. H. S. at the Sub-district contest held at Goldfield last Friday. Emmetsberg was given first place, but was ruled out because the selection was too long. Clarion having been given second, received first place because of this ruling. Belmond received second. The contest as a whole was not as good as the County Contest held here last year.

The Senior Class are going to put out an annual this year. This week the boys are solciting advertising and we hope the business men are as willing to support us as they always have been in the past.

This week Friday we send three contestants to Eagle Grove to complete in the County declamaory. Alferd Wilkinson will represent us in the Oratorical class, Carol Tyrrell in the Dramatic class, and Wilma Thompson in the Humorous class.

Last week the Belmond basket ball teams lost the two games played, one with Garner on our floor, and the other with Kanawha on the latter's floor.

In the Garner game the team was unable to strike their usual stride until the last three minutes of play. This being too late to score in the game. The score ended 17 to 18. The game was very slow and ragged. The boys seemed to be unable to regain their basket-shooting eye after playing on the Dows floor, which has only nine feet baskets.

The Kanawha game was altogether different than the Garner game. Our boys deserved to win, and would have done so had it not been for Harriman's lucky baskets the first half. during which time he caged five consecutive baskets trys from the center of the floor. The first half ended 18 to 11 in favor of Kanawha.

Belmond came back strong in the last half and held the score 21 to 21 Again we tied the score 25 to 25, with three minutes to play. During the last minute of he game, Harriman caged his only basket of the last half, making the score 25 to 27 as the whistle blew. Kanawha drew a free throw. Harriman making another point by this route, the game ended 25 to 28.

The game not being refereed closely, resulted in continous pushing, blocking, holding and unnecessary roughness thruout the game.

Come out next Saturday night and see what our boys can do against one of the best basket ball teams in the state. Nashua vs. Belmond.

If you have no church home we invite you to make your home with us.

FEED THE STARVING

From bountiful harvest, low prices, we ought not forget those sorely in need, nor that sometime we may need assistance of others. There is now being collected in and about Belmond, corn, other grains and money for the Famine suffers of the Eastern continent. Will you spare a little to prevent human suffering and starvation?

Railroads offer to carry free to Eastern seaboard, any such donations, there to be transported to the needy. Such donations of grain may be delivered to the elevators in Belmond—for Eastern Relief—taking reciept therefor.

Please do so now, or notify the Committee, A. C. Hinman, J. F. Henn or Geo. P. Hartwick.

"The Banker's Daughter" One of the Best Yet

American Legion's Home Talent Play Proves Excellent Effort And Pleases All.

PLAY CLEARS ABOUT $100

Some excellent home talent plays have been staged in Belmond, but seldom has it been the privilege of local people to enjoy as fine an exhibition as "The Banker's Daughter," given here Thursday and Friday nights of last week by the local post of the American Legion.

It was beyond any question one of the best that has ever been staged in Belmond. Without exception, the actors portrayed their characters in excellent style, putting much feeling and expression into their lines, so that never, at any time, was there the strained atmosphere generally found in home talent plays more or less. They spoke their lines naturally, unhesitatingly, and with unusual expression. The acts were carried thru smoothly, in a natural and a life-like manner, and the audience was carried along with the spirit of the play.

To pick a star from the caste would be a difficult matter, for none of them shown above the rest. If such could be chosen, it would have to be on some single instance, for taken thruout the play as staged was a splendid exhibition of what can be done with everyone co-operating and working for the one main object.

The Legion cleared a nice sum on the two night's exhibition, and the post is to be congratulated upon their success, both as individuals and as a whole. The Independent, without hesitation, pronounces "The Banker's Daughter" as the hit of the season.

Another home talent play will be staged by the Legion in the near future, and with this one as a standard to go by, the public should be favored with a play that will be well worth coming far to see.

Judge Fry to Address Good Fellowship Club

Next Meeting Of Good Fellowship Club To Be Held On March First.

FINE TIME LAST MEETING

A very interesting meeting of the Good Fellowship club was held last Wednesday in the basement of the library. The program committee had a little bad luck in securing the speakers for the evening and Rev. Wilkinson, of the Methodist church, very kindly substituted, and gave an excellent talk on the work of Luther Burbank. the Plant Wizard.

Rev. Wilkinson's talk was of much interest. He cited some of the instances of Burbank's work in the plant line, of the wonderful specimens he has produced thru cross breeding and inbreeding in the way of trees, flowers and plants, and of the remarkable patience and persistance with which Burbank has carried on his wonderful work. The address was different from anything the club has yet had the pleasure of hearing, and was interesting to a degree. Rev. Wilkinson has the thanks of the entire club for his kindness and excellent address.

The usual 'feed" was enjoyed after the talk. The preliminary program of the evening consisted of a quartette composed of Messrs. Wm. Nelson, Bert Nelson, H. G. Nordschow and Trafford. They favored those present with an excellent selection, and this was followed by a solo by Bert Nelson.

Judge Fry will be the next speaker, on March 1st. His address should be well worth hearing, and a large attendance is looked for. Come out to the next meeting and spend an enjoyable evening having a good time with your fellow men.

CITIZENS, WAKE UP!

Citizens of Belmond (that includes every voting person) Tax Payers, Wake Up! Why sleep and growl and snore! This is the year that you are going to vote for a Mayor and a full set of Councilmen, who are going to either make more expenditures in the shape of taxes, or lower same. It is your business to see to it that the ticket is not mapped and hatched behind closed doors. You are the people that place in power the machinery that make taxes; you are the people that pay taxes. Now then, why elect a man that does not know the value of his own dollar to make you pay the dollar? In other words, get together; elect a man that has real and personal and taxable property. We have many good men in our midst, who will and are not ashamed to come out in the open and state what they will do.

Regardless of creed and nationality, vote for the man that is a Man. Place Belmond on the map. There never was a better town in the state of Iowa, and never will be. Then let's make it so once for all.

Don't vote for a man because he is a doctor, merchant, banker, or a bank clerk; he is no better than a man digging holes in the ground. A man is a man, that has an interest in his fellow man, for the good he can do. not to skin him.

Very truly yours,

W. H. WOLLE.

COL. MACNIDER TO SPEAK HERE SOON

Hanford MacNider, National Commander of the American Legion, will address the Good Fellowship club in Belmond sometime between the 15th of March and May 1st.

This was announced at the Good Fellowship meeting held last Wednesday evening. It is understood that Mr. MacNider has promised to come whenever his dates will permit, and preparations are being made to make his coming an event for long remembrance. As at present understood, plans are to hold a public meeting in the high school auditorium, to which everyone will be invited. A short program may be given, with an address by the National Commander, and the meeting will then adjourn to the Library basement where the Good Fellowship members will enjoy a talk by Mr. MacNider and a banquet.

Mr. MacNider's visit to Belmond is one of which every citizen in the town may be proud, and is an honor to the community. He is more than the National Commander of the Legion, he is an international figure, and one of the two greatest young men of America. Announcement will be made thru the Independent whenever the definite date for his coming is arranged, and full plans of the program.

COURT HOUSE NOTES

News: Lester Rossman, of Belmond, has filed application for a writ of habeas corpus in district court, and Judge Fry has issued an order calling for the defendant to produce the person of Stella G. Rossman, aged eleven, in district court in Clarion on the 27th day of February 1922.

Rossman, in his petition, cites that he was married to the defendant, Edith Nihoff, February, 5 1908 and that in 1918 she sued for a divorce. He alleges that the original notice served on him called for his appearance in court September 2, 1918 and that it expressly stated the petition would be filed on September 22nd, but that on September 16th he learned a divorce had been granted defendant, and believing his rights were lost, he did not contest the action. The wife was given the custody of the girl.

Rossman alleges the mother is an unfit person to have the care and custody of the girl, and attacks her moral standing in the community. He says the little girl is being sent to school illy clad, and without shoes, but the mother, under the decree of the court, holds her in her custody. He charges that he cannot help toward the support of the child, and alleges the daughter will be ruined if she be permitted to remain in the custody of her mother.

Georgia Galbraith is suing M. W. Galbraith for divorce. They were married in Wisconsin in 1898, and she alleges cruel and inhuman treatment. The defendant is alleged to have cursed her and called her cruel names, forcing her to do work in the fields. He was recently selling out the machinery and live stock and a writ of attachment was issued against the proceeds of the sale, and the matter will come up for final hearing at the April term of court. Mrs. Galbraith asks the custody of the three minor children.

Wm. P. Chamberlain secured the appointment of guardian for the property of his mother, Mary L. Chamberlain, who is in such poor health that she cannot look after it. A house in Winfield, Iowa, is the main item. Wm. Wm. Carden, of Winfield was named guardian.

M. W. Gabraith and wife have been sued for $244.25 by Dr. Geo. E. Snearly, of Goodell, for professional services, and for $267.25 by the Wright County Furniture company of Belmond on account, and by the State Savings Bank of Goodell for $656.96 on notes. Writs of attahment were issued against the personal property of defendants.

Madeline Langland, of Eagle Grove, who has beneficiary of a $1,400 insurance policy left by her brother, the late Andrew Langland, has had Martin Hill named as her guardian. She is fourteen years old, and her parents are dead.

The grand jury at this term of court rapped the justices of peace in Wright county who have failed to file reports of the business transacted by them the past year. Only S. A. Ferguson, Rowan; A. L. Middleton, Troy; D. D. Mathewson, Liberty, and the Mayor of Clarion, have filed these reports.

The Court has ordered a special session of the Supervisors to be held February 27th, at which time they are to draw and certify a list of names available for jury service the coming year. The Auditor is to certify the number of names required from each precinct.

A HORRIBLE ACCIDENT OCCURS HERE THURSDAY

Two Men From Norway Township Driving Truck Are Struck By Motor.

BOTH ARE BADLY HURT

The Great Western crossing west of the river, the scene of former accidents and a dangerous and unnecessary place, was the scene of another tragedy last Thursday afternoon about 5:30 when Joe Larson and Leonard Johnson, two Norway township men, were struck by the evening Motor.

The two men were starting home in a truck with an enclosed cab, and failed to hear the warning bell or to see the approaching Motor. The Motor struck the truck about half way between the cab and the engine, the two occupants being thrown out on the pavement. They were carried into the lumber office near by, and later taken to the local hospital and given treatment, and reports to the Independent yesterday were that they would both recover

Larson was the most severely injured, having internal injuries. He is a married man with a family. Johnson is a single man.

The truck was demolished. This crossing has been a decidedly dangerous place for years, and it would seem that it was about time some move was started to have crossing gates installed before somebody is killed. A united effort will accomplish it, but nothing will ever be done unless it is pushed hard.

The criminal cases scheduled for this week in district court struck a snag yesterday when the attorneys for Bige and Fortune, alleged robbers of the Wheeler and Charlson & Holt stores at Woolstock and Goldfield attacked the legality of the indictments, alleging that the grand jury which heard the evidence and returned the indictments and the petit jury drawn for the present term were illegally drawn, in that the Board of Supervisors had failed to see to it that proper certification of some of the poll books, from which the names were seclected for jury service, hade been made.

The election officials in some of the rural townships had overlooked this detail, and when the books reached the Supervisors they, also, failed to certify them, thus furnishing the basis for the attack on the work of the grand jury last year and this.—News.

Mrs. W. I. Rosecrans and Miss Catharine Prichard returned Sunday afternoon from their trip to Rochester, Minnesota, whither they had gone several days previous. Mrs. Rosecrans went to Rochester for the purpose of submitting to an examination to ascertain the cause of an ailment that has bothered her much of late. Miss Prichard, her niece, who is a trained nurse, accompained her. It was thought that before Mrs. Rosecrans would receive permanent relief, an operation would be necessary, but upon their return, they bring the glad tidings that an operation is unnecessary, ad that after a course of treatment, Mrs Rosecrans can hope to be quite her natural self again. Exceedingly pleasing news to her many friends.—Leader.

  Give the lad a tow!

When a bump of trouble
  Rises in your road,
Don't begin to worry
  'Cause you've got a load.
You need all your courage—
  'Tis no time to sigh;
Step right on the gas, boys,
  Climb the hill on high!

When you're out till morning,
  Head swelled up next day,
All your last week's wages
  Blithely gone their way;
If you haven't pondered,
  It is time you did;
Better put your chains on—
  You're about to skid!

When you think you're all in.
  Got no pep at all,
Sure that you're a failure,
  All you need is gall!
When folks count you dead, just Keep on looking wise—
Crank 'er up again, boys,
  When your engine dies!

Farm Bureau News

By R. M. Edwards

Lake Township Social

Lake township farm bureau held their regular monthly social meeting at the Center school Tuesday evening February 14th. Somewhere in the neighborhood of one hundred people of that neighborhood turned out to enjoy the entertainment put on by the people in their own community.

The evening entertainment consisted of musical numbers, recitations, readings and a very well planned home talent play. The large attendance at this meeting is evidence that people in a rural community are always interested in entertainment which is furnished by their own people.

The feature of the Lake meeting was the home talent play which was put on by the young people of the township and which proved to be a great success. Those who took part in the play were theMisses Hazel Mikelson, Ola Hiter,Ila Campbell and Irene Hiter also Messrs Ralph Tincher, Russell Breckenridge, John Witzell and Carl Erickson. These young folks should be congratulated upon the splendid showing made in this home talent paly. Ralph Tincher who acted the part of the colored servant brought forth great applause with his cute sayings in the play. The darky minstrel show put on by six school children of the township seemed to make a great hit with everyone.

Social at Huntley Home

The Grant township farm bureau social which was held at the Alf Huntley home, five miles north of Clarion, Thursday evening, February 16th, proved to be a great success in point of numbers and in general, community interest. The Huntley home was packed to overflowing by people of the township who had gathered to enjoy the interesting program which had been arranged by the committee.

The following interesting program was enjoyed by all:

Duet—Marlus Lamb and Ollie Whipple.
Recitation—Pearl Woodley.
Recitation—Earl Peck.
Dialogue—Clifford Lamb and Maxine Morford.
Recitation—Agnes Dorr.
Reading—Mrs. J. J. Bell.
Solo—Mrs. Beulah Anderson.
Short Talk by County Agent Edwards.
Piano Solo—Philip Axen.
Address by Supt. C. E. Prall.

Immediately following the program refreshments consisting of sandwiches doughnuts and coffee and good thick cream were served by the good housewives of the community.

The feature of the Grant meeting was the splendid address given by Supt. C. E. Prall, of the Clarion public schools. In his opening remarks Mr. Prall brought out the fact that misinformation and ignorance are the chief enemies of farm bureau members as well as of those who follow the teaching profession. He gave some interesting facts concerning school taxes and how they are expended. He spent considerable time in explaining the school work in the Clarion high school.

Mr. Prall explained that our public school system teaches citizenship in the following ways: 1. Loyalty to our nation in time of war. 2. Development of habits and industry. [illegible] to choose good leadership. 4. Willingness to contribute to whatever is good for the advancement of international affairs.

Mr. Prall brought a message which was timely and interesting to the farmers of Grant township. He brought out points of information which the farmers of that community have been wanting to hear for some time. His remarks regarding the school taxes were very interesting and instructive. The address which he delivered to the people of Grant township is one which would be interesting to the farmers of any community. The splendid address which he gave us was highly appreciated by all farmers of Grant township.

Troy Farmers Meet at Church

A good sized group of Troy township farm bureau members gathered at the Troy church Friday evening February 17th, for a short business meeting and social good time.

An interesting program consisting of a clever flag drill by several youngsters of the community; a short talk by Adam Middleton on the U. S. grain growers and several other topics of current interest; and a most interesting and practical address by E. A. Patton, treasurer of the Wright county farm bureau who owns and operates a large farm in Blaine township. The farmers of Troy township make this a regular monthly affair and seem to take great interest in meeting together and discussing problems not only of local interest but national importance as well.

The interesting feature of this social was the "heart to heart, straight from the shoulder" address which was given by Mr. Patton. Mr. Patton's talk appealed to the farmers of Troy township because of the fact that he talked to them as an actual farmer, a man who is in the harness himself and knows the game from the practical standpoint. Mr. Patton is an interesting speaker and a man who has made a thorougt study of the farm bureau as a state and national organization.

Lively Social in Woolstock Township

The Woolstock township farm bureau held its regular monthly meeting at the No. 1 Woolstock school. About 150 farmers of that community turned out to enjoy the program arranged by the committee in charge. A lively program consisting of recitations, dialogues and several musical selections was given by the people of the community.

The most lively part of the program was the debate on the question: "Resolved that President J. R. Howard would be of greater benefit to the farmers of Iowa as United States Senator, than he would as president of the National Farm Bureau Federation." This question brought out heated discussions from members on both sides. This question which seemed to be quite popular at that time has lost its interest since the appointment of C. A. Rawson, state chairman of the republican delegation.

A short talk was given by the county agent in which a brief review of the past year's work was given and general activities of the state and national organizations were explained.

CHEATING THE OLD HEN

Garner Leader: Electrical Contractor C. C. Tessier is no friend of the festive hen or he would not be a party to perpetrating such jokes upon her as he has. Henry Duesenberg complained that his hens were loafing on the job and producing very few eggs—averaging only a half dozen each day. Tessier explained to Mr. Duesenberg that he had a scheme to make them more attentive to their prescribed duties and explained his plan to Henry. Mr. Duesengerg is always ready to try a new thought, and so set Cliff at work. Tessier wired the Duesenberg copp for electric lights, and connected the Switch with a clock that automatically turns on the light at about 4:30 o'clock. Of course, the clock can be set at any hour desired. The device was finally installed and it is a positive fact that within four days time Duesenberg's egg production jumped from six to sixty per day. The explanation is simple. The lights go on at an early hour, long before the sun is up. The hen gets off the roost as the coop is lighted and starts her day's work. This makes the day as long as are those of summer, when egg production is the heaviest.—It is the activity of the hen rather than the season of the year that governs egg production.

"SMASHING THROUGH"

When Larry evades the police and returns to "The Towers," Marlow attempts to explain the attack, but Hutch is suspicious. In the morning Hutch and Nancy start for town to sign a contract to supply paper to Harrison, a newspaper publisher, who is fighting the paper trust.

Tigerly and Hogan put obstacles in their path, but, at great risk to his own and Nancy's life, he overcomes them all and the contract is signed—to the consternation of Marlow, who has allied himself with the Paper Trust.

Bella receives a letter from her father, asking her to bring him the seaweed formula. Nancy then discovers her scarf, containing the secret of the formula's hiding place, is again missing. Ann, who has learned the combination of Marlow's safe, obtains the scarf, but is forced to give it to Nancy or else disclose herself as Nancy's enemy. Hutch, in the gymnasium, overhears Marlow plotting with members of the Paper Trust to ruin Nancy and Harrison. Hogan sneaks up behind with a heavy Indian club raised above Hutch's head.

SCHOOL NOTES

There was an old man
Who lived in the moon
He came to the earth
In an old balloon.

He told wonderful tales
Of the days of old
How teachers worked
Without any gold.

He told how for years
He wore a great coat
That was made from the hair
Of his father's old goat.

He wore for fourteen long years
One pair of good shoes
That he could never wear out,
Though they made him weep tears.

He said the teachers in the moon
Always taught by rule,
And never a child
Grew up a dunce or a fool.

What wonderful people
Live up in the moon
They can teach, they can write
And everyone sings a wonderful tune.

Teacher

(Written By Merle Brogan)

Our poet friend, the orator friend, and the soldier friend have each brought before us words of praise for their respective parts. They have endeavored to show to you, that each has done more than the other for the onward march of mankind. The truths they have presented I shall not endeavor to dispute, but would rather support them, for we know that each have had their part, and a great part, in building and advancing civilization. But I wish to present to you a word, a name, that I think and trust, shall be able to show, stands higher, and should rank above all other names in the making of history of citizenship, and bringing forth the noblest, and highest ideals of the human race, and that is the word, "Teacher."

First of all it was the teacher who first moulded and formulated the mind of the poet, and the words of the orator. And is was, and is the teacher who first teaches and instills into the mind the love of country and love for his fellowmen. Our friends before enumerated the names of Great Poets, Orators and Soldiers. But in every instance it was to the teacher that they first looked for a guiding hand to discipline the mind and train the Soul.

In saying the first instance, we mean the first early teachings that the child gets away from the home, and in a great many instances, it is the first and only teaching that the young mind receives that which unfolds to him, the beauties of the Poet the grandeur of the Orator, and the patriotism of the Soldier. The first Great Teacher of all Teachers, was the "Great Master Divine," who taught by the wayside, on the hill top, and in the temple, the great lesson and truths of mankind. He could behold a lesson in the bird, and the flower by the wayside, and in the murmur of the wind, and could so impress that lesson, that they who paused to listen, became changed in mind and character. And to love these truths until they would sacrifice their lives if needs be, to tell them to others. These teachings of 2000 years ago, of the lowly Master, have become enlightenment of the World. But we hardly need to use the "Great Master of all Teachers," we can bring to you such names as, Horace Mann and Mark Hopkins, who was the teacher of Pres. Garfield. We can bring to you such names as, Frances Willard, the little school teacher of Illinois and Wisconsin, who braved the Summers heat and the Winters cold, that she might instill into the minds of youths, love of home, and native land. And who dared to carry the temperance flag into the very face of demons, and when Frances Widdard died, after giving the life of sacrifice, bells were tolled and flags hung at half mast, and meetings were held in her memory. But I wish to bring before you the sacrifices being made every day around about us, by the willing, loving, and sacrificing teacher, who toils in all kinds of communities, among all classes of people, from early morning till late at night on small pay and smaller appreciation. A year ago last winter, a teacher in Adams County Iowa, contracted to teach a country school for $47 per month,. the farmer with whom she boarded, charged her $9 per week board, she had to walk nearly a mile, build her own fires, using corn stalks for kindling. Many a morning she frosted her fingers and feet, sacrificing health and strength. This is only one instance of many, where teachers have been underpaid, not fully appreciated, and yet time came when from out of these same schools came the farmer, the lawer, the doctor, the poet, the orator and the soldier. The imprint of the first lessons that the child learns from the teacher is like the indelible ink upon the page or, "Like the vase in which roses have been since distilled," you may break, you may shatter the vase if you will, but the scent of roses will still hang around it still. The early lessons formulated by the teacher, and when we say, "The Teacher," we mean the one who has entered the profession as a calling from the Divine Master, and whose heart is in the work, and who loves his fellowmen, his country, and his country's flag.

It is then the teachers, that has the beautiful ideals of the poet, the inspiring words of the orator, and the noble sacrifices of the soldier, and has brought forth the best, noblest and truest in life.

The Soldier

(Agnes L. Fischer)

My friends contending for the poet and the orator have told you and my friends contending for the teacher will undoubtedly tell you that each had the highest place in the history and march of mankind. They have told you that the poet thru his songs and beautiful words has stirred men to higher action, ideals and nobler purposes; that the orator thru his flowing words and fiery sentences has induced men to do the almost impossible and you will be told that the teacher thru his influnce over the scholar has made the men of the nations. This I do not deny, but I will contend today that the soldier-boy takes the first place in heroism, sacrifice and holding true those noble ideals that have been put forth by the poet the orator and the teacher.

When the Great World's War was declared in 1916, was it the poet then that we looked to? Was it the orator or the teacher that we called for to go forth leaving all that was dear to him, father, mother, sister, brother, sweetheart or wife? No, it was the soldier. It was then that the sublime sacrifice was made. True indeed, we needed the orator to repeat the poems of the poet, to go forth upon the platform to stir men to the action of giving and of buying bonds. But was this severe sacrifice? Did it try the souls of men? Did the poet, the teacher and the orator have fear of personal death? No, we think not but it was the soldier who bade farewell, probably for the last time all he cherished in the faces so dear to him and knowing that if he did come back he'd possibly be wrecked in mind and body and his vocation in life filled by one who stayed behind.

Our friends in favor of the poet and the orator have referred to great stirring events of history where the songs and orations have lifted men to do great things for their home and for their country. But I would like to refer you to one of the greatest battles of history, the Battle of Themoplal. Here three hundred patroitic sef-sacrificing Grecians gave their lives to hold back the Persian hordes from western civilization. The sacrifice made here and upon the Plains of Marathon checked the savage horde which would have destroyed the best enlightenment of the age and their valor has inspired men of all ages to go forth in their country's need. You have also been referred to great men such as Longfellow, Whittier, Holmes, Webster, Phillips, Clay and others but do these appeal more to you, to the average audience or to the school boy or girl than such names as Roosevelt, Sherman, Grant or Washington? Speak the name of Washington or tell the stories of his life in any place or audience you wish and somehow it causes a thrill within the heart of the listener as no other name in American History or Literature. Does the poem of the poet, the words of the orator or the teachings of the teacher stir men's souls and lift men to higher purposes of patriotism than the story of Washington at Valley Forge and at Morristown Heights, in that supreme hour when his men were dying of hunger and cold? He was offered a large bribe from the English government to forsake his army and enter the English cause but the true manhood within him helped him to pledge to the Almighty God that he would see it through. Can you find any poem, oration, poet, orator or teacher such sublime sacrifice.

Let me refer you once more to that day when you bade good-bye to your soldier boys and then those hours of suspension, of long and anxious waiting and then on that morn of November 11, 1918 when the bells rang out that the armistice was signed and the war was over. How our hearts leaped forth with joy, how the bells rang that soon we would see their faces once more. But some were never seen again and never will be seen again on this earth. We believe that they have gone to that higher and better place where when all battles are over they will meet with those loved ones for whom they lay down their lives.

The Poet

(By Esther Reeverts.)

Our Orator friend has told us about the great orators and their oratory and how it has moved upon the masses of the people, and we agree. But the orator who can not weave into his orations some of the beautiful poems of our land that are so dear to every American heart fails to reach the highest zeneth of an orator, who tries to sway the masses of the people as so many of the poets and their poems of our lands have done.

Our Orator and soldier friends also claim that such men as Washington, Grant, Sherman, Webster, Patrick Henry did more to sustain and keep our Union than the poets whose inspiring words have been repeated and songs sung such as, S. F. Smith's America—My country 'tis of thee, Sweet land of liberty, Of Thee I sing etc.

F. S. Key: "Star Spangled Banner," Oh say can you see, by the dawns early light, etc.

J. W. Howe—"Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Longfellow—"Ship of State.

Whittier's—"Tale of Dismal Swamp."

Could any of the generals have done more to build character, have and build noble ideas in our nation, church, home, and school. Then also think of the most beautiful religious song which have put an inspiration into so many of the hearts such as, "Blessed Assurance," "Rock of Ages," "Nearer My God to Thee," etc.

One of our opponents will undoubtedly say that the soldier has given and sacrificed his life for his country, shown nobleness, faithfulness and bravery.

But the songs of our poets have caused more enthusiam, patriotism, love for country, home, church and school.

The Germans used to say that the music and singing of the "Watch on the Rhine" was worth more than a thousand arms.

In the Battle of Chateau Thiery, in the great World's War, when the American army started on their charge, it was the music of the band of the old familiar tunes, and the songs on their lips of the dear old hymns of the American land that gave spirit, action, and power to the boys behind the guns.

One evening in the great Civil War on the bank of the Rappahammach, the confederate army on the South, or the boys in gray began playing "Dixie Land," the boys on the North or the boys in blue began playing "Star Spangled Banner." Song after song was played in challenge. But after a while one of the armies started playing "Home Sweet Home" the other army joined them and they played in union.

Who can say that the school songs given to us by the poets of our land, have not taught and trained millions of children to become strong patroits, who would even dare to sacrifice for the flag of our country.

These words of love and patriotism, have put inspiration into thousands of hearts until we feel safe to say with one of our great men, "Tell the songs of your nation and I will tell you the patriotism of your people."

President's Address

Ladies and Gentlemen: It being the custom and perhaps in this case my duty to the Philomathean Society, to give an innaugural address, I shall endeavor to say a few words which I hope will express my appreciation to you as a society, for the obligation and honor you have placed upon me.

I suppose most of you have read innaugaugaral adresses: that of the President of the United States or of the Governor of the state, but I am sure that which I shall say will not be worth the reading and I am also quite sure that when I have finished the society will not want to pass a resolution that mine should ever appear in print.

But however, there are a few things that ought to be said on these occasions. Not only words of appreciation and respect, but also words of warming or it may be words that will help us in building up and carrying on a society which I believe that we, as students of the Meservey High School may well be proud that we were the founders.

Then as our former President Miss Fischer has said, it is for us, to so plan that we will leave something worth while for those who will take our places as we pass from this school into the busy walks of life. Then we must remember too, that sometime, sooner or later, if we have done our part and succeeded in graduating from high school that we shall become members of the alumni, and it is then that we will either look back to these hours of pleasure and work; these moments of opportunity either with regret or with pleasure. And will it be that we shall go out into life and be obliged to look back to this high school and be sorry we ever graduated from its ranks? Or shall we do our work that we may look back with pleasure that we had a part in shaping and forming a structure that will prove to be a lasting joy to us, not only now in our youths, but in the years to come.

The time is fast approaching for the second trial for a new school building. Let us all do our part, so we can say we did our little bit in succeeding or helping to see a new school building erected in Meservey this year, the year most dear to us. We must act in the present. it is the present we must live. Few of us would want to live the past over again and the future will be the present tomorrow. What would our future be if it were not for our present. It is the present that makes the future. Therefore it depends upon us now, what our future will be. If we have high ideals and keep climbing, we may be sure of a pleasant and happy life to come.

I then appeal to you that we work together, that we plan together, so that we may see the good results of our work. I need your help: you need mine. Therefore we are dependent on each other. Let us then go on with determination, with our ideals fixed high and when we have closed our work here, we may look to that high school with the Great Master as teacher, where there shall be none absent and none late.

The Orator

By Eva Sprau

My friends we bring before you today four of the greatest names in all the ages, which are the Orator, the Poet, the Teacher and the Soldier.

I name the orator first because I shall endeavor to show you that he takes the first rank for greatness for purpose and for good that has been done.

It is not my purpose to speak in terms of desparagement and derogatory of either the teacher, the soldier or the poet, for we all know that each has had his place in the advancement of the human race.

As I am the first speaker. I will not persume to know what the others shall bring before you but it is fair to presume they will bring praises telling of the wonderful work and the great sacrifices each has done. But I think I only need to present to you some of the great and most important changes in the evolution of mankind that has been brought about by the orator.

Moses though slow of speech and hesitating in manner was called by God to go down and free his people. One only needs to read carefully his words, his pleading to his people his intercession to God and his Ten Commandments will prove to you that his words have shaped the destiny of the world. Moses was not a poet, he was not a soldier but he was a great statesmen and his words ring down thru the ages.

Take again Isiah the great orator prophet, with the words of a poet, the great position of a teacher and the bravery of a soldier proclaiming to wicked Israil with such words of sacrifice as, "Here am I send me" in the time of his country's need.

The Great Master of men the Lord Jesus, one of the greatest orators one cannot read his sermon on the mount but he must be embued with higher words of his enemies, "No man ever spake like this man." Think of the countless millions that his words have inspired to go forth to honest endeavor to lift up the fallen and to save the race. Take the name of Jesus from the orators and all that goes for good is lost in oblivion. Take the names of Pericles and Domosthenes of Grecian History and Grecian Demrocracy falls to naught. Take the names of Burke, Pitt and Gladstone from English History and the flower and manhood of English History has lost its beauty.

In this last war were it not for such men as Briand of France and Lloyd George of England that inspired the soldiers could go forth to war our battles would have been lost.

Our friends bring George Washington before you as a soldier. While we will admit that he was a great soldier, could he have carried on the war? Could he have equiped it with men and amunitions if it were not for the inspiring words of the orator.

Such men as James Otis who practically gave his life for the cause of the Revolutionary war; Patrick Henry with his words of warning and meaning as, "Give me liberty or give me death," or the words of John Adams in the Debate for the Declaration of Independance when he said, "Independance now Independance forever."

John Adams, Robert Livingston and Roger Sherman, three great men of their age helped to bring about, upheld and defended that immortal document "The Declaration of Independance," which has inspired the teacher, the poet and the soldier as no other document except the Holy Bible has ever inspired the world.

We believe that the words of Phillips, Webster and Summer made it possible that the soldier boy, of the north could go forth believing that he had a cause and a righteous cause to defend during the Civil War.

Can we deny that Abraham Lincoln one of the most wierd of orators should not have first place in the hearts of American people? His devotion to his country, his true and holy faith in the Supreme God, we challenge our opponents to show to us a poet, a warrior or a teacher who is embedded more in the hearts of American people than Abraham Lincoln.

WENDELL—FAABORG

On February the 15th 1922 at high noon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theo Wendell occured the marriage of their only daughter Wilhelména E. to Niels S. Faaborg the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Soren N. Faaborg.

These well known young people have grown to manhood and womanhood in this vicinity and have a very large circle of friends who love and hold them in high esteem and who wish them a long and happy wedded life. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. W. Schlesselman Pastor of the Evangelical church of Meservey. While Mrs. Della Prall played the wedding march the bridal party came forward and stood beneath a beautiful arch decorated with bells and red, white and blue prepared for the occasion. Henry Wendell a brother of the bride acted as best man and Miss Lillie Barkama acted as brides maid. After the ceremony which joined this couple as man and wife Rev. Schlesselman introduced to the relatives and friends Mr. and Mrs. Faaborg after which hearty congratulations were extended

The bride is a member of the Evangelical church of which she is a faithful worker. The groom being a World War veteran was called to the colors in 1918 getting his training at Camp Gordon going over seas to the 26 Inft. 1st Div.

The bride wore a beautiful white dress of chiffon; the groom wore a worsted suit. The house was prettily decorated with red, white and blue. A very sumptuous dinner was served. The table being decorated with red, white and blue.

After March 1st the young couple will go to housekeeping on the Mrs. Slight Brockman farm one mile south of Meservey.

To Whom It May Concern

I feel called upon to use this means to correct the rumor of a boycott by five men who met me in the basement of the church last Friday February 17th before the election.

Some one has been sadly misinformed. No threat of a boycott or cut of salary came from these men at that meeting, but instead I was insured by at least four that their support was forth coming no matter where I stood and they knew where I stood, and for the benefit of those who are in doubt, I would say that I cast my ballot in favor of a new school. I should have voted against my own conviction, if I had done otherwise.

If anyone thinks however that this is just cause for a boycott, they are invited to do their worst. I lived through a 3 years boycott before I was a minister of the gospel on account of my stand in relation to the booze question. It was unpleasant to say the least and I am still paying interest on $300 as a direct result of said boycott.

I expect to die poor but not as one who has been dishonest.

Let's keep cool, let's be real Amerisan citizens and recognize the rights of every man, let's be christian, charitable to our fellowmen and remember the golden rule.

Before this election I also made the statement that if it failed to carry this time, I would be neutral.

Nuf said. Yours for a square deal,

A. W. Schlesselman.

Joe Stadtlander was a motor passenger to Mason City on Monday.

Peter Pals and son Henry returned home from Mason City on Sunday. Henry is getting along as nicely as can be expected.

FALLS FROM ROOF

Eagle: Carl Trorup fell from the roof of his porch early Monday morning and landed on his head on the cement walk. His skull was fractured and he died almost instantly. He had called Mrs. Thorup and told her to finish dressing and come out and assist him. When she came out a few minutes later she found him lying on the walk dead. She called Mr. and Mrs. Paulson, who live near and they carried the injuried man into the house and Dr. O'Toole was summoned but life was extinct before he arrived.

The fire on the roof had been extinguished before Mrs. Thorup came out of the house. The ladder was still leaning against the porch and the exact cause of the tragic accident will never be known.

This is the second fatal accident which has occurred here in the past month. John Conkings was fatally injured in a fall from the front porch of his home and his injuries were almost identical with Mr. Thorup's.

HOGS BRINGING KLEMME NICE SUM OF MONEY

Times: Hogs are about the only farm products that is bringing the farmer real money this year. The other day we were talking with A. C. Lau and he gave us item that is well worth passing on to our farmer readers.

Saturday Henry Buseman sold him 87 head of hogs which brought him the neat sum of $2,163.00 and which perhaps is the biggest valued bunch of hogs brought in this winter by one farmer. Mr. Lau also stated that from the 7th of January to the 10th of February he has paid out to the farmers for hogs $23,369.20. Very good and we are glad to hear that the farmer is making money on at least one of his products. We presume the other live stock buyers also have paid out about the same amount to the farmers for their live stock.

Klemme is a good live stock shipping point and the market price here is always much higher than what buyers pay in the other nearby towns so that it is quite frequent that farmers closer to another town brings his stock here to sell. Just Saturday a farmer near Goodell drove his cattle to Klemme and sold them to a local buyer. That speaks well for the Klemme buyers.

SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Alice Barkema, our lone girl of the senior class, was a Hampton visitor Monday and Tuesday of last week.

Mrs. O. N. Schultz and Mrs. T. C. Johnson, of Latimer, visited our school last Thursday. Mrs. Johnson is the mother of two of our teachers, the Misses Alma and Ruth Johnson.

Mrs. Schultz sounds more familiar under the name of Miss Alvena Johnson, our third grade teacher last year. Other visitors last week were Mrs. Otto Kieslich and Miss Jessie Bell..

The Home Economics girls served an excellent four course dinner last Tuesday evening. The guests of the class were Mrs. Nels Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schulte and son, Johnnie, Mrs. J. L. Latham, Mrs. Louis Peters, Mrs. Andrew Lieuwen, Mrs. F. D. Murphy and son, Charles,, Mrs. A. D. Mohr, Miss Eva Whetstone and Miss Ella Beenen.

The dinner was well prepared and daintily served. The girls and their instructor, Miss Ruth Johnson, are to be congratulated for their excellent progress. The getting up and serving of a good meal—a well balanced meal—is an art in itself.

The Eat More Club composed of faculty members and their next friends, were royally entertained last Wednesday evening at a six o'clock dinner given by Rev. and Mrs. A. D. Mohr. A part of the club members was similarly entertained the preceding Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Latham. The original intentions of the Club were along literary lines but the gastronomic feats of the membership so far out-classed their literary prowess that they are locally known as the Eat-Mores, instead of the Shakesperians, the original name.

A Miss Paige, of Detroit, Mich., has arrived to make an indefinite visit with her friend,, Miss Cornwell, our sixth grade teacher.

A representative from the Ridpath Vawter bureau called upon us last week.We did not buy a course. Their prices are outrageously high—high enough for two dollar coin. When it comes to paying ninety dollars for a man to make a monkey out of himself for an hour's time, it smacks too much of a gold brick proposition. As to musical numbers and their productions, you are hearing just as good piano music at our picture shows.

Two bad scares threw the whole school into consternation last week, viz: scarlet fever and a wedding. Neither took place. Dick started the former and Otto is credited for the latter. Dick has already been informed that a sore throat does not always mean scarlet fever. We leave it to the school board to settle with Otto.

GENEVA MAN IS FINED $100

Chronicle: Ernest Weiner, who lives near Geneva, was fined $100 and costs by Judge D W. Parks last week for violating the state motor laws.. On January 28th, Weiner had a head-on collision with Clarence Hedrick, who was driving a horse and buggy. As Weiner did not have the lights on his Ford the court held him responsible for the accident. At the time of the collision he did not stop to render any assistance, which in itself is a crime, and there was some trouble in apprehending him. However, the county authorities learned that a Ford owned by a Geneva man was being repaired at a Garage at Ackley and they learned that the car was owned by Weiner. When he was confronted about the matter he admitted his guilt and was brot to Hampton for a hearing. Justice Parks not only gave him the limit in the way of a fine, but promised him that if he ever violated the motor laws again his license would be taken away.

Eagle Grove Man Runs Amuck

M. G. Messick, of Eagle Grove, was assessed $100 and costs by Justice Parks last Tuesday on a charge of assault. On January 22nd Messick went out on a hunting trip in Morgan township and he took along other ammunition than his shells and before he had gone far was very much intoxicated.

Messick attempted to hold up two automobiles and when he failed at this he headed for a farm yard to see what damage he could do. At the E. H. Capelien farm he met George Harkbarth and threatened to kill him if he would not obey his orders. Just at this time Mr. Capelien came out from the house to aid Mr.. Hackbarth and Messick covered him with his shot gun and threatened to kill him too. Mr. Capelien immediately returned to the house with the intention of getting his own shot gun and when he came out again Messick was beating a hasty retreat. On his way out of the yard Messick grabbed a goose and wrung its neck so that he could return home from his hunt with some game.

Mr. Hackbarth and Mr. Capelien finally overtook him and hauled him before Justice of the Peace W. H. Capelien, in Morgan township and Messick was bound over to the grand jury of the district court. The court turned the case over to Justice Parks before whom the final hearing was held.

FINED FOR "SPEEDING"

Chronicle: Christ Anderson ran his Ford car thru the streets of Hampton on all fours last Saturday afternoon, not a cylinder missing, with a democratic buggy of C. A. Fox tied behind. Chris was taking the old buggy home from the Hampton Sales Company barn, where it had been housed for several weeks. He started for the C. A. Fox home, where he is employed, and came up on Fourth street at a Dan Patch gait.

Anderson says that he was not going fast, and that he could stop his car in an instant if necessary, but of course with the wobbling buggy behind it looked like he was really "going some." That's what Marshall Hooker thought, too, because as soon as Chris reached the Fox home east of town there was a phone call from the marshall for Chris to appear at the office of Judge J. J. Sharpe at 7:30 o'clock that night.

Chris thought it was all a joke, and he says that he made a mistake by pleading guilty, because he never dreamed that the court would assess him $10 and costs, a total of $16.05. He says that he did not go faster than a five dollar fine anyway, because he turned the corners on the streets with perfect ease, which shows that he was not "speeding." Chris says that if he ever gets Hooker's flashlight again he will keep it, and the marhall will have to buy another one.

MORE REGARDING GARNER ELECTRIC LIGHT SITUATION

Leader: Elsewhere in this paper is an article signed by the Iowa Falls Electric Company. This is published on the order of John A. Reed, vice-president of the company, and forwarded to us from the Cedar Rapids office. We are not endorsing the article in any way. It is inserted as paid advertising matter and will be billed to the company.

But there are some things that we wish to call attention to. In the first place in quoting the average rate received in Garner the heaviest months in the year are taken as a basis of figures. Why not take two of the months in the summer when there is much less electricity used and give the figures? The rate would very likely be much higher.

The article quotes the rates of many towns. Why not give us some figures on towns where rates are much lower than in Garner. We can give them, in towns even smaller than Garner, and within a radius of fifty miles too. The frachise under which the Iowa Falls Company is working calls for a rate like that of other towns of like size within a radius of fifty miles.

From what we can learn, Klemme has a higher rate than Garner. Why are Garner and Klemme given the highest rate of any towns served by the Iowa Falls Company?

"Manager" Kellogg called on us the other day to give us a few pointers. He says an effort will be made to adjust matters and give satistion to the local customers, and that Mr. Reed will come here and endeavor to make a rate that will be satisfactory.

Why do the powers that be think of this during the last month of a twenty-year franchise?

And, say, what about the service some of the patrons get at times? Only last week a man living at the edge of Garner put in a small motor —¼ or ½ horse—and had to have it taken out. It would scarcely run itself, let alone pulling any load. One patron said their lights were handy to go to bed and get up by, but if they wanted to read, they had to light a kerosene lamp. Two dealers told us they quit trying to sell electric stoves. The service was so poor they could not heat the tea kettle in all day.

If the Iowa Falls Electric Company did business with the same idea of giving satisfactory service at a reasonable cost that merchants of Garner do, we don't believe there would be one continual feeling of dissatisfaction. The man in charge of the local plant does all he can to do the right thing by the patrons, so don't blame him.

Mrs. Charles Winwood returned home Saturday after a visit with her parents at Iowa Falls.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is the skipper, Neils Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII.—Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.—Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

CHAPTER X.—Our three adventurers form a "syndicate,' with the gunboat, which they have renamed the Maggie II, as their base of operations. They sail for the South Sea islands, where they plan to obtain valuable black coral.

Sittin', the scrappin', the petty jealousies and general cussedness that characterized our lives on the old Maggie will not be duplicated on the Maggie II. Them vicious days is gone forever, I hope, an' from now on the motto of us three should be:

> "All for one and one for all—
> United we stand, divided we fall."

This earnest little speech, which came straight from the honest McGuffey's heart, brought the tears to the commodore's eyes. Under the inspiration of McGuffey's unselfish words the glasses were refilled and all three pledged their friendship anew. As for Captain Scraggs, he was naturally of a cold and selfish disposition, and McGuffey's toast appealed more to his brain than to his heart. Had he known what was to happen to him in the days to come and what that simple little motto was to mean in his particular case, it is doubtful if he would have tossed off his liquor as gaily as he did.

"There's one thing more that we mustn't neglect," warned Mr. Gibney before the meeting broke up. "We've got to run this little vessel into some dog-hole where there's a nice beach and smooth water, and change her name. I notice that her old name Reina Maria is screwed into her bows and across her stern in raised gilt letters, contrary to law and custom. We'll snip 'em off, sandpaper every spot where there's a letter, and repaint it; after which we'll rig up a stagin' over her bow and stern, and cut her new name, 'Maggie II,' right into her plankin'. Nobody'll ever suspect her name's been changed. I notice that the official letters and numbers cut into her main beam is F-C-P—9957. I'll change the F to E, and the C to O, and the P to R. A handy man with a wood chisel can do lots of things. He can change those nines to eights, the five to a six, and the seven to a nine. I've seen it done before. Then we'll rig a foretopmast and a spinnaker boom on her, and bend a fisherman's staysail. Nothing like it when you're sailing a little off the wind. Scraggs, you have the papers of the old Maggie, and we all have our licenses regular enough. Dig up the old papers, Scraggsy, and I'll doctor 'em up to fit the Maggie II. As for our armament, we'll dismount the guns and stow 'em away in the hold until we get down on the Colombian coast, and while we're lying in Panama repairing the holes where my shots went through her, and puttin' new planks in her decks where the old plankin' has been scored by shrapnel, those paraqueets will think we're as peaceful as chipmunks. Better look over your supplies, McGuffey, and see if there's any paint aboard. I'd just as lief give the old girl a different dress before we drop anchor in Panama."

"Gib," said Captain Scraggs, earnestly, "I'll keel-haul and shull-drag the man that says you ain't got a great head."

"By the lord," supplemented McGuffey, "you have."

The commodore smiled and tapped his frontal bone with his forefinger. "Imagination, my lads, imagination," he said, and reached for the last of the punch.

Exactly three weeks from the date of the naval battle which took place off the Coronado islands, and whereby Mr. Gibney became commodore and managing owner of the erstwhile Mexican coast patrol schooner Reina Maria, that vessel sailed out of the harbor of Panama completely rejuvenated. Not a scar on her shapely lines gave evidence of the sanguinary engagement through which she had passed.

Mr. Gibney had her painted a creamy white with a dark blue waterline. She had had her bottom cleaned and scraped and the copper sheathing overhauled and patched up. Her sails had been overhauled, inspected, and repaired wherever necessary, and in order to be on the safe side, Mr. Gibney, upon motion duly made by him and seconded by McGuffey (to whom the seconding of the Gibney motions had developed into a habit), purchased an extra suit of new sails. The engines were overhauled by the faithful McGuffey and a large store of distillate stored in the hold. Captain Scraggs, with his old-time aversion to expense, made a motion (which was seconded by McGuffey before he had taken time to consider its import) providing for the abolition of the office of chief engineer while the Maggie II was under sail, at which time the chief ex-officio was to hold himself under the orders of the commodore and be transferred to the deck department if necessary. Mr. Gibney approved the measure and it went into effect. Only on entering or leaving a port, or in case of chase by an enemy, were the engines to be used, and McGuffey was warned to be extremely saving of his distillate.

Mr. Gibney made a splendid job of changing the vessel's name, and as she chugged lazily out of Panama bay and lifted to the long ground-swell of the Pacific, it is doubtful if even her late Mexican commander would have recognized her. She was indeed a beautiful craft, and Commodore Gibney's heart swelled with pride as he stood aft, conning the man at the wheel, and looked her over. It seemed like a sacrilege now, when he reflected how he had trained the gun of the old Maggie on her that day off the Coronados, and it seemed to him now even a greater sacrilege to have brazenly planned to enter her as a privateer in the struggles of the republic of Colombia. The past tense is used advisedly, for that project was now entirely off, much to the secret delight of Captain Scraggs, who, if the hero of one naval engagement, was not anxious to take part in another. In Panama the freebooters of the Maggie II learned that during Mr. Gibney's absence on his filibustering trip the Colombian revolutionists had risen and struck their blow. After the fashion of a hotheaded and impetuous people, they had entered the contest absolutely untrained. As a result, the war had lasted just two weeks, the leaders had been incontinently shot, and the white-winged dove of peace had once more spread her pinions along the borders of the Gold coast.

Commodore Gibney was disgusted beyond measure, and at a special meeting of the syndicate, called in the cabin of the Maggie II that same evening, it was finally decided that they should embark on an indefinite trading cruise in the South seas, or until such time as it seemed their services must be required to free a downtrodden people from a tyrant's yoke.

Captain Scraggs and McGuffey had never been in the South seas but they had heard that a fair margin of profit was to be wrung from trade in copra, shell, coconuts, and kindred tropical products. They so expressed themselves. To this suggestion, however. Commodore Gibney waved a deprecating paw.

"Legitimate tradin', boys," he said, "is a nice, sane, healthy business, but the profits is slow. What we want is quick profits, and while it ain't set down in black and white, one of the principal objects of this syndicate is to lead a life of wild adventure. In tradin', there ain't no adventure to speak of. We ought to do a little black-birdin', or raid some of those Jap pearl fisheries off the northern coast of Formosa."

"But we'll be chased by real gunboats if we do that," objected Captain Scraggs. "Those Jap gunboats shoot to kill. Can't you think of somethin' else, Gib?"

"Well," said Mr. Gibney, "for a starter, I can. Suppose we just head straight for Kandavu island in the Fijis, and scheme around for a cargo of black coral? It's only worth about fifty dollars a pound. Kandavu lays somewhere in latitude 22 south, longitude 178 west, and when I was there last it was fair reekin' with cannibal savages. But there's tons of black coral there, and nobody's ever been able to sneak in and get away with it. Every time a boat used to land at Kandavu, the native niggers would have a white-man stew down on the beach, and it's got so that skippers give the island a wide berth."

"Gib, my dear boy," chattered Captain Scraggs, "I'm a man of peace and I—I——"

"Scraggsy, old stick-in-the-mud," said Mr. Gibney, laying an affectionate hand on the skipper's shoulder, "you're nothin' of the sort. You're a fightin' tarantula, and nobody knows it better'n Adelbert P. Gibney. I've seen you in action, Scraggsy. Remember that. It's all right for you to say you're a man of peace and advise me and McGuffey to keep out of the track of trouble, but we know that away down low you're goin' around lookin' for blood, and that once you're up agin the enemy, you never bat an eyelash. Eh, McGuffey?"

McGuffey nodded; whereupon, Captain Scraggs, making but a poor effort to conceal the pleasure which Mr. Gibney's rude compliment afforded him, turned to the rail, glanced seaward, and started to walk away to attend to some trifling detail connected with the boat falls.

"All right, Gib, my lad," he said, affecting to resign himself to the inevitable, "have it your own way. You're a commodore and I'm only a plain captain, but I'll follow wherever you lead. I'll go as far as the next man and we'll glom that black coral if we have to slaughter every man, woman and child on the island. Only, when we're sizzlin' in a pot don't you up and say I never warned you, because I did. How d'ye propose intimidatin' the natives, Gib?"

"Scraggsy," said the commodore, solemnly, "we've waged a private war agin a friendly nation, licked 'em and helped ourselves to their ship. We've changed her name and rig and her official number and letters and we're sailin' under bogus papers. That makes us pirates, and that old Maggie burgee floatin' at the fore ain't nothin' more nor less than the Jolly Roger. All right! Let's be pirates. Who cares? When we slip into M'galao harbor we'll invite the king and his head men aboard for dinner. We'll get 'em drunk, clap 'em in double irons, and surrender 'em to their weepin' subjects when they've filled the hold of the Maggie II with black coral. If they refuse to come aboard we'll shell the bush with that long gun and the Maxim rapid-fire guns we've got below decks. That'll scare 'em so they'll leave us alone and we can help ourselves to the coral."

Scraggs' cold blue eyes glistened. "Lord, Gib," he murmured, "you've got a head."

"Like playin' post-office," was McGuffey's comment.

The commodore smiled. "I thought you boys would see it that way. Now tomorrow I'm going ashore to buy three divin' outfits and lay in a big stock of provisions for the voyage. In the meantime, while the carpenters are gettin' the ship into shape, we'll leave the first mate in charge while we go ashore and have a good time. I've seen worse places than Panama."

As a result of this conference Mr. Gibney's suggestions were acted upon, and they contrived to make their brief stay in Panama very agreeable. They inspected the work on the canal, marveled at the stupendous engineering in the Culebra Cut, drank a little, gambled a little. McGuffey whipped a bartender. He was ordered arrested, and six spiggoty little policemen, sent to arrest him, were also thrashed. The reserves were called out and a riot ensued. Mr. Gibney, following the motto of the syndicate, i. e.,

> All for one and one for all—
> United we stand, divided we fall,

mixed in the conflict and presently found himself in durance vile. Captain Scraggs, luckily, forgot the motto and escaped, but inasmuch as he was on hand next morning to pay a fine of thirty pesos levied against each of the culprits, he was instantly forgiven. Mr. Gibney vowed that if a United States cruiser didn't happen to be lying in the roadstead, he would have shelled the town in retaliation.

But eventually the days passed, and the Maggie II, well found and ready for sea, shook out her sails to a fair breeze and sailed away for Kandavu. She kept well to the southwest until she struck the southeast trades, when she swung around on her course, headed straight for her destination. It was a pleasant voyage, devoid of incident, and the health of all hands was excellent. Mr. Gibney took daily observations, and was particular to make daily entries in his log when he, Scraggs, and McGuffey were not playing cribbage, a game of which all three were passionately fond.

On the afternoon of the twenty-ninth day after leaving Panama the lookout reported land. Through his glasses Mr. Gibney made out a cluster of tall palms at the southerly end of the island, and as the schooner held lazily on her course he could discern the white breakers foaming over the reefs that guarded the entrance to the harbor.

"That's Kandavu, all right," announced the commodore. "I was there in '89 with Bill McGinty in the schooner Dashin' Wave. There's the entrance to the harbor, with the Esk reefs to the north and the Pearl reefs to the south. The channel's very narrow—not more than three cables, if it's that, but there's plenty of water and a good muddy bottom that'll hold. McGuffey, lad, better run below and tune up your engines. It's too dangerous a passage on an ebb-tide for a sailin' vessel, so we'll run in under the power. Scraggsy, stand by and when I give the word have your crew shorten sail."

Within a few minutes a long white streak opened up in the wake of the schooner, announcing that McGuffey's engines were doing duty, and a nice breeze springing up two points aft the beam, the Maggie heeled over and fairly flew through the water. Mr. Gibney smiled an ecstatic smile as he took the wheel and guided the schooner through the channel. He rounded her up in twelve fathoms, and within five minutes every stitch of canvas was clewed down hard and fast. The sun was setting as they dropped anchor, and Mr. Gibney had lanterns hung along the sail so that it would be impossible for any craft to approach the schooner and board her without being seen. Also the watch on deck that night carried Mauser rifles, six-shooters, and cutlasses. Mr. Gibney was taking no chances.

CHAPTER XI.

"Now, boys," announced Commodore Gibney, as he sat at the head of the officers' mess at breakfast next morning, "there'll be a lot of canoes paddling off to visit us within the hour, so whatever you do, don't allow more than two of these cannibals aboard the schooner at the same time. Make 'em keep their weapons in the canoes with 'em, and at the first sign of trouble shoot 'em down like dogs. It may be that these precautions ain't necessary, but when I was here twenty years ago it was all the rage to kill a white man and eat him. Maybe times has changed, but the harbor and the coast looks just as wild and lonely as they ever did, and I didn't see no sign of missionary when we dropped hook last night. So don't take no chances."

All hands promised that they would take extreme care, to the end that their precious persons might remain intact, so Mr. Gibney finished his cup of coffee at a gulp and went on deck.

The Kandavu aborigines were not long in putting in an appearance. Even as Mr. Gibney came on deck half a dozen canoes shot out from the beach. Mr. Gibney immediately piped all hands on deck, armed them, and nonchalantly awaited the approach of what might or might not turn out to be an enemy.

When the notilla was within pistol shot of the schooner Mr. Gibney stepped to the rail and motioned them back. Immediately the natives ceased paddling, and a wild-looking fellow stood up in the forward canoe. After the manner of his kind he had all his life soused his head in lime-water when making his savage toilette, and as a result his shock of black hair stood on end and bulged out like a crowded hayrick. He was naked, of course, and in his hand he held a huge war club.

"That feller'd eat a rattlesnake," gasped Captain Scraggs. "Shoot him, Gib, if he bats an eye."

"Shut up," said the commodore, a trifle testily; "that's the number-one nigger, who does the talkin'. Hello, boy."

"Hello, cap'n," replied the savage, and salaamed gravely. "You likee buy chicken, buy pig? Maybe you say come 'board, I talk. Me very good friend white master."

"Bless my sweet-scented soul!" gasped the commodore. "What won't them missionaries do next? Cut off my ears if this nigger ain't civilized!" He beckoned to the canoe and it shot alongside, and its brown crew came climbing over the rail of the Maggie II.

Mr. Gibney met the spokesman at the rail and they rubbed noses very solemnly, after the manner of salutation in Kandavu. Captain Scraggs bustled forward, full of importance.

"Interduce me, Gib," he said amiably, and then, while Mr. Gibney favored him with a sour glance, Captain Scraggs stuck out his hand and shook briskly with the native.

"Happy to make your acquaintance," he said. "Scraggs is my name, sir. Shake hands with McGuffey, our chief engineer. Hope you left all the folks at home well. What'd you say your name was?"

The islander hadn't said his name was anything, but he grinned now and replied that it was Tabu-Tabu.

"Well, my bucko," muttered McGuffey, who always drew the color line, "I'm glad to hear that. But you ain't the only thing that's taboo around this packet. You can jest check that war club with the first mate, pendin' our better acquaintance. Hand it over, you black beggar, or I'll hit you a swat in the ear that'll hurt all your relations. And hereafter, Scraggsy, just keep your nigger friends to yourself. I ain't waxin' effusive over this savage, and it's agin my principles ever to shake hands with a colored man. This chap's a d—d ugly customer, and you take my word for it."

Tabu-Tabu grinned again, walked to the rail, and tossed his war club down into the canoe.

"Me good missionary boy," he said rather humbly.

"McGuffey, my dear boy," protested Captain Scraggs, "don't be so doggone rude. You might hurt this poor lad's feelin's. Of course he's only a simple native nigger, but even a dawg has feelin's. You——"

"A-r-r-rh!" snarled McGuffey.

"You two belay talkin' and snappin' at each other," commanded Mr. Gibney, "an' leave all bargainin' to me. This boy is all right and we'll get along first rate if you two just haul ship and do somethin' useful besides buttin' in on your superior officer. Come along, Tabu-Tabu. Makee little eat down in cabin. You talkee captain."

"Gib, my dear boy," sputtered Captain Scraggs, bursting with curiosity, following the commodore's reappearance on deck, "whatever's in the wind?"

"Money—fortune," said Mr. Gibney, solemnly.

McGuffey edged up and eyed the commodore seriously. "Sure there ain't a little fightin' mixed up in it?" he asked.

"Not a bit of it," replied Mr. Gibney. "You're as safe on Kandavu as if you was in church. This Tabu kid is sort of prime minister to the king, with a heap of influence at court. The crew of a British cruiser stole him for a galley police when he was a kid, and he got civilized and learned to talk English. He was a cannibal in them days, but the chaplain aboard showed him how foolish it was to do such things, and finally Tabu-Tabu got religion and asked as a special favor to be allowed to return to Kandavu to civilize his people. As a result of Tabu-Tabu's efforts, he tells me the king has concluded that when he eats a white man he's flyin' in the face of his own interests, and most generally a gunboat comes along in a few months and shells the bush, and—well, anyhow, there ain't been a barbecue on Kandavu for ten years. It's a capital crime to eat a man now, and punishable by boilin' the offender alive in palm oil."

"Well," rumbled McGuffey, "this Tabu-Tabu don't look much like a preacher, if you ask me. But how about this black coral?"

"Oh, I've ribbed up a deal with him," said Mr. Gibney. "He'll see that we get all the trade we can lug away. We're the first vessel that's touched here in two years, and they have a thunderin' lot of stuff on hand. Tabu's gone ashore to talk the king into doin' business with us. If he consents, we'll have him and Tabu-Tabu and three or four of the subchiefs aboard for dinner, or else he'll invite us ashore for a big feed, and we'll have to go."

"Supposin' the king don't care to have any truck with us?" inquired McGuffey, anxiously.

"In that case, Mac," replied the commodore with a smile, "we'll just naturally shell him out of house and home."

"Well, then," said McGuffey, "let's get the guns ready. Somethin' tells me these people ain't to be trusted, and I'm tellin' you right now, Gib, I won't sleep well tonight unless them two quarter gatlings and the Maxim-Vickers rapid-fire guns is mounted and ready for business."

"All right, Mac," replied Mr. Gibney, in the tone one uses when humoring a baby. "Set 'em up if it'll make you feel more cheerful. Still, I don't see why you want to go actin' so foolish over nothin'."

"Well, Gib," replied the engineer, "I may be crazy, but I ain't no fool, and if there's a dead whale around the ship, I can come pretty near smellin' it. I tell you, Gib, that Tabu-Tabu nigger had a look in his eye for all the world like a cur dog lickin' a bone. I ain't takin' no chances. My old man used to say: 'Bart, whatever you do, allers have an anchor out to windward.'"

"By the left hind leg of the Great Sacred Bull," snapped Captain Scraggs, "if you ain't enough to precipitate war."

"War," replied McGuffey, "is my long suit—particularly war with native niggers. I just naturally crave to punch the ear of anything darker than a Portugee. Remember how I cleaned out the police department of Panama?"

"Mount the guns if you're goin' to, Mac. If not, for the love of the Lord don't be demoralizin' the crew with this talk of war. All I ask is that you set the guns after I've finished my business here with Tabu-Tabu. He's been on a war vessel, and knows what guns are, and if he saw you mountin' them it might break up our friendly relations. He'll think we don't trust him."

"Well, we don't," replied McGuffey, doggedly.

"Well, we do," snapped Captain Scraggs.

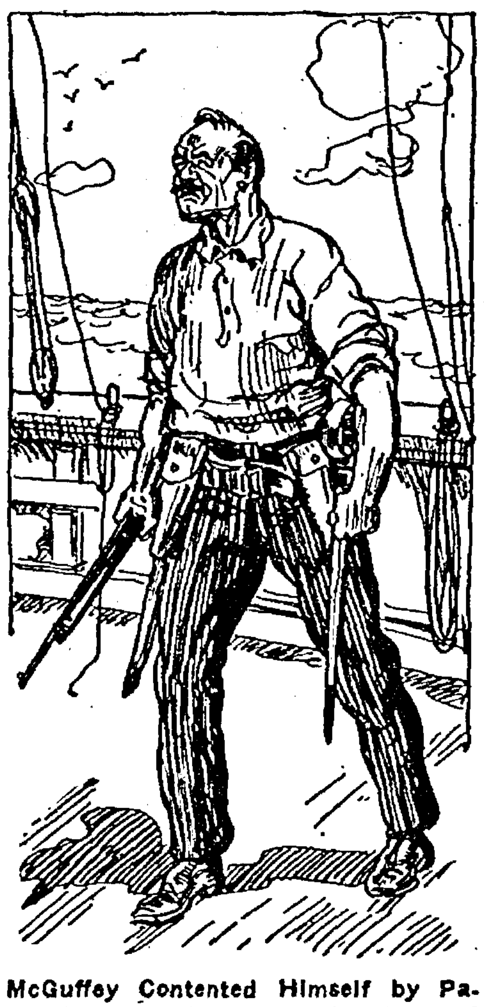
There is always something connected with the use of that pronoun of kings which eats like a canker at the heart of men of the McGuffey breed. That officer now spat on the deck, in defiance of the rules of his superior officers, and glared at Captain Scraggs.

"Speak for yourself, you miserable little wart," he roared. "If you include me on that cannibals' visitin' list, and go to contradictin' me agin, I'll——"

"Mac," interrupted Mr. Gibney, angrily, "control yourself. It's agin the rules to have rag-chewin' and back-bitin' on the Maggie II. Remember our motto: 'All for one and one for all'——".

"Here comes that sneakin' bushy-headed murderer back to the vessel," interrupted McGuffey. "I wonder what devilment he's up to now."

Mr. McGuffey was partly right, for in a few minutes Tabu-Tabu came alongside, climbed aboard, and salaamed. Mr. Gibney, fearful of McGuffey's inability to control his antipathy for the race, beckoned Captain Scraggs and Tabu-Tabu to follow him down into the cabin. Meanwhile, McGuffey contented himself by parading backward and forward across the fo-castle head with a Mauser rifle in the hollow of his arm and his person fairly bristling with pistols and cutlasses. Whenever one of the flotilla of canoes hove to at a respectful distance, showed signs of crossing an imaginary deadline drawn by McGuffey, he would point his rifle at them and swear horribly. He scowled at Tabu-Tabu when that individual finally emerged from the conference with Mr. Gibney and Scraggs and went over the side to his waiting canoe.



McGuffey Contented Himself by Parading Backward and Forward Across the Fo' Castle Head.

"Well, what's in the wind this time?" inquired McGuffey.

"We're invited to a big feed with the king of Kandavu," replied Captain Scraggs, as happy as a boy. "Hop into a clean suit of ducks, Mac, and come along. Gib's goin' to broach a little keg of liquor and we'll make a night of it."

"Good lord," groaned McGuffey, "does the man think I'm low enough to eat with niggers?"

"Leave him to his own devices," said Mr. Gibney, indulgently. "Mac's just as Irish as if he'd been born in Dublin, instead of his old man. Nobody yet overcome the prejudice of an Irishman so we'll do the honors ourself, Scraggsy, old skittles, and leave Mac in charge of the ship."

"Mind you're both back at a seasonable hour," warned McGuffey. "If you ain't, I'll suspect mischief and—say! Gib! Well, what's the use of talkin' to a man with an imagination? Only if I have to go ashore after you two, those islanders'll date time from my visit, and don't you forget it."

Upon arrival at the beach the two adventurers were met by a contingent of frightful-looking savages bearing long spears. As the procession formed around the guests of honor and plunged into the bush, bound for the king's wari, two island maidens marched behind the two sea-dogs, waving huge palm-leaf fans, the better to make the passage a cool and comfortable one.

"By the gods of war, Gib, my dear boy," said the delighted Captain Scraggs, "but this is class, eh, Gib?"

"Every time," responded the commodore. "If that chuckle-headed McGuffey only had the sense to come along he might be enjoyin' himself, too. You must be dignified, Scraggsy, old salamander. Remember that you're bigger an' better'n any king, because you're an American citizen. Be dignified, by all means. These people are sensitive and peculiar, and that's why we haven't taken any weapons with us. If they thought we doubted their hospitality they'd have the court bouncer heave us out of town before you could say Jack Robinson."

"I'd love to see them giving the bounce to McGuffey," said Captain Scraggs, musingly. Mr. Gibney had a swift mental picture of such a proceeding and chuckled happily. Had he been permitted a glance at McGuffey at that moment he might have observed that worthy sweltering in the heat of the forward hold of the Maggie II, for he was busy getting his guns on deck. From which it will readily be deduced that B. McGuffey, Esquire, was following the advice of his paternal ancestor and getting an anchor out to windward.

Some fellow up town with curiosity and time, figured it out one day, taking as a starter the amount of money one local dealer had spent for revenue stamps in that time. PEOPLE APPROVE COUNCIL'S ACTION

Eagle: If anyone may judge by the readiness with which the people sign their names to the petition requesting an election on the municipal lighting and power plant proposition, the election will be overwhelmingly in the favor of a municipal plant.

Nearly a thousand signers to the different petitions have been secured, over 300 more than is necessary. At the meeting of the council next Monday night, necessary legal steps will be taken toward calling an election on the two propositions asked for in the petition. These are, the authority to call an election for a muncicipal lighting and power plant, and for the authority to sell bonds to the extent of $185,000 with which to finance the new plant. The election must be held within twenty-eight days from next Monday night's meeting. This would place the election around the 27th of March.

The Northern Iowa is having its troubles in other places besides Eagle Grove. Up at Forest City, where our old friend, David McGee, is manager, the company is charging a 17½c rate. The council ordered a reduction and the order met with the same fate as did the order by the Eagle Grove council. Then the Forest City council passed an ordinance with several teeth in it. They provided a jail sentence for any official of the company who attempted to collect for light and power over what was permitted in the ordinance. The company then went into the federal court and got out a temporary injunction restraining the council from enforcig the ordiance.

A very enjoyable skating party was had by the pupils of District No. 6 in Pleasant township, last week Thursday evening. Miss Lena Steenblock, the teacher, had invited the pupils to a skating affair, and they spent an enjoyable time on the nearby pond, refreshments being served.

AUTO SHOWS BRING OUT MANY NEW MOTOR CAR FEATURES

It is hardly possible to pick up a newspaper these days without noting a reference to something new in the motor-car industry. Improvements in springs, bodies, carburators, motors, and other important working parts of the car are seemingly everyday affairs.

Altogether the tendency is to decrease first cost as far as is consistent with good workmanship and material, keeping constantly in mind the fact that long life must be maintained and up-keep cost must be held down to a low level.

The most notable exception to the general tendency to cut manufacturing costs by substituting new materials, new designs, and new methods of production, is the automobile storage battery. The staunchness with which the principal battery manufacturers hold to their standards and to the details of construction of their product is striking proof of their faith that each is making a battery which, in his opinion, is as good as can be built.

Contrary to the general demand for lower priced materials and parts to be put in cars, one of the largest battery manufacturers, the Willard Storage Battery Company, of Cleveland, reports that there is more general use than ever before of their Threaded Rubber Battery. This is a higher priced product than the other types of automobile batteries which it manufactures, but notwithstanding that fact, there are 191 builders of motor cars and trucks furnishing this battery as standard equipment.

Citizen's Caucus To Be Held Next Tuesday

Three Announcements For The Mayorality And Caucus To Be Held Mean Business.

WHY NOT A LADY OFFICIAL

Ladies 'n' Gentl'man, we have with us today the old reliable and well known politics, who will, with arts many, and varied, entertain you for the next three weeks.

That buzzing noise you have heard anon or oftener in the air was not airplanes sailing over head, but merely the preliminary opening excercise of the Political bees who are beginning to swarm in ever increasing numbers. It sure do look like a warm spring.

Politically speaking, as it were, we present to the various candidates and factions and fraternities not to say brotherhoods, of political kin, a thought which seems to be mulling more or less in the minds of some, to wit: Why not a feminine member of the official city force? Equal sufferage now prevails; the ladies are equally entitled—and duty bound—to a place in the sun; and to our way of thinking would be as equal in ability as any man. Well? Perhaps some one of the opposing forces arraying themselves for conflict will see a light.

This is no joke; it's plain horse sense. (Some lordly male here makes the remark that he always knew we were, but what kind?) Can anyone tell us any good sufficient reason why the ladies are not entitled to run for office, or, if elected, why they are not qualified to fill the job? Not casting any asperations on the men folks either. It's new, of course; so was equal sufferage, or the primary, or prohibition; they all seem to work fair to middling just the same. And who questions their ability to get what they want? Ask any married man.

Mull it over, gentlemen; mull it over. Of course we all realize that the chances of sudden conversion are slim, very slim, that will come with time we hope. But there must always be a progressive in any community, and maybe one abides with us. Politically speaking, what do you know?

TO TALK LOWER ELECTRIC RATES

Mayor Barry is in receipt of a letter from Mr. Reid, of the Iowa Falls Electric company, in which Mr. Reid states that he will be in Belmond in the near future to take up the proposition of lowering the electric light and power rates in Belmond. Several citizens had spoken to Mayor Barry regarding the rates being paid here for service, and the Mayor had passed the information on to the gentle man named. The outcome of the coming conference will be awaited with interest.

BELMOND FIGURES IN COURT AFFAIRS

G. A. Gunderson was a farmer in the Belmond vicinity. He had his losses. His landlord, N. O. Stackhouse, has sued him to collect $400 on unpaid rental, and has secured a landlord's attachment to protect the claim. At the same time Andrea Gunderson has sued the husband for a divorce, $2,000 permanent alimony, $100 for her attorney and $150 temporary alimony as well as the custody of the children. She alleges cruel and inhuman treatment. She has been made sick and nervous, she claims, by his abuse and even her mind is effected. She claims he is worth around $3,500, mostly free from claims, except a landlord's lien

Georgia Galbraith likewise sues for divorce from M. V. Galbraith, whose property is tied up under attachment proceedings instituted by his creditors.

A prenuptial agreement signed before their marriage is one angle of the litigations arising out of the marriage and death of Fred C. Veeder, formerly a farmer in the Belmond neighborhood.

After the marriage, the second wife, Dora B. Lang, herself divorcing a recreant husband a few months prior to her marriage to Mr. Veeder, lived with the latter on the Veeder farm but a few months, alleging cruelty which she could not bear. Then a few months later she returned to the farm again, remaining but a short time before returning to Belmond again and after suing for a divorce. Mr. Veeder filed a cross bill, and the divorce was awarded to him, the case being appealed to the supreme court, where it was held the evidence was insufficient to justify a divorce for either, as the writer understands the case, and before the matter was finally adjusted in the courts, Mr. Veeder died.

After the death of Mr. Veeder, the widow filed a copy of the prenuptial contract in the recorder's office. The contract provides that the wife is to receive one-sixth of the Veeder property, plus the face value of the insurance certificates which were made out to his children. In addition to one-sixth interest in his total assets, he agreed to purchase a residence property in Belmond which was to house her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Lee, during their lifetime or until the death of Mr. Veeder. The property was then to be appraised and was to be deducted from her one-sixth interest. The contract provided that the agreement was to continue in force so long as the said Dora B. Lang lived as the wife of Mr. Veeder.

The case now being tried in the court is to determine wether or not the widow should receive the one-sixth interest in the Veeder estate without taking into account the debts against the various properties he owned, or whether she should take a one-sixth interest in the net worth of the husband at the time of his death.

Apparently Mr. Veeder was worth around $30,000 at his death, but they round when his affairs were checked up that he was in reality worth only around six thousand after the debts had been paid. If the widow takes one-sixth of the net worth she will not share very heavily. If the prenuptial contract is set aside and she takes the widow's third, she will fare somewhat better.

Yesterday morning she, and her father were on the stand and recited the stories told at the time the divorce suits were being tried, of cruelty on his part. She denied any knowledge of his debts at the time they were married. The attorneys for the Veeder heirs objected to the evidence so introduced, on the ground it was hearsay, irrelevant, and immaterial, but most of the evidence was heard. Then the Veeders offered the various petitions, the prenuptial contract, and various other official documents in connection with the litigation.

The Court has taken the case under advisement.

UPON THE RESPONSE OF LOCAL PEOPLE LARGELY DEPENDS OUR LAST CHANCE

Hopes are strong as this is written that the factory of the Iowa Valley Sugar Co. will be operated this coming season.

Of three major questions to be settled, we understand two have been taken care of, and the third, money, appears to be in a good way toward being solved. So many stories—Practically all of them utterly without foundation— have been in circulation, regarding the sugar company and the prospects of operation, the past history, future, and present, that the Independent feels a few facts will not go amiss.

These facts are not new, secret or confidential, but they seem to have been forgotten. They were told to stockholders and creditors in various circular letters during 1920 and 1921 as attempts were being made to help finance the company. In writing this article the editor has referred to figures and statements in letters he received as a stockholder and creditor of the company.

The past week, committees have been in operation, soliciting subscriptions from the local stock holders, the business men and citizens generally, for operating expenses of the factory this year. Many have not understood the reasons behind this solicitation. Roughly, they are these:

It will require approximately $100,000 to operate the plant this year. This sum includes putting the plant in shape, overhauling the equipment, establishing the agricultural department, sending out fieldmen to solicit acreage, purchasing material and supplies, meeting the payroll, and the many incidentals relative to operation. About 25 per cent of stock is owned in Belmond; about 50 per cent in Michigan; and the remaining 25 per cent in other states.

Many of the stockholders have signified willingness to subscribe 15 per cent of their holdings toward a fund for operating the plant this year, providing that Belmond people will show their willingness to co-operate, by putting up approximately $30,000. The committees are soliciting this sum.

Dyer, head of the Dyer Construction company, who hold a mortgage for about $500,000, has agreed not to push his claims; has agreed to put the plant in shape at cost, and agreed to put up ten thousand dollars cash toward operating.

The acreage proposition is favorable. Farmers in this community, and elswhere in the company's acreage territory, will be solicited for acreage at once——in fact, the soliciting has started. If they do ther part, it means one of the greatest factors toward operation solved.

Can the company operate successfully this year? Every indiction is that it can. Sugar is at a low ebb; it can hardly go lower; every trend must almost be upward in price. Labor is 100 per cent cheaper than in 1920 the operating year of the factory; materials, with practically the single exception of coal, are lower. All the big important obligations of the company have been settled by 5 year bonds maturing in 1926 and not drawing interest until 1923. Wages are lower, materials are lower, prices are lower; sugar will undoubtedly go up, with acreage favorable, and even a normal year, the factory will turn out a half million dollars' worth of product. Therefor, with lower operating costs there should be a nice profit on the campaign. In 1920, 75,000 bags of sugar were made.

Loss of $300,000 in the campaign was due to economic conditions—just as other factories in in the country ran at loss. Sugar dropped from 20 to 25 cents a pound wholesale to 8 and 9 cents during the operating season. Had wages and materials dropped also, the loss would have been negligible, or even none at all, but these items stayed up. This year there are several plants in the country which will not run at all because of losses sustained. Had the Iowa Valley Sugar Co., been capitalized in the the first place at what it should have been, as has since been shown, there would have been a reserve in the treasury to carry this loss; but as it was, the loss had to be taken in other ways—ultimately thru 5-year bonds.

Now there is a chance, and an excellent chance, to put the sugar company back on a paying, going basis. The one remaining big problem is the operating money It is up to Belmond—up to you and us all—as to whether, by doing our part NOW, we save the $1,500,000 invested in the plant, or lie down on the job and lose it. There is no alternative; it is now or never. If the factory is not operated this year, it never will be; it will be taken by the mortgage, torn down and moved away, and Belmond will have a million dollar smokestack as a momento of the past. If it is operated, it will make money, according to all indications; and, once in paying operation, it will continue, turning into Belmond and the surrounding territory every year a quarter to half million dollars, to go to workmen in this community, to farmers in this vicinity. Every business man knows what this means; knows what sugar money meant in 1920, and the lack of it in 1921.

Will we come across? It is not a donation; it is a loan, for one year at 8 per cent interest, secured by a lien on the product a first mortgage on 220 acres of good Iowa soil, the railroad siding, beet dumps, dwellings, of the company. If the plant operates at a loss, there is no chance that this subscription money will be lost, because of security put up. The money goes to three local men: Herman Schultz, C. O. Fitts and R. H. Klemme, who hold it in trust until operation is assured, when it is turned over to an operating committee of three, appointed by the board of directors, and every dollar accounted for. If operation is not assured, every dollar goes back to those who subscribed it.

The final reckoning is before us; we make or break this time; and it is absolutely up to us. Are we game? Will we take one throw, one more chance, or are we yellow? We cannot lose what we put in; we stand every chance to save what we have already invested; we can make Belmond or break it. A dollar subscribed now will probably save the ten invested. As this is written, $20,000 of the $30,000 has been guaranteed. Some are holding back; "let George do it." We must all come in; we all gain, we should all help. What are YOU going to do?

FARMER DIES FROM SELF-INFLICTED WOUNDS

Gunder Gunderson, a farmer residing on the old Cuppett farm west of town, committed suicide, or attempted to, Tuesday morning, by shooting himself.

The deed was committed about 11 o'clock Tuesday forenoon, and a .22 calibre rifle was used. Gunderson shot hiself in the breast, the bullet going thru one lung and passing just below the heart. He died at 1:30 yesterday morning from the wounds, death being pronounced due to internal hemmorhage.

Gunderson had been farming but had quit and held a closing out sale the 23rd. His wife was suing him for a divorce and various other troubles had evidently preyed on his mind until he decided to get out of it all. At this writing no funeral arrangements have been announced.

WILLIAM SELMER JOHNSON

William Selmer Johnson was born November 23rd 1895 in Clermont, Iowa, he being a second child and eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam L. Johnson. His childhood was spent on a farm operated by his father in Northern Minnesota, but in the year 1909, he came with his parents to make his home in Belmond, Iowa. He entered the Belmond High school in September 1910 and graduated therefrom in May 1914. While in High School his excellent work gave promise of a brilliant career which was later his at the University.

In the fall of 1915, William entered the College of Liberal Arts at the State University of Iowa. One year later, however, his health broke and he was found to be suffering from an attack of tuberculosis. The year following he underwent treatment in the State Sanitarium at Oakdale from which he was discharged in restored health in the summer of 1917. William immediately re-entered the University from which he graduated, with the degree Bachelor of Arts, on August 30th, 1920. The honors earned during his University work were many. Outstanding among them are his elections of Phi Beta Kappa the higest honorary reward given for scholarship in collegiate work, and the notation on his diploma "with high distinction," which is an honor granted to but few.

William was employed as an assistant in the department of Political Science during his years as a student at the University. Following his graduation he commenced work in Minneapolis as a "Social Welfare Worker" for the "Associated Charities."

In the first week of November 1920 symptoms of the dreadful disease, tuberculosis, again appeared. He immediately re-entered Oakdale Sanitarium and for two months following improved somewhat in health. During the latter part of January, however, he again began to fail. William was brought home in the latter part of September last, where he died on February 23rd 1922, being 26 years and 3 months of age.

William early in childhood commenced attending the Luthern church. He was confirmed by Rev. H. C. Holm October 30, 1910 and maintained his connection with that church until his death. William was a good son and brother and a faithful friend. He went to his death fearlessly, as one may do who has left nothing but good behind him.

He leaves behind him his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Sam L. Johnson, four sisters, Mrs. Wm. Lester of Goodell, Helen of Cedar Falls, Sofie and Magdalene of Belmond, four brothers, Theodore, Paul, Leonard and Henry all of Belmond, also his fiancee, Miss Nellie Gray of Des Moines.

Funeral services were held in the Trinity Lutheran church, February 26, 1922, services being conducted by Rev. J. M. Jensen. The remains were laid to rest in Franklin Cemetery.

Out of town relatives and friends present at the funeral were: Mr. Lars Paulson of Clermont, Iowa; Miss Nellie Gray of Des Moines, Iowa Lewis Kalvig and family, Elmer Kalvig and family and Tom Kalvig, all of Kanawha. Albert D. Cannon, J. D. Wells and Jasper Johnson of Iowa City; Mr. and Mrs. Littlefield and Miss Jean Lester of Clarion Iowa.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors for the help and kindness they have shown us during the illness and death of our son and brother, and also for the beautiful floral offerings.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam L. Johnson and family.
Mrs. W. D. Lester.

School Activities Are Many During The Spring Season

Declamatory Contest Held At Eagle Grove And Basket Ball Takes Attention.

ONE MORE BALL GAME

The senior class are working hard on the Annual. Bids for printing were received last Thursday. The bids were sealed and the agreement was to let the contract to the lowest bidder. The Herald Press got the contract. The contract has also been let for the engraving.

If the boys have not seen you about your advertisment yet, they will do so soon. Everyone they have seen so far has been willing to take out an advertisement. BE READY WITH YOURS.

Next week, March 8th, there will be a recital in the High School Auditorium. Miss Shattuck, Head of the Public Speaking Department of the Iowa State College at Ames, will give a recital, consisting of a mixed program of readings. Miss Shattuck is an excellent reader and everyone should plan to hear her.

Alfred Wilkinson, Carroll Tyrrell and Wilma Thompson represented Belmond in the County Declamatory at Eagle Grove Friday. Eagle Grove won the cup. The decisions of the judges were very different, no school getting two firsts and no person, except in the humorous class getting 2 firsts. We are ranked 2nd in oratorical and third in dramatic.

Last Saturday night Belmond's Basket Ball team was defeated by the Nashua boys in an interesting game on our home floor. Altho our team was crippled by the loss of Teddy Johnson and of Edwin Christie, who did not report for practice until Friday before the game, because of sickness,, we were able to surprise the crowd as well as the Nashua boys, by finishing the first half 12 to 10 in Belmond's favor.

During the last half, Nashua showed more endurance than our boys, and from this angle they were able to win by a safe margin. Strikes ability to follow the ball for Nashua made him their outstanding player. Tyrrell played the best game for our home team. However, every player on the team is deserving of praise for the fighting spirit they showed while on the floor.

Next Friday and Saturday our boys go to Cedar Falls to play in the tournament held at the State Teachers College. The team is deserving of a trip after the hard work they have put in practicing and playing our scheduled games. In order to help cover expense of this trip, Wednesday will be TAG DAY IN BELMOND. Every person who is a backer of our team will have a chance to show themselves to be one by wearing a BOOSTER TAG.

These tags will be distributed by B. H. S. Students from early morning Wednesday until night. Show the boys that you want them to make a good showing for Belmond by wearing a booster tag.

Buy as many tags as you wish, paying for each tag any amount you choose up to 50 cents each.

The Belmond girls met their second defeat this year last Friday from the Garner girls. The game was the best played here this year because there was something happening every minute of the time. Garner has an excellent, fast team and they play good ball. They are also good sports, and while we wish the score could have been in our favor we are not ashamed to meet defeat by such a team.

It has been impossible to get the three teams within possible radius to play here in a girl's tournament. Clarion and Goldfield have disbanded. Eagle Grove and Corwith have no girl's team and Garner and Britt play March 3rd at Britt. It has been decided since we cannot have a tournament here, that the girls will be allowed to go to the Iowa Falls State Tournament next Friday afternoon, their grades being satisfactory. The following girls are eligible to date: Elaine Rierson, Grace Leavy. Helen Haven, Mildred Hauge, Kathryn Thiltgen, Minnie Madison and Genevieve Starnes.

Only a few more community nights left this year. Don't miss them, but come out and enjoy the sport with the rest of the crowd. Plan now to attend these Thursday night meetings.

The last Basket Ball game of the season will be Friday night, March 10th, at which time Belmond will meet Hampton on the local floor. Both boys and girls will play. Finish the season right by being present and boosting for B. H. S.

Division two of the literary society will give a program at 2:30 Friday afternoon.

WIRELESS PHONE PLANT COMING TO CLARION

News: The Northern Iowa Gas & Electric Co. is going to install a wireless telephone equipment at its office in Clarion within a short time, and it will be exhibited as a part of the company's appliances, and at the same time Clarion folks will have the opportunity of listening in on the various entertainments which are being wafted on wireless wings the country over. We will yet be able to hear musical numbers and speeches made as far away as New York right here in Clarion. There are several people in town who will investigate the wireless phone equipment with a view to buying. Dozens of the boys down town are saving up money to buy a wireless outfit. Hurry up, Jones, and invite us all to hear the world's newest wonder. We're sure excited about it .

PARK AT WALL LAKE

Monitor: The prospects that Wall Lake will be taken over by the state this year loom brighter, says the Iowa Falls Sentinel.

The executive council has ordered the state highway commission to survey the proposed park at Wall Lake. It is believed that after the survey condemnation proceedings will be begun, and if the ground that is under consideration is condemned it will be purchased from the two farmers who own it and will become a state property.

This is good news to the hunters, fishermen and people in general in this locality. About forty sportsmen in Iowa Falls and vicinity have contributed various sums of money to assist in purchasing the land along the south shore of the lake, and if the land is condemned the money will be applied towards its purchase.

Sportsmen in this section of the state have been generally hampered by the fact that the land, which has been leased by some Waterloo parties , is not available to the general public, but is closed throughout the year. There has been talk of draining the lake and making it into farm land, but this proposition has been bitterly fought by hunters and fishermen who have found much recreation at that place. It is hoped that some day the lake may be dredged of weeds and made a good resort for hunting, boating and fishing, as well as for picnics, etc.

INJURIES PROVE FATAL.

Hampton Recorder: L. E. Van Ahm, gravel hauler for the Miller Construction Company of Sioux City, whose truck was hit and demolished at the Great Western railroad crossing, a mile west of town, by an east bound train on Friday morning, Feb. 10th, died last Friday afternoon, Feb 17th, from injuries received from the accident.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

HOW MUCH DO YOU SAVE?

Do the mail order houses sell at such a great saving? Do they undersell the Belmond merchants by as wide a margin as some people would have us believe? We doubt it, and, with the co-operation of the local merchants, we are going to endeavor to prove it.

It is granted that prices in the catalogues are less than asked in Belmond. But add to the mail order prices, the freight, postage and money order, and then compare your prices. Let the goods equal in quality that sold in Belmond; make the canned goods equal in size, the bulk goods equal in weight. An ounce of sugar from a half-gallon can of fruit is an insignificant thing—multiply that ounce by ten thousand cans and it is a big something. One half of a peach left out of a can is not missed; in ten thousand cans it is 5,000 peaches or a thousand more cans which again, is something. When you sell in tens of thousands of cans, or jars, or pails, or pounds, what is minute in one instance bulks large in the aggregate.

A local merchant recently carried an ad in the Independent which was taken bodily from the February grocery cataglogue of a mail order firm. We copied the type word for word; the merchant duplicated the mail order house's offer, AND DID NOT ADD THE FREIGHT. He should have added the freight. When you send for goods you pay the charges; it becomes part of the price you pay; the Belmond merchant made a BETTER OFFER than the mail order house— and he SOLD THE GOODS.

The Independent believes that every merchant in the town of Belmond will meet the mail order houses on price, considering quality. Will the consumers buy locally if they can get the same price? The Independent believes they will. The consumer must remember that, in buying locally, he does not have to wait a week for his order; he takes it home with him the same day. You cannot ask the local merchants to give you mail order prices, and then give you credit for thirty to ninety days, or longer; if you pay cash at the mail order house, you should be willing to pay cash in Belmond if you are given the same prices, the same quality, plus the freight.

The writer has heard many, many times, the story of "outrageous prices in Belmond." "We can send and get it cheaper." Perhaps you can—and perhaps you are mistaken. The Independent is going to find out, one way or the other, and asks the co-operation of the Belmond merchants and the Belmond consumers. we are going to call a "Mail Order On March 9th, we will issue what Number." Every merchant in Belmond will be solicited for an advertisement in which he will quote mail order prices on the articles he mentions, plus the freight, the goods advertised to be sold for cash only. Prices on these articles are to be taken from the February and March catalogues of a mail order house. The consumer is asked, when he receives his paper, to check the Belmond merchant's prices with that of the mail order catalogue; and unless he or she is the unusual exception, such a catalogue will be in their possession. If the prices are not equal, quality for quality, we ask the consumer to tell us; if they are, we want to know too.

The Independent believes that, with equal prices, plus the freight, given in Belmond, the goods will be sold here. Furthermore, it will either prove or disprove the oft-repeated cry of "too high." The writer does not think that any Belmond business firm will be unwilling to meet the mail order competition, or that any Belmond consumer will wait a week for what he needs when he can get what he wants when he wants it at the same price. We are not bringing any "Shears & Sawbuck pay no taxes, here, nor support our churches, or boost this community" arguments into it; this is solely a competitive, price-equaling, business-like affair, wherein Belmond business competes with the mail order house on equal-quality goods.

Remember, the Belmond merchants will meet the price of the mail order house, PLUS FREIGHT, equal quality, and sell for CASH. In other words, they will offer you, the consuor, exactly what the mail order house does; you cannot ask them to do more. Watch for the "Mail Order Number," and settle, to your own satisfaction, whether you can afford to trade at home. We are betting that you can.

To the Men of America.

You talk of your breed of cattle,
And plan for a higher strain;
You double the food of the pasture;
You heap up the measure of grain.
You draw on the wits of the nation,
To better the barn and the pen;
But what are you doing, my brothers,
To better the breed of men?

You boast of your Morgan and Herefords,
Of the worth of the calf or a colt,
And scoff at the scrub and the mongrel
As worthy a fool or a dolt;
You mention the points of your roadster,
With many a "wherefore" and "when,"
But, ah, are you conning, my brothers
The worth of the children of men?

And what of your boy? Have you measured
His needs for a growing year?
Does your mark as his sire, in his features,
Mean less than your brand on a steer?
Thoroughbred—that is your watchword,
For stable and pasture and pen;
But what is your word for the homestead?
Answer, you breeders of men.

Farmer's Institute March 4

A one day farmers' institute under the auspices of the Chicago Great Western Railway Co., will be held in Clarion at the court house, Saturday, March 4th. Speakers who are authorities on the various agricultural subjects have been secured from different agricultural colleges.

The morning session will begin promptly at ten o'clock and run until noon and the afternoon program will begin at exactly 1:30 and close promptly at 4 o'clock so as to give farmers plenty of time to get home for their chores.

This is free to all farmers of Wright county. Everybody is welcome. There will be no collection.

Shipping Association Meetings

Arrangements have been completed for holding livestock shipping association meetings at four shipping points in Wright county.

Interest in the livestock shipping association work in Wright county has grown until there has developed a real need for meetings for the purpose of getting the information to the interested shippers.

Knute Espe, executive secretary, of the Iowa Cooperative Livestock Shipper's association, will be the principal speaker at these meetings. Mr. Espe will explain in detail all phases of the livestock shipping and will be prepared to answer all questions along this line.

The four meetings will be held as follows: Clarion, Wednesday March 8, at 1:30 p. m.; Goldfield, Thursday March 9, at 1:30 p. m.; Eagle Grove, Friday, March 10, at 1:30 p. m.; Galt, Saturday, March 11, at 1:30 p. m.

Wool Account Sales Received

Consignors of 1921 wool will be interested to know that account wool sales have been received and are now being distributed. Wright County Wool Growers association made up about a car load last year and we are glad to have the returns showing up at this time. Those who have not received returns should call or write R. P. Smith, Clarion, secretary of our local county association.

Farm Machinery "Fix-Up" Week

The week of March 13 to 18 has been set aside throughout the state of Iowa as the time when all farmers will be urged to make an effort to make arrangements for the early repair of their machinery.

It is thought that by giving this matter early attention the farmers will make a great saving in labor and above all he will be able to get better service from repair shops, blacksmiths and implement dealers, who are also being urged to place early orders for farm machinery repairs.

Social at Cundall Home

A most enjoyable day was spent at the Gail Cundall home near Galt by members of the Blaine Township Farm Bureau on Tuesday, February 23rd, when about forty farmers of that community gathered at this beautiful home for their regular monthly meeting.

It is thought that the attendance was cut down considerably by the severe weather, but those who braved the wintry February day were repaid by enjoying a most interesting program arranged by people of the home community. A program consisting of several readings, a few musical numbers, and a splendid address by Rev. W. N. Bump was given at this social. Everyone seemed to enter into the merriment of the occasion and their troubles wre forgotten for a few hours at least.

The most interesting part of the program was the very interesting address given by Rev. Bump of the Galt church. Rev. Bump is vitally interested in the activities of the farm bureau. He reminded the people of his community of two great principles: first, public sentiment is the guiding factor in the county, state and nation; and second, organization is the one way by which public sentiment can be created. Rev. Bump seems to take unusual interest in the farm bureau movement and has been called upon to talk to groups of our members in different sections of the county.

That Orchard of Yours

Now is the time to be thinking about that orchard and make plans for the spring and summer spraying. We all know that pruning and spraying are very necessary if the orchard is to be saved and made profitable. Statistics show that about two-thirds of the plum trees and one-half of the apple trees could have been saved by proper pruning and spraying.

During th latter part of February and the fore part of March is the best time to do your pruning to get the best results. Care should be taken not to prune your trees too heavily the first year. Limbs should be cut off close to the trunk and cut with a smooth slanting wound so that it will not collect moisture and fungus growths and begin to rot. It is best to cut from the lower side first and this well prevent the limb tearing off a strip of bark when falling.

Leone Pepper was a visitor at Rowan High School Tuesday February 23rd.

Grace Hubbell was a High school visitor Friday.

The Rowan Girls Basket Ball Team will enter the Tournament at Belmond the latter part of this week. Bring the "Cup" back with you girls. Remember the Rowan Champion team five years ago. Be true to them.

The trainer, Miss Hazel Neuenschwander, who has been training the Rowan contestants for the past three weeks left for Zearing Sunday morning.

The Declamatory contest was a great success in spite of the inclemency of the weather. It is said that this is one of the best contests ever staged in Rowan. The winners in first, second and third places in each class are as follows: Oratorical, James Kercheval, Ralph Mollering, Fred Moellering; Dramatic, Laura McCallum, Mable Aldinger, Bernice Hansen; Humorous Frances Farran, Vey Ketchum, Harold Moellering. Each selection was so well rendered that it made work difficult for the judges.

James Kercheval, Laura McCallum, and Frances Farran having received first places in the different classes were sent as speakers to the county declamatory contest at Eagle Grove last Friday afternoon and evening. They made a good showing here but were not able to bring home the silver loving cup which went to the winners.

The school has made a splendid showing in community work at the beginning of the year it was the plan of the faculty to give a community program once a month which has been very creditably done. The first number of this series was a program and luncheon given by the teachers to get acquainted with the patrons. The second number was the famous steriopticon lecture on Oberammagau by Dr. Critchley. The third was the "Tom Thumb" wedding. The fourth was a basket social and program. The fifth was the declamatory contest. The sixth will be a steriopticon lecture on the Philippines by a real Philipino, Vernancio Trinidad who has won several prizes in this country for his oratory. The 7th will be the senior class play. The 8th the commencement excercises will be held the latter part of May. Besides these numbers there have been games of basket ball played on the home floor with nearly all of the neighboring towns and a return game on their floors. It has taken some money and quite a little of it too to finance this whole affair. The school has met all of its bills and has money in the treasury in spite of the hard times, which is a great more than most of the schools have done.

The pupils and teachers are working strenuously to bring the school to a high standard. The six weeks test will be held this week.

Synopsis—Episode Five
"ONE AGAINST MANY"

After a furious fight in the gymnasium, Hutch and Nancy make a getaway in a motorboat. They are pursued by Marlow and the others to an abandoned lighthouse, where they are locked in by Marlow, who has gained on them. But Hutch turns the tables by climbing down a rope and locking them in.

At home again, Nancy discovers her scarf again missing and suspects Ann. At Ann's home she learns that she and her grandfather have gone to the reservoir, and they follow. Old Mr. Haviland, in eagerness to find the hidden formula, ignores danger and crosses the reservoir, into which logs are being rolled. Ann begs Hutch to rescue him. Hutch takes a short cut by crossing the reservoir on the floating logs therein. He stumbles and falls many times, but he cannot reach the building from which the logs are sent down the sluiceway before several crash into the frail row boat, injuring Mr. Haviland. To quickly reach him, Hutch mounts a log and rides with it down the sluiceway. He manages to get Ann's grandfather to shore, but death overtakes him before divulging the hiding place of the seaweed formula.

BOOST YOUR TOWN

There are fancier towns than our little town;
There are towns that are bigger than this,
And the people who live in a little old town
Don't know the excitment they miss;
There are things that you see in the wealthier town
That you can't in a town that's small,
And yet, up and down, there is no other town
Than your own little town after all.
It may be true that the streets ain't long,
Nor wide and maybe not straight
But the neighbors you know in your own little town,
All welcome a fellow—it's great.
In the glittering streets of a glittering town,
With its palace and pavement and thrall;
In the midst of a throng you will frequently long
For your own little town after all.
If you live and you work in your own
little town;
In spite of the fact that it's small,
You'll find it a fact that your own
little town
Is the best little town after all.

HAVE YOU MET HIM?

The word "gentleman" is defined this way: A man who is clean both inside and outside; who neither looks up to the rich nor down on the poor; who can lose without squealing and win without bragging; who is considerate of women, children and old people; who is too brave to lie, too generous to cheat, and who takes his share of the world and lets the other people have theirs.

WATERMULLER—GERDES

On Wednesday afternoon, February 22, 1922 occured the marriage of Miss Nettie Gerdes to George Watermuller of Kanawha, Ia. The Rev. H. Pannkuk, pastor of the Meservey Reformed church performed the ceremony that made this happy couple husband and wife.

Mr. Nels Watermuller, brother of the groom, acted as best man and Miss Rika Gerdes, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gerdes, of Meservey, one of our most respected families. She has grown up in this vicinity, esteemed and respected by young and old alike. She has always been a star in the home circle and now she has gone to reign in her own home of which she is highly capable. She is a faithful member of the Reformed church, as a Sunday school teacher and as a member of the Ladies Aid, she was active, punctual, conscientions and faithful in the discharge of her duties.

The groom is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Watermuller. He is a man of good parts, honest, industrious and successful in his chosen calling. Mr. Watermuller is a member of the Reformed church of Kanawha and interested in the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God.

After February 27 the young people will go to housekeeping on the groom's farm three miles west of Goodell.

It is a pleasure to chronicle the marriage of such young people who are true to God and man, for such make their influence tell on the lives of others. It is such institutions as the family altar and the observence of the grace at our daily bounty that signalize our adherence to the traditional principles of our Christian land and our sincere desire for a continuance of the divine favor.

Hearty congratulations and God speed!

If you want to make a success of your own business don't worry over that of the other fellow.

CURRENT EVENTS

Washington makes brilliant campaign in New Jersey. Wins battles of Trenton and Princeton.

On Christmas Eve, Washington, with 2400 picked men, recrossed the Deleware river amid floating ice and defeated the Hessian hordes under Rahl at Trenton. The Hessians were celebrating Christmas and were taken by surprise. General Rahl was killed and 1000 of his men were taken prisoners. Washington lost only a few men. This move came as a surprise to everyone. Nearly everyone thought that Washington was thru.

Less than a fortnight after this victory the American forces under Washington were hard pressed by the British under Cornwallis. Washington was forced to retreat and was brought to bay near the Deleware river. Cornwallis delayed the attack until morning and during the night Washingto stole away leavig his campfires burning and marched around Cornwallis' main army and attacked the rear guard uder Manhood at Princeton. It was a splendid victory for the Americans.

As a result of this campaign Cornwallis withdrew back to New York.

Thousands of American soldiers have re-enlisted in the American ranks. The hopes of the American people have risen very high again.

The Congress has appointed Geo. Washington supreme distator for a period of six months.

Robert Morris, of Philadelphia, has been collecting money from citizens for payment of Washington's soldiers and to buy supplies for them. You can do well by supporting him.

The patriotic, self-sacrificing women of Batimore, Charleston, Boston and other cities have knitted several thousand pairs of socks during the past year. They intend to exceed their record this year. The soldiers surely have appreciated the services of the American women.

Benjamin Franklin has been appointed ambassador to France for the purpose of getting aid for the Americans. It has not been learned whether he had any success yet or not. Here's hoping he succeeds.

The Indians of Cherry Valley have been acting suspiciously of late. They are suspected of being employed by British and Tory agents to wage war against the Americans. The Congress would do well to send more troups to defend the settlers.

Our correspondent recently returned from Virginia where he has been studying the people and conditions. He reports that the people are cheerful although the war presses heavily upon them. They are without flour and other near necessities of life. Nearly all the men have enlisted in the army.

While making some calls east of town last Wednesday evening, Dr. Agler had an experience which he does not care to repeat at the cross roads east of the Hartfelder farm. The water was away over the road, and the doctor's enclosed car slid off the grade into the ditch. He was forced to wade out and with drenched clothing walk to town for aid. Dr. Agler's many friends are glad he escaped so luckily, as aside from a slight indisposition for several days he suffered no ill effects from his "early spring bath." Loafing money is worse than a loafing man. The man injures himself only, while idle money withdrawn from industry and commerce means idle factories and stagnant business.

Notice to Patrons of Rural Mail Routes

By directions of the Post Office Department, postmasters throughout the country have recently made an inspection of the rural routes from their offices. The purpose was that they might ascertain by personal observation and make report whether the roads used were in good condition for travel, the routes well arranged, boxes properly erected, so as to be easily reached by the carriers without difficulty and without obstructing travel, the carriers serving their routes as officially precribed, the schedule observed, and whether the families served were satisfied with the service rendered, or there were improvements which could be suggested in the interest of the patrons or the Department.

It became necessary, in connection with the inspections, to request many patrons to take action to the end that their boxes might conform with the regulations as to kind, condition, location, or heighth, and in having the name of the owner plainly printed on them. Also, to bring to the attention of road overseers or other responsible persons the need for improvement in roads or repair or construction of culverts or bridges.

It is the desire of the Department, and its purpose, to provide adequate and convenient service, so far as may be possible, to all persons residing in rural communities, but this end can not be attained without the full cooperation of the patrons in the efforts of postmasters and carriers to serve them promptly, regularly and satisfactorily.

Whatever facilitates the work of the carrier is of direct benefit to the patrons, for the greater ease and speed with which he may cover his route the earlier and better the service afforded.

So, patrons for rural delivery can greatly help themselves by helping their carrier, seeing to it that roads are kept in good condition and promptly opened after storms, by keeping the approaches to their boxes clear, and by promptly and willingly correcting any irregularities affecting their boxes when asked to do so.

Another great assistance that patrons can render carriers is by keeping themselves supplied with and using stamps instead of placing unstamped mail, with money for the purchase of the required postage, in the boxes. This delays the carrier and sometimes imposes a great hardship on him, especially in cold and stormy weather. If preferred, stampted envelopes, either printed or plain, may be obtained from the carrier, are of good quality, and cost but little more than the value of the stamps upon them, and are redeemable at the value of the stamps if damaged, but returned in a practically whole condition. If necessary to place money in a box, it should be put in a coin-holding receptacle or be properly wrapped so as to be easily picked up by the carrier.

Money for the purchase of money orders should not be left in the boxes, but should be handed to the carrier

School Notes

Miss Eva Whetstone braved the elements last Tuesday afternoon by going to Rowan where she acted as one of the judges in a declamatory contest.

The school program given by the grades last Friday night, drew a packed house. Many were unable to find standing room. The pupils carried out their parts in a creditable manner. The teachers who had charge of the program were the Misses Johnson, Bernard, Eickmeyer, Cornwell and Berninghausen.

The proceeds go to the library fund.

Master Richard Arends who has been out of school for some time on account of a broken leg, has returned to his accustomed place.

Thursday and Friday of last week were given over to our regular six-weeks examinations. The results will be given out Wednesday of this week.

The sixth grade and the fifth grade pupils of Miss Cornwell's room gave a luncheon last Friday noon in honor of Harry and Marie Lauen who move away this week. They will enter school at Meservey. We are sorry to lose them. They are likable young people.

Next Monday afternoon, there will be a cheese making demonstration in the domestic sience rooms. The demonstration will be given by a lady from Ames. The time is set for one o'clock. For further information consult Mrs. Lloyd Green, township chairman.

The monthly weighing and measuring of children will take place this week. We hope the showing will be as satisfactory this month as last month. If you don't know what to feed an underweight child, give him plenty of milk. Milk contains all the necessary elements. We observe that several children bring milk with their school lunches—a pretty sensible idea, too.

The movie program for Tuesday March 7 will be the "Electric Heart" on principles of battery construction. "Four Runners of Joy" showing how auto wheels are made. ':Jerry's Double Cross," a comedy.

The Misses Alma and Ruth Johnson spent the week end at the parental home in Latimer, returning Monday morning on the Misery & Short Lived limited.

KLEMME HET UP OVER ELECTRIC RATES

Times: Feeling is running high at Garner concerning the Iowa Falls Electric Company's present rates there and the question of whether or not Garner will grant them a new franchise when their present franchise expires next month.

Garner, along with many other towns, has a high rate and they want the Iowa Falls Company to get off their "high horse" and come to as low rates as their lowest rated town which they serve.

There is also talk of building a big plant at Garner, which is receiving strong support here in Klemme.

The Klemme Council met with the Garner Council Monday and were in favor of helping Garner build a plant if the Iowa Falls Company did not come down on the rates here to compare favorably with the lowest rates the Company are giving other towns. The Garner Council are sitting tight with the Klemme Council in their demand.

All that Klemme is asking for is as low a rate as the Iowa Falls Company are giving their best customers, which they serve. Garner probably wants the same, and if the Company will not grant this, then the two towns here will build their own plant and they should be able to operate as cheaply as any other plant of a similar nature.

We have a higher rate here than at Garner, although our rate is 16½ cents per KWH, we understand there is no reduction for the amount used, while at Garner they have a sliding rate begining at 18 cents for the first 10 KWH, from 10 to 20 at 16 cents, for the entire consumption, 25 to 35 at 15 cents for the entire consumption, from 60 KWH up at 10 cents for the entire consumption. It will be seen that the large user at Garner gets very cheap rate while the small user pays big for what he gets. And here at Klemme all pay the same, big or little.

Perhaps the Iowa Falls Company will explain a few things, one especially we would like to know and that is: "Why don't Klemme have as low a lighting and power rate as the lowest rated town served by the Iowa Falls Company?" Why don't they treat all towns alike?"

The Iowa Falls Company have a franchise here which will be effective for a number of years yet, but that does not prevent the Council from granting another franchise to the Garner-Klemme plant should they decide to build. Garner and Klemme are asking a square deal, no lower rate than any other town, but they want just as low rate and they will be satisfied.

100,000 BUSHELS OF CORN FOR THE NEAR EAST RELIEF

Iowa has shipped more than 100,000 bushels of corn and corn products to the relief of famine-stricken Armenia and the Near East since the railroads first provided free transportation for this state, according to the report given out by C. A. Montanus, state director of the relief committee.

Sioux County was the banner community of the state, shipping 12,874 bushels from four townships in the neighborhood of Sioux Center.

Free transportation for Iowa's gift corn expires February 28th and an intensive effort is being made this week to garner in corn in all counties, in order that the free haulage may be obtained.

Word was received here today announcing a cut of 25 per cent in the amount of relief which can be given to Armenian orphans during the balance of the winter, partially because some of the food donated has had to be sent to help starving refugees in southern Russia, under the Near East Relief, and partly because there has not been a sufficient response from people here to carry the burden assumed by relief workers. This means that some of the children now being cared for may have to be turned out to face starvation, officials say.

More than 50,000 Russian refugees are now being cared for by the Near East Relief at its base in Tiflis, cables received here state. Only $1.00 per month each is allowed for feeding these sufferers, in order that the help may be extended to as many as possible.

Generally speaking, law suits are the most expensive kind of suits to have.

MOTHER HOOTCH VERSE

Because she got frisky on bootlegger's whiskey
The cow jumped over the moon;
"Wood alcohol" is the doctor's report
And the funeral's Saturday noon.

Sing a song of licker,
Prices very high,
Four-and-twenty jailbirds
Selling rotten rye!
When the rye was opened,
When the hootch was tried
Four-and-twenty customers
Took a drink and died.

Little Jack Horner sat in the corner
Drinking some bootleg rye;
It made him feel glum,
When it got to his tum
And he took 15 minutes to die!

Jack and Jill they built a still—
In mystery 'twas shrouded—
Synthetic gin they made therein;
Gosh, but the morgue is crowded!

There was a crooked man
And he had a crooked smile
And he made a crooked living
In a very crooked style,
For he sold a brand of hootch
Of which he was maker—
And then went fifty-fifty
With the village undertaker.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is the skipper, Neils Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII. — Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.—Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

CHAPTER X.—Our three adventurers form a "syndicate,' with the gunboat, which they have renamed the Maggie II, as their base of operations. They sail for the South Sea islands, where they plan to obtain valuable black coral.

CHAPTER XI.—Going ashore with supposedly friendly natives, Gibney and Scraggs are taken prisoners, to be held for a cannibal feast.

CHAPTER XII. — McGuffey, believing his friends to have been killed, shells the island. Gibney and Scraggs escape, and reach the ship with two prisoners, the king of the island and his "prime minister." Utilizing the blacks as divers, the "syndicate" collects a valuable cargo of black coral and sails for home. With the double idea of punishing the cannibals for their treachery and having some fun with Scraggs, who is not fond of a fight, Gibney and McGuffey arrange a fistic combat with the prisoners, Gibney to fight one and Scraggs the other. The five land on a desert island, and while they are engaged in the fistic fun the steamer sails, leaving the five marooned.

CHAPTER XIII.—When the ship arrives in Honolulu, Neils Halvorsen, former member of the Maggie's crew, suspects foul play and, seizing the vessel while the white crew is ashore, obtains a crew of natives and sets out to find the owners, guided only by information he obtains from the ship's log. He reaches the island just in time to save the lives of his old friends.

One might go on at great length and describe the triumphal entry of Commodore Gibney and Captain Scraggs into the capitol of Kandavu; of how the king, an undersized, shriveled old savage, stuck his bushy head out the window of his bungalow when he saw the procession coming; of how a minute later he advanced into the space in the center of his wari, where in the olden days the populace was wont to gather for its cannibal orgies; how he greeted his distinguished visitors with the most prodigious rubbing of noses seen in those parts for many a day; of the feast that followed; of the fowls and pigs that garnished the festive board, not omitting the keg of Three Star thoughtfully provided by Mr. Gibney.

Tabu-Tabu acted as interpreter and everything went swimmingly until Tabu-Tabu, his hospitality doubtless strengthened by frequent libations of the Elixir of Life, begged Mr. Gibney to invite the remainder of his crew ashore for the feast. Mr. Gibney, himself rather illuminated by this time, thought it might not be a bad idea.

"It's a rotten shame, Scraggsy," he said, "to think of that fool McGuffey not bein' here to enjoy himself. I'm goin' to send a note out by one of Tabu-Tabu's boys, askin' him once more to come ashore, or to let the first mate and one or two of the seamen come if Mac still refuses to be civil."

"Good idea, Gib," said Captain Scraggs, his mouth full of roast chicken and yams. So Mr. Gibney tore a leaf out of his pocket memorandum book, scrawled a note to McGuffey, and handed it to Tabu-Tabu, who at once dispatched a messenger with it to the Maggie II.

Within half an hour the messenger returned. He was wildly excited and poured a torrent of native gibberish into the attentive ears of Tabu-Tabu and the king. He pointed several times to the point of his jaw, rubbed the small of his back, and once he touched his nose; whereupon Mr. Gibney was aware that the said organ had a slight list to port, and he so informed Captain Scraggs. Neither of the gentlemen had the slightest trouble in arriving at the correct solution of the mystery. The royal messenger had been incontinently kicked overboard by B. McGuffey, Esquire.

Tabu-Tabu's wild eyes glittered and grew wilder and wilder as the messenger reported the indignity thus heaped upon him. The king scowled at Captain Scraggs, and Mr. Gibney was suddenly aware that goose-flesh was breaking out on the backs of his sturdy legs. He had a haunting sensation that not only had he crawled into a hole, but he had pulled the entire aperture in after him. For the first time he began to fear that he had been too precipitate, and with the thought it occurred to the gallant commodore that he would be much safer back on the decks of the Maggie II. Always crafty and imaginative, however, Mr. Gibney came quickly to the front with an excuse for getting back to the ship. He stepped quickly toward the little group around the outraged royal ambassador, and inquired the cause of the disturbance. Quivering with rage, Tabu-Tabu informed him of what had occurred.

Mr. Gibney's rage, of course, knew no bounds. Nevertheless, he did not have to simulate his rage, for he was truly furious. When he could control his emotions, he requested Tabu-Tabu to inform the king that he, Gibney, accompanied by Captain Scraggs, would forthwith repair to the schooner and then and there flay the offending McGuffey within an inch of his life. Suiting the action to the word, Mr. Gibney called to Captain Scraggs to follow him, and started for the beach.

As Captain Scraggs arose, a trifle unsteadily, from his seat, a black hand reached around him from the rear and closed over his mouth. Now, Captain Scraggs was well versed in the rough-and-tumble tactics of the San Francisco waterfront; hence, when he felt a long pair of arms crossing over his neck from the rear, he merely stooped and whirled his opponent over his head. In that instant his mouth was free, and clear above the shouting and the tumult rose his frenzied shriek for help. Mr. Gibney whirled with the speed and agility of a panther just in time to dodge a blow from a war club. His fist collided with the jaw of Tabu-Tabu, and down went that savage as if pole-axed.

Pandemonium broke loose at once. Captain Scraggs, after his single shriek for help, broke from the circle of savages and fled like a frightened rabbit for the beach. One of the natives hurled a rock at him. The missile took Scraggs in the back of the head, and he instantly curled up in a heap.

"Scraggsy's dead," thought the horrified Gibney, and sprang at the king. In that moment it came to Mr. Gibney to sell out dearly, and if he could dispose of the king, he felt that Scraggs' death would be avenged. In an instant the commodore's great arms had closed around the king, and with the helpless monarch in his grizzly bear grip Mr. Gibney backed up against the nearest bungalow. A fringe of spears threatened him in front, but for the moment he was safe behind, and the king's body protected him. Whenever one of the savages made a jab at Mr. Gibney, Mr. Gibney gave the king a boa-constrictor squeeze, and the monarch howled.

"I'll squeeze him to death," panted Mr. Gibney to Tabu-Tabu when that individual had managed to pick himself up. "Let me go, or I'll kill your king."

The answer was an earthenware pot which crashed down on Mr. Gibney's head from a window in the bungalow behind him. He sagged forward and fell on his face with the gasping king in his arms.

TER XII.

On board the Maggie II B. McGuffey, Esquire, had just gotten into position the Maxim-Vickers "pom-pom" gun on top of the house. The last bolt that held it in place had just been screwed tight when clear and shrill over the tops of the jungle and across the still surface of the little bay there floated to McGuffey's ears the single word:

"Help!"

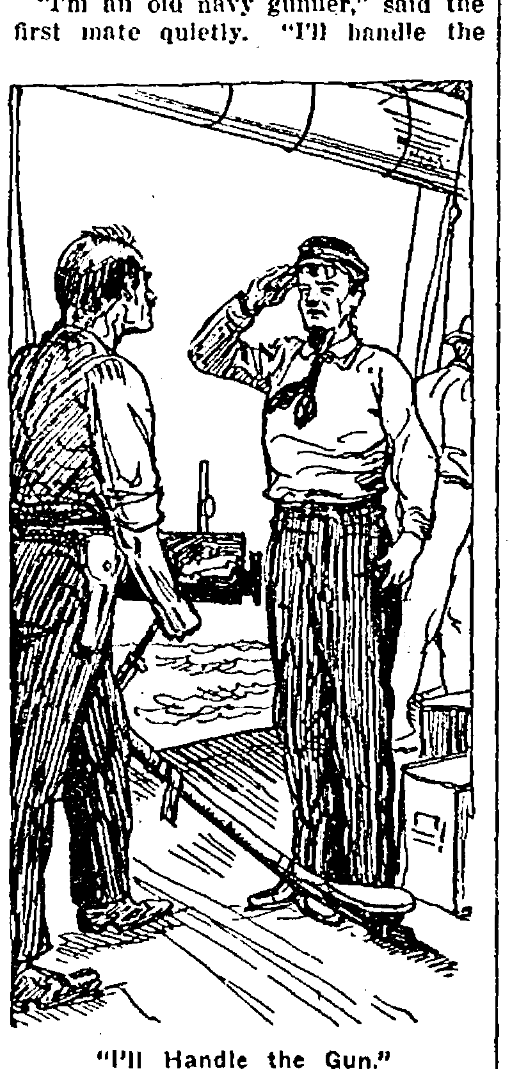
McGuffey leaned against the gun, and for the moment he was as weak as a child. "Gawd," he muttered, "that was Scraggsy and they're a-goin' to eat him up. Oh, Gib, Gib, old man, why wouldn't you listen to me? Now they've got you, and what in blazes I'm going to do to get you back, dead or alive, I dunno."

It was fully half an hour before poor McGuffey could pull himself together, and when he did, his grief was superseded by a fit of rage that was terrible to behold.

"Step lively, you blasted scum of the seas," he bawled to the mate, and the crew gathered around the gun. "Lug up a case of ammunition and we'll shell that bush until even a parrot won't be left alive in it."

"Aye, aye, sir," responded the crew to a man, and sprang to their task.

"I'm an old navy gunner," said the first mate quietly. "I'll handle the gun. With a 'pom-pom' gun it's just like playing a garden hose on them, only it's high-explosive shell instead of water. I can search out every nook and cranny in the coast of this island. Those guns are sighted up to 4,000 yards."



"I'll Handle the Gun."

"Kill 'em all," raved McGuffey, "kill all the blasted niggers."

When Mr. Gibney fell under the impact of the earthenware pot he was only partially stunned. As he tried to struggle to his feet half a dozen hands were laid on him and in a trice he was lifted and carried back of the wari to a clear space where a dozen heavy teakwood posts stood in a row about four feet apart. Mr. Gibney was quickly stripped of his clothing and bound hand and foot to one of these posts. Three minutes later another delegation of cannibals arrived, bearing the limp, naked body of Captain Scraggs, whom they bound in similar fashion to the post beside Mr. Gibney. Scraggs was very white and bloody, but conscious, and his pale-blue eyes were flickering like a snake's.

"What's—what's—the meanin' of this, Gib?" he gasped.

"It means," replied the commodore, "that it's all off but the shouting with me and you, Scraggsy. This fellow Tabu-Tabu is a d—d traitor, and his people are still cannibals. He's the decoy to get white men ashore. They schemed to treat us nice and be friendly until they could get the whole crew ashore, or enough of them to leave the ship helpless, and then—O Gawd, Scraggsy, old man, can you ever forgive me for gettin' you into this?"

Captain Scraggs hung his head and quivered like a hooked fish.

"Will they—eat—us?" he quavered, finally.

Mr. Gibney did not answer, only Captain Scraggs looked into his horrified eyes and read the verdict.

"Die game, Scraggsy," was all Mr. Gibney could say. "Don't show the white feather."

"D'ye think McGuffey could hear us from here if we was to yell for help?" inquired Captain Scraggs hopefully.

"Don't yelp, for Gawd's sake," implored Mr. Gibney. "We got ourselves into this, so let's pay the fiddler ourselves. If we let out one yip and McGuffey hears it, he'll come ashore with his crew and tackle this outfit, even if he knows he'll get killed. And that's just what will happen to him if he comes. Let poor Mac stay aboard. When we don't come back, he'll know it's all off, and if he has time to think over it he'll realize it would be foolish to try to do anything. But right now Mac's mad as a wet hen, and if we holler for help—Scraggsy, please don't holler. Die game."

Captain Scraggs turned his terrified glance on Mr. Gibney's tortured face. Scraggs was certainly a coward at heart, but there was something in Mr. Gibney's unselfishness that touched a spot in his hard nature—a something he never knew he possessed. He bowed his head and two big tears stole down his weatherbeaten face.

"God bless you, Gib, my dear boy," he said brokenly. "You're a man."

At this juncture the king came up and thoughtfully felt of Captain Scraggs in the short ribs, while Tabu-Tabu calculated the precise amount of luscious tissue on Mr. Gibney's well-upholstered frame.

"Bimeby we eat white man," said Tabu-Tabu cheerfully.

"If you eat me, you bloody-handed beggar," snapped Captain Scraggs, "I'll pizen you. I've chawed tobacco all my life, and my meat's as bitter as wormwood."

It was too funny to hear Scraggs jesting with death. Mr. Gibney forgot his own mental agony and roared with laughter in Tabu-Tabu's face. The cannibal stood off a few feet and looked searchingly in the commodore's eyes. He was not used to the brand of white man who could laugh under such circumstances, and he suspected treachery of some kind. He hurried over to join the king and the two held a hurried conversation. As a result of their conference, a huge savage was called over and given some instructions. Tabu-Tabu handed him a war club and Mr. Gibney, rightly conjecturing that this was the official executioner, bowed his head and waited for the blow.

It came sooner than he expected. The earth seemed to rise up and smite Adelbert P. Gibney across the face. There was a roar, as of an explosion in his ears, and he fell forward on his face. He had a confused notion that when he fell the post came with him.

For nearly a minute he lay there, semi-conscious, and then something warm, dripping across his face, roused him. He moved, and found that his feet were free, though his hands were still bound to the post, which lay extended along his back. He rolled over and glanced up. Captain Scraggs was shrieking. By degrees the bells quit ringing in the commodore's ears, and this is what he heard Captain Scraggs yelling:

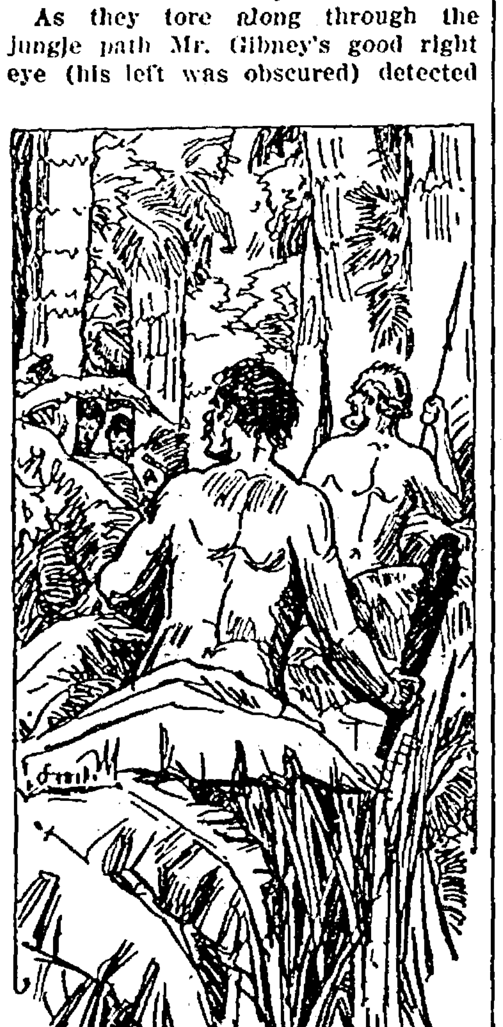
"Oh, you McGuffey. Oh, you bully Irish terrier. Soak it to 'em, Mac. Kill the beggars. You've got a dozen of 'em already. Plug away, you good old hunk of Irish bacon."

Mr. Gibney was now himself once more. He struggled to his feet, and as he did, something burst ten feet away and a little fleecy cloud of smoke obscured his vision for a moment. Then he understood. McGuffey had a rapid-fire gun trained on the wari, and the savages, with frightful yells, were fleeing madly from the little shells. Half a dozen of them lay dead and wounded close by.

"Hooray," yelled Mr. Gibney, and dashed at the post which held Captain Scraggs prisoner. He struck it a powerful blow with his shoulder and Scraggs and the post crashed to the ground. In an instant Mr. Gibney was on his knees, tearing at Scraggs' rope shackles with his teeth. Five minutes later, Captain Scraggs' hands were free. Then Scraggs did a like service for Gibney.

All the time the shells from the Maggie II were bursting around them every second or two, and it seemed as if they must be killed before they could make their escape.

As they tore along through the jungle path Mr. Gibney's good right eye (his left was obscured) detected two savages crouching behind a clump of coco palms.



Detected Two Savages Crouching Behind a Clump of Coco Palms.

"There's the king and Tabu-Tabu," yelled Scraggs. "Let's round the beggars up."

"Sure," responded the commodore. "We'll need 'em for hostages if we're to get that black coral. We'll turn 'em over to McGuffey."

* * * * * * * *

"I'd better ease up a minute, sir," said the mate to Mr. McGuffey. "The gun's getting fearful hot."

"Let her melt," raved McGuffey, "but keep her workin' for all she's worth. I'll have revenge for Gib's death, or—sufferin' mackerel!"

McGuffey once more sat down on the cabin ventilator. He pointed dumbly to the beach, and there, paddling off to the Maggie II, were two naked cannibals and two naked white men in a canoe. Five minutes later they came alongside. McGuffey met them at the rail, and he smiled and licked his lower lip as the trembling monarch and his prime minister, in response to a severe application of Mr. Gibney's hands and feet, came flying over the rail. Mr. Gibney and Captain Scraggs followed.

"I'm much obliged to you, Mac," said Mr. Gibney, striving bravely to appear jaunty. "One of your first shots came between my legs and cut the rope that held me, and banged me and the post I was tied to all over the lot. A fragment of the shell appears to have taken away part of my ear, but I guess I'll recover. We're pretty well shook up, Mac, old socks, and a jolt of whisky would be in order after you've put the irons on these two cannibals."

At 6:30 o'clock of the morning of the day following the frightful experience of Commodore Gibney and Captain Scraggs with the cannibals of Kandavu, the members of the Maggie II syndicate faced each other across the breakfast table with appetites in no wise diminished by the exciting events of the preceding day.

McGuffey surveyed his superior officers, cursed them bitterly, and remarked, with tears of joy in his honest eyes, that both gentlemen had evaded their just deserts when they escaped with their lives. "If it hadn't been for the mate," said McGuffey severely, "I'd 'a' let you two boobies suffer the penalty for your foolishness. Any man that goes to work and fraternizes with a cannibal ain't got no kick comin' if he's made up into chicken curry with rice. The minute I hear old Scraggsy yippin' for help, says I to myself, 'let the beggars fight their own way out of the mess.' But the mate comes a-runnin' up and says he's pretty sure he can come near plantin' a mess of shells in the center of the disturbance, even if we can't see the wari on account of the jungle. 'It's all off with the commodore and the skipper, anyhow,' says the mate, 'so we might just as well have vengeance on their murderers.' So, of course, when he put it that way I give my consent—"

At this juncture the mate, passing around McGuffey on his way to the deck, winked solemnly at Mr. Gibney, who hung his war-worn head in simulated shame. When the mate had left the cabin the commodore pounded with his fork on the cabin table and announced a special meeting of the Maggie II syndicate.

"The first business before the meeting," said Mr. Gibney, "is to readjust the ownership in the syndicate. Me and Scraggsy's had our heads together, Mac, and we've agreed that you've shot your way into a full one-third in*terest, instead of a quarter as hereto*fore. From now on, Mac, you're an equal owner with me and Scraggsy, and now that that matter's settled, you can quit rippin' it into us on the race question and suggest what's to be done in the case of Tabu-Tabu and this cannibal king that almost lured me and the navigatin' officer to our destruction."

"I have the villains in double irons and chained to the mainmast," replied McGuffey, "and as a testimonial of my gratitude for the increased interest in the syndicate which you and Scraggs has just voted me, I will scheme up a fittin' form of vengeance on them two tar babies. However, only an extraordinary sentence can fit such an extraordinary crime, so I must have time to think it over. These two bucks is mine to do what I please with and I'll take any interference as unneighborly and unworthy of a shipmate."

"Take 'em," said Captain Scraggs vehemently. "For my part I only ask one thing. If you can see your way clear, Mac, to give me the king's scalp for a tobacco pouch, I'll be obliged."

"And I," added the commodore, "would like Tabu-Tabu's shin bone for a clarionet. Pendin' McGuffey's reflections on the hamperin' of crime in Kandavu, however, we'll turn our attention to the prime object of the expedition. We've had our little fun and it's high time we got down to business. It will be low tide at nine o'clock, so I suggest, Scraggs, that you order the mate and two seamen out in the big whaleboat, together with the divin' apparatus, and we'll go after pearl oysters and black coral. As for you, Mac, suppose you take the other boat and Tabu-Tabu and the king, and help the mate. Take a rifle along with you, and make them captives dive for pearl oysters until they're black in the face—"

"Huh!" muttered the single-minded McGuffey. "What are they now? Sky blue?"

"Of course," continued the commodore, "if a tiger shark happens along and picks the niggers up, it ain't none of our business. As for me and Scraggsy, we'll sit on deck and smoke. My head aches and I guess Scraggsy's in a similar fix."

"Anythin' to be agreeable," acquiesced McGuffey.

After breakfast Commodore Gibney ordered that the prisoners be brought before him. The cook served them with breakfast, and as they ate, the commodore reminded them that it was only through his personal efforts and his natural disinclination to return blow for blow that they were at that moment enjoying a square meal instead of swinging in the rigging.

"I'm goin to give you two yeggs a chance to reform," concluded Mr. Gibney, addressing Tabu-Tabu. "If you show us where we can get a cargo of black coral and work hard and faithful helpin' us to get it aboard, it may help you to comb a few gray hairs. I'm goin' to take the irons off now, but remember! At the first sign of the double-cross you're both shark meat."

On behalf of himself and the king, Tabu-Tabu promised to behave, and McGuffey kicked them both into the small boat. The mate and two seamen followed in another boat, in which the air-pump and diving apparatus was carried, and Tabu-Tabu piloted them to a patch of still water just inside the reef. The water was so clear that McGuffey was enabled to make out vast marine gardens thickly sprinkled with the precious black coral.

"Over you go, you two smokes," rasped McGuffey, menacing the captives with his rifle. "Dive deep, my hearties, and bring up what you can find, and if a shark comes along and takes a nip out of your hind leg, don't expect no help from B. McGuffey, Esquire—because you won't get any."

For nearly two weeks the Maggie II lay at anchor, while her crew labored daily in the gardens of the deep. Vast quantities of pearl oysters were brought to the surface, and these Mr. Gibney stewed personally in a great iron pot on the beach. The shell was stored away in the hold and the pearls went into a chamois pouch which never for an instant was out of the commodore's possession. The coast at that point being now deserted, frequent visits ashore were made, and the crew feasted on young pig, chicken, yams and other delicacies. Captain Scraggs was almost delirious with joy. He announced that he had not been so happy since Mrs. Scraggs "slipped her cable."

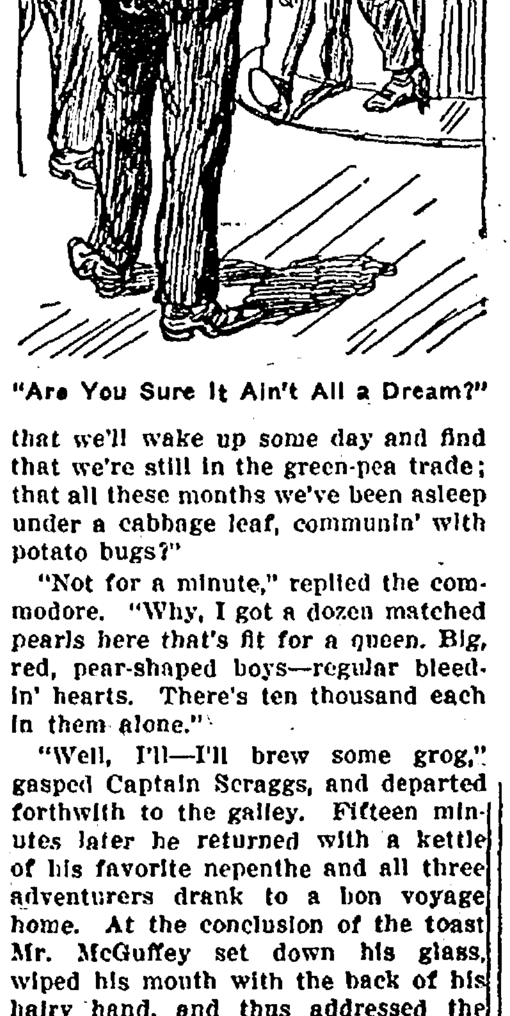
At the end of two weeks Mr. Gibney decided that there was "loot" enough ashore to complete the schooner's cargo, and at a meeting of the syndicate held one lovely moonlight night on deck he announced his plans to Captain Scraggs and McGuffey.

"Better leave the island alone," counseled McGuffey. "Them niggers may be a-layin' there ten thousand strong, waitin' for a boat's crew to come prowlin' up into the bush so they can nab 'em."

"I've thought of that, Mac," said the commodore a trifle coldly, "and if I made a sucker of myself once it don't stand to reason that I'm apt to do it again. Remember, Mac, a burnt child dreads the fire. Tomorrow morning, right after breakfast, we'll turn the guns loose and pepper the bush for a mile or two in every direction. If there's a native within range he'll have business in the next county and we won't be disturbed none."

Mr. Gibney's program was duly put through and the capital of Kandavu looted of the trade accumulations of years. And when the hatches were finally battened down, the tanks refilled with fresh water, and everything in readiness to leave Kandavu for the run to Honolulu, Mr. Gibney announced to the syndicate that the profits of the expedition would figure close up to a hundred thousand dollars. Captain Scraggs gasped and fell limply against the mainmast.

"Gib, my dear boy," he sputtered, "are you sure it ain't all a dream and that we'll wake up some day and find that we're still in the green-pea trade; that all these months we've been asleep under a cabbage leaf, communin' with potato bugs?"



"Are You Sure It Ain't All a Dream?"

"Not for a minute," replied the commodore. "Why, I got a dozen matched pearls here that's fit for a queen. Big, red, pear-shaped boys—regular bleedin' hearts. There's ten thousand each in them alone."

"Well, I'll—I'll brew some grog," gasped Captain Scraggs, and departed forthwith to the galley. Fifteen minutes later he returned with a kettle of his favorite nepenthe and all three adventurers drank to a bon voyage home. At the conclusion of the toast Mr. McGuffey set down his glass, wiped his mouth with the back of his hairy hand, and thus addressed the syndicate.

"In leavin' this paradise of the South Pacific," he began, "we find that we have accumulated other wealth besides the loot below decks. I refer to his royal highness, the king of Kandavu, and his prime minister, Tabu-Tabu. When these two outlaws was first captured, I informed the syndicate that I would scheme out a punishment befittin' their crime, to-wit—murderin' an' eatin' you two boys. It's been a big job and it's taken some time, me not bein' blessed with quite as fine an imagination as our friend, Gib. However, I pride myself that hard work always brings success, and I am ready to announce what disposition shall be made of these two interestin' specimens of aboriginal life. I beg to announce, gentlemen, that I have invented a punishment fittin' the crime."

"Impossible," said Captain Scraggs.

"Shut up, Scraggs," struck in Commodore Gibney. "Out with it, Mac, What's the program?"

We understand that Martin House can lick any checker-fiend in the city, and that he has been demonstrating the fact on several and sundry. Now, maybe. And maybe not. We suggest that the checker sharks of the city hold a sort of elimination series to decide this serious question, and put it up to all of them to settle the matter. You start it, Martin, and we'll give the standing of the "league."

The Epworth League of the M. E. Church are hard at work right now rehearsing a play that they are going to present in the near future. The name of the play is "Out of the Shadow," and promises to be a real play, it being taken from the play that scored so high in New York a few years ago under the name of the "Noble Sacrifice. Many will remember the play which Leaguers put over here two years ago, it being the "Noble Outcast," which was the "hit" of the year. With that play as a standard we may feel assured that this play will also be one long to be remembered.

A number of announcements for political office will be found in this issue of the Independent. Politics seems to be warming up over the county.

He was appointed to the office upon the death of the late Bert Fisher.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Independent, will be found the announcement of R. C. "Rufe" Morse, for the office of Mayor of Belmond, at the coming spring election. BELMOND FIGURES IN COURT AFFAIRS

Friends of W. S. Weston who has visited Clarion for several years reporting sessions in district court for Judges McCall and Thompson will be glad to learn that he has been recommended for appointment as postmaster at Webster City. A telegram from Cogressman Dickinson wired Mr. Weston that the confirmation would follow. Mr. Weston stood first in the report of the civil service examination and since that was published it has generally been conceded that he would receive Congressman Dickinson's recommendation.

OPERATION OF SUGAR FACTORY NOT YET SETTLED

R. C. Morse Is Chosen By The Citizen's Caucus

Heavy Vote For Caucus Cast And Ladies Take Advantage Of Opportunity.

WHAT'S THE NEXT MOVE?

The citizens' caucus held in the city hall Tuesday afternoon of this week, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the office of mayor, five councilmen, treasurer, and assessor, resulted in R. C. Morse being nominated for mayor,and Matt Sullivan, A. W.. Russell, Lud Simerson, Jno. Dorenkamp and C. J. Papousek as councilmen, Osbon Young as assessor, and C. M. Morse as city treasurer.

Voting was heavy for a caucus, a total of 397 good ballots being cast. Of these, about 75 were feminine votes. The ladies did not vote as heavy as had been expected, and perhaps one reason for this was the report which became current during the early part of the afternoon that the ladies could not vote, which was untrue and without foundation.

The result of the caucus gave the following men first place, with the number of votes to their credit:

For Mayor—R. C. Morse, 232 votes.

For Councilmen

Matt Sullivan	304
A. W. Russell	288
Lud Simerson	255
Jno. Dorenkamp	254
C. J. Papousek	222

C. M. Morse for treasurer, and O. Young as assessor, were without any competition.

Four ballots were spoiled—whether masculine or feminie no one knows and four ballots were thrown out as unofficial, not having the judges' signiture written on them.

The Independent is not advised as to future actions along the political line of battle. The election to be held the 27th is apparantly an event that can develope into an exciting one or one of calm and expected results.

Politically speaking, as it were, the thing sums up to this: that nobody seems to know nothin' nohow. What do you know?

CONGREGATIONAL NOTES

That was a nice increase for the first Sunday in March with the roads bad; it ought to help us to make the highest record for the year this month.

The President of the Christian Endeavor has appointed several committees which should help in that work. For a while the Endeavor service will only occupy about forty minutes which will be followed by a short sermon by the pastor.

The Ladies Aid Society will hold their monthly business meeting on Thursday afternoon which will be followed by a social hour to which all are invited.

The Thursday evening Bible Study will be in the gospel of Luke. About forty have entered into the "Fellowship of Prayer" and have agreed to read and study Luke's gospel during the Lenten season.

SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

Wednesday evening, March 8, at eight o'clock, Miss Shattuck, Head of the Public Speaking Department of Iowa State College at Ames will give a recital of readings. This will be a splendid entertainment and you should plan to atted. Admission 25c and 35c.

Tuesday March 14, Forest City, Garner, Britt, and Belmond will hold a quadrangular declamatory contest. Each school will hold a contest the same night. Each school will enter a contestant in each class at each of the four contests. Thus twelve of our declamatory contestants will represent their school in an interscholastic event. Plan to hear the contest March 14. It will be a good one.

Last week end our boys went to Cedar Falls to take part in the tournment held at the State Teachers College. Altho we did not make a showing in the tournament, our boys were able to witness some very good games and see how the State Colleges handle such tournaments. The first half ended 9 to 6 in favor of Belmond. During the last half Geneva took the lead and held it by one point until the last thirty seconds of play, when they made another point by the free toss route, making the final score 16-18 for Geneva. Our team was much faster, but lacked size. Geneva's center was six feet 4 inches, with the other players around six feet.

This Friday we play Hampton on our floor for our last game of the season. Hampton defeated us 18 to 22 on their floor earlier in the season. They were defeated by Geneva the first of the season, so this game should be worth seeing.

Mrs. Harry Nordschow, Mrs. Geo. Brady and son Roger visited Grade One last Friday.

Mrs. Clair Christie, Mrs. George Brady and Mrs. Harry Nordschow were Kindergarten visitors last Friday.

The girls' team reported a very pleasant and beneficial trip last Friday at the Iowa Falls Tournament. They arrived in time for the semi finals between Newell and Cresco and Audubon and Staton in the afternoon. At night Iowa Falls played a curtain raising game with Bendurant. The game ended a tie and Iowa Falls won by making the first two points.

Newell and Stanton played the consolation game. Newell was victorious.

Cresco and Audbon played the final game where Audubon, last years' champions again won the cup. Cresco has an excellent team, but had luck at basket shooting. Audubon repeated their policy of last year by saving out their best forward until this game. This is the third State Tournament in which four of the Audubon girls have played.

Audubon won with a score of 11-3.

The cup was presented immediately after the game. The large cup to the school and a small cup to each player and the coach of the winning team. The Newell team winners of the consolation game were presented with the ball which had been used in the Tournament.

The Referee, a man from Des Moines who officiated last year in the Drake Tourney, gave a nice talk when presenting the cup. In substance he said: Girls' Basket Ball and girls' athletic in general have been tried out in this tournament.

He hoped the time would come when girls Tennis Matches, field meets, indoor base-ball meets and other girls' athletic meets would be held. If the Scores of these games were scrapped and no attention paid to them, the value of this or any such Tournament could not be counted because it gives the girl poise, ability to meet and associate with other girls, to take defeat and win victory and so enlarge her vision. He said he had not seen an unladylike action nor heard an unladylike word spoken by any girl during the Tournament. This kind of sportsmanship should be encouraged. But if it had not been true and athletics did make girls unladylike then all such things could not end too quickly. He said he was a strong believer in girls' athletics and refereed because he enjoyed the girls' game.

Saturday morning it was the girls' good luck to meet this referee and talk over the tournament with him.

A CORRECTION

In giving the names of the Committee of Three men who were to handle the subscription money raised for operating the factory, the Independent stated that R. H. Klemme was one. This was incorrect; Ole Thompson is the other member of the committee.

DISTRICT COURT NOTES

News: You've heard the old saw "Oh dear, oh dear, what shall I do? I've lost my wife and seed corn too." Well the troublesome days which the farmers have been facing the past two years has brought almost like conditions to some farmers. Adversity doesn't always bring a family closer together.

N. H. Veldhouse is suing Elmer and Lester Ulstad to recover $134.89 alleged to be due on land lease, and has secured a landlord's attachment to protect his claim.

Gilbert Erickson is plaintiff in a suit to partition the estate of the late Edward Erickson, of Dows, who left considerable real estate in Dows and Dows vicinity. There were no children, and the heirs Gilbert Erickson, Johannes Erickson, Simon Erickson, Anna E. Iverson, Nels Erickson, Hans Erickson, Goro B. Holmstykket, Ann B. Vien, Christen P. Bomarken, Peder Pederson, Martha O. Knarud, Christen Nilsen, Nils Nilsen, Goro Nilsen Opsal, Marie Slateland, Gudbrand Nilsen and O. B. Erickson administrator, have varying interest in the estate. The plaintiff asks that a referee be named and the lands sold and the proceeds divided according to the interest of the heirs, most of whom are uncles and aunts, or children of uncle and aunts of the deceased.

Crowe & Sons are suing Wesley Parks to recover $22.45 due on a note, and $100 due on a note given to the First National Bank, which had been assigned to the firm. W. A. Cox is also suing Willard and Wesley Parks and Park Bros, to recover $78.76 alleged to be due for merchandise sold defendants.

The Wood Carriage and Auto Co., of Hampton, sues Jas. Sibert to recover on a note for $50 given for equipment for a tractor, and another one for $100.27 and $25.88 due on account, as well as a note for $925 given in purchase of a Fordson tractor. $1,074.67 is due, and the firm asks for judgment for this amount and attachment to protect its claim.

Bennie Swanson is suing Albert W. Bobst and wife, George Dunn and the Alexander Savings Bank to foreclose a mortgage against the SW qr of section 20-91-23, given to insure payment of a $15,000 note, on which the interest is unpaid and there are also the 1920 taxes due plaintiff, who paid them. $16,000 is the amount now due, and Swanson asks the court to order the sale of the property as provided by law.

(From the Monitor.)

Marriage licenses have been grantedthe past week to Myron Bert Houg and Edith E. Nelson; Wm. F. Weiderman and Ethel Gail Evans both of Dows and Wiert Willemssen and Grace Ruter, both of Kanawha.

C. E. Hoyt, a representative from the state treasurer's office, is spending a week or more at the office of Clerk Goslin. His business is to check up the various estates for the purpose of escertaining if any inhertance tax money is due the state. Later we will have more to say of his work, but it may be interesting to know that $3000 due the state has already been found.

The trial of the damage case of E. F. Bailey of Belmond vs. Great Western is now occupying the attention of the court. Plaintiff alleges damages in a sum of $3000 for failure of the defendant company to supply him with gravel cars at a pit near Belmond.

SPRING "MOVIES" IN BELMOND

"Movies" in and around Belmond the first of March were many, and the following list, prepared for the Independent thru the curtesy of the Wolle Land Co., gives our readers some of them. If any are incorrect, or if any are not here listed, we would appreciate your co-operation in the matter.

Joe Sampson moved to the old Sampson farm southeast of town, having moved here from Ackley last fall. He formerly farmed this place before moving to Ackley. Edward Nelson, who was on the place, has moved to Kanawha.

P. D. Phillis vacated the Veeder farm which will be worked by the Veeder boys.

Pete Green moved from Mrs. Zook's 80 to near Hayfield, Mr. Gabel moving on the Zook place.

Casper Kern leaves the old Ripley land now owned by J. N. Johnson and goes to Miller, Ia. Wm. Guest and son move onto the place in his stead.

Sam Galbott moves to near Miller, Iowa.

Mr. Fatland moves on the J. N. Johnson farm in Hickory Grove.

Mrs. Lateer removed from the old Houghton farm near Goodell, to Belmond.

Mr. Lee went to the Christie farm.

F. E. Christie is on an 80 near Goodell, which he bought of J. M. Kernan last January. Mr. Kernan now lives on the Sullivan homestead north of Belmond.

Henry Groen, Jr., moved to Thornton, and Mr. Trager moved to the place vacated by Groen.

Geo. Ahlstrom will work the Chester Luick farm.

Floyd Bailey will try his luck this year farming the Ole Thompson 80.

Ollie Tomson moved from near Kanawha to Belmond, where he is working with the Cash Market.

Geo. Wirtz moved to the Johnson & Rosecrans 90 south of Olaf.

Mr. Scott will work the Tom McNulty farm. Will Gealow moved 5 miles east of Goodell.

Juluis Johnson will work the old Cuppett place west of town.

Guy Lynch goes on his father's farm near Olaf.

Mr. Jennings moved from the old Tom Aldrich farm, to near Lyle.

John Chapman moved to the old Tracy land.

A. O. Thompson moved from southwest of town to Eagle Grove.

Claude Thayer went to the old Wever place at Pike Timber.

Will Chase moved to town, and Mr. Sarbers went on the place vacated.

Mr. Stockwell moved to the McCallum place west of Goodell, where he will be foreman.

Chris Sorenson will again go to farming, and moved March 1 to his farm.

Bernold Kinseth will try his hand at the farming game on the Sporaa land.

Henry Ahlstrom works the Lynch 80 adjoining town.

Ed. Gruis moved to Belmond.

Mr. Vierkant moved on the place vacated by Mr. Gruis.

Mr. Wolle reports that in 1921, there was spent in Belmond some $23.000 for building purposes. If business conditions get back to normal, this sum will look small in comparison to the projects which are planned.

Chris Kragh and a friend were Hampton callers last week Thursday on business connected with the oil station.

Bert Trumbell was in town last Saturday, meeting old friends and visiting relatives. He was enroute to Klemme to visit his grandmother, whose health is not overly good. Bert is now living in Des Moines, where he is attending college and working at the Congregational hospital.

SUGAR FACTORY DEVELOPMENTS STRIKE SNAG

Plans Are Practically Completed When Unexpected Affair Changes Attitude.

TO BE SETTLED SOON, THO.

Plans for operating the Iowa Valley Sugar Co.'s factory here this year have gone more or less amiss, and while operation at one time was practically assured, things have arisen which do not permit a postive statement at this time of the factory operating. There is, however, a fifty-fifty chance, at the least, and every resource is being used to bring about a successful conclusion to the plans.

The question of financing the operation of the plant has been favorably settled. While more funds are needed, they can be raised without much trouble. Of the sum asked for from Belmond, practically all of it has been pledged, between $25,000 and $30,000. The question of the mortgage on the plant has been favorably disposed of, and acreage is being contracted. The difficulty now arising is one dealing with the creditor's committee, of which Mr. Pomeroy, of Minneapolis, is the chairman.

Mr. Pomeroy hardly feels that he can submit to the plan of making the $100,000 operating subscription fund a first lien on all property not covered by the Dyer mortgage, which had been the plan. In doinfi this, the creditors would be taking second place on the security. All other members of the committee have agreed to the plan, ad it is hoped that he can be made to see the question as the others do.

One way or the other, the question will probably be settled within the next week. Belmond people will be sincerely hoping that the outcome is favorable to operation, for the running of the plant means much to every citizen of the community, in or out of business, farmer or city dweller. With the present situation satisfactorily solved, operation of the factory will be practically certain.

HOPES WE'LL OPERATE

News: There is a strong probability that the Belmond Sugar Factory will be opened this coming fall The money to put the plant on its feet and insure its operation is being raised at this time, and the chances are that Belmond citizens will see their dream realized and the thot is that if the plant does open this fall and is operated at a profit that it will continue to operate, financing itself from the profits which will undoubtedly be realized once it year's operation of the plant.

Wright county farmers will be asked to contract a sufficient beet acreage to justify the opening of the plant, and additional acreage will also be secured from the territory which furnished beets for the first years operation of the plant.

The growing of beets proved profitable the first year, and the growers of last year's beets realized pretty good profits where the crop was good, so it is not anticipated that there will be a great deal of difficulty in securing a sufficient acreage.

The News hopes that the plant will be opened, and that it will return a profit to the stockholders. Its successful operation cannot help but be a good thing for Belmond, and for Wright county as well.

COMMUNITY WELFARE CLUB

The Community Welfare club is making many big plans for the coming year.

Last year $660 was spent by the club for the improvement of the town.

Mrs. Rosecrans, who was elected chairman at the last meeting is corresponding with several speakers in an effort to obtain dates from them when they can come to talk to the ladies of the club. During the year there will be speakers on school childrens clothes, landscape, gardening, proper shoes for women and children and many other topics. Mrs. Campbell who helped organize the Community club will perhaps come to address the club at one of the meetings.

The club is also planing to hold a citizenship school some time in May to instruct the voters for the June primaries.

The calendar committee is hard at work on the new calendars and preparing good programs.

If you haven't joined the club do so now so you won't miss any of the good meetings.

THE MAIL ORDER NUMBER

This week's issue of the Independent is the "Mail Order Number." In most of the advertising found in this issue from Belmond you will find reference to the mail order houses Local merchants represented are placing their goods and their prices squarely before the goods and the prices given by the mail order houses and if you will compare them you will be more than surprised at the results.

One thing stands forth above all others, and that is that the Belmond merchants are equal or lower on a great many articles than the mail order houses. A local mercant should be entitled to mail order prices, plus the freight, and sell at these prices for cash. But they are not asking it; they are quoting prices that they are charging every day, without freight, and without asking you for cash on the spot in may cases.

You can trade as cheap, and cheaper, at home than you can by sending away. You get what you want when you want it.

Why send away when you can save money by trading at home? Read he ads and see how and why. And remember that prices quoted are REGULAR PRICES, not special ones.

LOUIS HELLAND DIES

Louis Helland, a well known farmer residing southeast of town, died suddenly Tuesday morning from an attack of heart trouble. He had been in the best of health, and his sudden demise came as a shock o the community. Death came about 9 o'clock in the morning, and occured after a few minutes from the attack. Medical aid was summoned from Belmond but could not get there in time. At this writing it is not known when the funeral services will be held. The relatives have the sympathy of the community in their loss.

Adopted this 6th day of March 1922.

Attest: Guy Byers.

M. C. Barry, Mayor.

The Garner papers this week carried a long article regarding an arrest made there by Marshall John McNicolls, a former reident of Belmond. John noticed a tough looking hobo hanging around, and ordered him out of town. That evening he again saw the bum, and asked him why he delayed going south. The tramp became rather "sassy" and John jugged him. In looking over a bunch of cards received describing escaped prisoners and men wanted, he noticed a close resemblance in one to the fellow he had in jail. Investigation revaeled that the fellow had served two years in a Texas pen, and seemed to belong to the criminal class generally.

The Garner Legion had another big wrestling tournament on the calendar for March 6th. Garner seems to specialize in wrestling entertainments and they appear to bring crowds, too.

CLIPPINGS

Ben Blake struck a very poor day, the weather considered, for his sale, a week ago. It was one of the most disagreeable of the season. The sale was quite successful, however, amounting in total to $2,800. Ben leaves the farm; he is not decided as to what he will do—he will visit around. —Ackley World Journal.

The local barbers, after working a few months at less than pre-war prices, have decided that bread and water as a regular diet is not conducive to good health, so they have decided to arrange prices that will provide them with a warm meal at least once a week. Shaves will be twenty cents and hair cuts forty cents, beginning today.—Chronicle.

We wonder if the ladies of Des Moines will make remarks about Walt Ramsay such as ladies of his old home town will. The other day we noticed Walt's picture stuck in a prominent place in one of the local offices, and when we spoke of it, one of the ladies said she put it there because she thought Walt was just one of the finest looking men she had ever seen. The lady isn't married either.—Signal.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

WHERE IS THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE?

With the sugar factory operating this year, there should be plenty of opportunity for the Chamber of Commerce to do something. There are various things pertaining to Belmond, which the Chamber of Commerce could and should, be looking after now.

Why have such an organization if it is not to be utilized? Who are the officers? How many members are there? How much money is in the treasury? What has been done? Do you know? We don't—and it is doubtful if you do.

The writer in a conversation with a business man in Belmond—new in the sense that he had only been in business here for three months—mentioned the Chamber of Commerce, and had the question, "Why, have you a Chamber of Commerce here? I never heard of it." A fine recommendation, is it not? And one apt to create enthusiasm with this man.

If we are going to have an organization of this character, let's either keep it alive and moving, or announce the date of the funeral and get a dead affair off our hands and out of the way. The Independent is not criticising the officers of the Chamber of Commerce; doubtless they have done what they could; but there is too little attention paid to it. If in oher towns similar clubs accomplish results and keep their community on the map, why can we not here? To the best of the writer's knowledge, not an effort has been made to collect membership dues for two years. One member of the Chamber made this remark to the writer. Why not collect them? Get some coin in the family sock and attend to some of the things that need looking after. The Great Western crossing, for instance; better $500 spent in a law suit that would protect the crossing, than another accident in which someone is injured or killed.

Let's have some action.

Belmond Boy Is Still Adding More War Honors

EDMUND GROH ADDS STILL MORE HONORS TO LIST ALREADY LARGE.

Minneapolis Journal: Edmund Groh says he can't remember what happened.

But two governments can.

So Edmund Groh, who now lives at 613 University avenue SE., and is a student at a Minneapolis school of pharmacy, today has the Croix de Guerre and the naval Distinguished Service Medal, the "Pershing citation," a French citation and two Second Division citations and the right to wear two silver stars on his Victory medal, because he kept on caring for the wounded in France after he had been seriously wounded, at a time when there was much work for a "pillslinger" to do. He is the only Minneapolis man and one of a very few enlisted men to receive the naval medal.

In Fight at Belleau Wood

He enlisted May 9, 1917, at Des Moines, and was a pharmacist's mate, third class, in the navy, until October, when he was detached to the marine corps. He went overseas in April with the Sixth Regiment of the Second Division, just in time to get a taste of the fighting at Belleau Wood, he says, and then went to the Soissons sector. There at Vierzy, he got his first citation. In the divisional citation, it read:

EDMUND P. GROH

"Having shown great courage in dressing wounded in the open field, he continued in the performance of this duty after being wounded, refusing to be evacuated until he had completed dressing of all wounded brought to him."

His wound was only a flesh wound in the leg, he says, and he was soon back at his work. Then, in September, at Thiacourt, which was one of a number of towns included in the St. Mihiel drive, he was severely wounded, when a high explosive shell tore his left arm and shoulder.

Wounded Second Time

"After that, I couldn't do much. I don't know what happened," he says.

He fainted twice. But in the meantime he was at work caring for wounded. Finally, they dragged him back to the divisional field hospital, where they operated to remove a bit of shell lodged in his shoulder. Before he recovered consciousness, he was on his way to Neuf-Chateau, where they operated again. Then after two weeks, he was sent on to Orleans, where as he lay in the hospital, he read in the "Stars and Stripes" that he had received a Pershing citation and the French Croix-de Guerre for bravery in action.

He came back to the United States in March, 1919, and at the Great Lakes Naval hospital he received the medals he had earned. Discharged in July, he came to Minneapolis and started in school.

Now he moves away if a friend mentions medals; refuses to talk, if questioned on the thing.

"Darned if I know why I got 'em," he says.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

By R. M. Edwards

Poultry Orchard Demonstrations

H. E. Nichols, orchard specialist, and J. L. Gordon, poultry specialist, both from the extension department at Ames held a series of dual orchard and poultry demonstrations in our county last week covering four points in the county.

Interesting lectures and demonstrations were given on these two subjects by these men. The poultry lectures were interesting especially because of the fact that poultry production is becoming so popular in this section of the state. The orchard lectures and demonstrations were very insructive, although orchard farming is sort of a side line with most farmers in this part of the state.

Assistant Agent Leader Here

I.W. Van Nice, assistant leader of county agents in Iowa, was in Clarion last week checking up on monthly and annual reports of our local farm bureau. Mr. Va Nice is sent out from the state office in an effort to urge a more uniform system of keeping records throughout the state. He seemed well pleased with the records as being kept by our local organization and said they were above the average of the state.

Evergreen Social

One of the liveliest and most interesting community socials ever held in the Evergreen district, Eagle Grove township, was staged at the Harley C. Cowan home Friday evening, March 3rd. This beautiful farm home was packed to over-flowing by farmers, and their families.

The election of officers was the first thing on the program after which a social time was enjoyed by all. The feature of the entertainment was the oyster stew which was put on by the losing side in the yearly contest of the Evergreen Sporting association.

This association is an agricultural community organization which has been in existence for more than twenty years and which, during that time, has held its regular annual socials such as was held Friday night. Many community clubs are reported from various parts of the state but the Evergreen Sporting association has the distinction of all phases of community life.

Soy Bean Winning Its Way

Cedar county farmers are evidently thoroughly sold on the soy bean. They Claim it is a valuable adjunct in hog feeding, because it furnishes the protien necessary to properly balance feeding rations much cheaper than the commerical supplement feeds. Through the influence of the county agent the farmers began trying it out in a modest way in 1919. From the beginning its feeding qualities were apparent, and its popularity has grown apace each year since. Last year, through the agency of the farm bureau, enough seed was distributed to plant more than 1,500 acres. This season, owing to cheaper seed and wider recognition of the value of the crop, a much larger acreage will be in evidence.

Pull Together for Better Roads

In Linn county the farm bureau and commercial oodies are pulling together for a system of farm-to-market gravelled roads. An enthusiastic get-together-meeting was held recently in Cedar Rapids for the purpose of developing a definite working program in order that the work may be pushed this season. Farm Bureau officials sent notices to every one of the fifteen hundred members in the county, urging them to attend the meeting. A resolution recently adopted by the farm bureau gives unqualified endorsement to a program of "properly graded, drained and graveled roads," and favors the immediate "construction of gravel roads at a cost in relation to economic conditions." It is believed that a suficient supply of gravel for the purpose is available in the country, and arrangents will be made to utilize it.

ACKLEY ANNING PLANT PREPARES FOR SEASON

World Journal: Here's extra good news!

The Ackley corn canning plant will be in operation and in full productive swing during the coming packig season. The announcement means much to the community; it means considerable to the farmers of the nearby ter- that the product of the fields will have hat the product of fields will have when devoted to the growing of corn for canning purposes; it means a great deal to the sixty, seventy, eighty or more hands that will be employed at the plant during the time of the season's activities.

Contracts for acreage are soon to be made. The price per ton will be ample to justify every farmer who is solicited, to plant a certain acreage. Manager Thomas Gilloon says the season will be one of unusual activity at the plant; last season, because of adverse and unfavorable conditions, the plant was not in operation. The output of the plant, it is expected, will be doubled and more than in any previous season.

OUR BOW

This is the initial bow for us in this style of advertising. We hope you will like it and read it from week to week. In the Griesy's Store News we shall try to give you the latest developments in long-wearing hardware and good, efficient farm machinery, as well as other items of interest. Look for it—read it— and we'll both profit.

Order your repairs early. You will save time and money by doing so.

Make our store your headquarters when you are in town.

Wear a smile—it's cooler in summer and warmer in the winter than a frown.

Stop talking HARD TIMES. Keep your face to the sunshine and the shadows will fall behind.

It takes 64 muscles of the face to make a frown and only 13 to make a smile. Why work overtime?

If you are skimming cream from your milk by the old-fashioned method, you are losing fully $20 a year for every cow you milk. A Primrose cream separator saves the cream. If there were no other advantages, this one would make the Primrose a paying investment. It is equal to feeding three cows and getting a profit from four.

This is a good year for feeding stock. It pays to feed part of your grain, because the prices of dairy products, and of beef and pork, are relatively higher than corn or oats. You can further increase your profits by grinding your own feed, and putting it in the most digestible form. Let an International feed grinder help you make a profit this year.

The hen is the only thing that can lay around and make money. And it pays to have her "laying around" as much as possible rather than setting on a few eggs for hatching purposes. A Successful Hatcher will do the job much more effeciently. This machine is simple and easy of operation, and experience is not necessary in order to produce good results. Come in and see the Successful the next time you are in town.. You can't beat our prices on incubators.

Price are raising on field seeds. Now is the time to order what you need. We still have a supply at the lower prices..

At a reduced price of $700, the Titan 10-20 is by far the best tractor buy on the market today. Then when you consider that a P & O three bottom plow is given free with each Titan, it becomes indeed a real bargain. The same is true of the International 8-16 at a price of only $670. A P & O two bottom plow is given free with this tractor—but remember this offer expires on both tractors May 1st. Get your tractor now and be prepared for the spring rush.

The time you spend in preparig your seed bed right will be repaid with interest when you total up your crops at the end of the year. Feed your hungry crops by breaking up the soil elements so that the plants can use them. This is accomplished first, by deep plowing and second by thoroughly pulverizing the soil. Hard lumps and clods pay no dividends. Plow the ground, crush the clods, slice the lumps and release the plant food with P & O plows and International tillage tools. We have a full line on hand for your inspection.

BIG FIRE CAUSES LOTS OF EXCITMENT

The main building of the consolidated school of Meservey took fire Saturday afternoon at about 2:00 o'clock. A bad flue and sparks on the roof was the cause of the fire, which did about $200 worth of damage.

A bucket bregade was soon formed and a hard fight was soon put up, and had the fire well under control by the time the men with the city hose arrived.

The roof had been full of ice and snow and being on the north side it was not very dry, otherwise nothing could have saved the building.

This is the second time the old building has been saved, and those who took part in fighting the fire need much commendation.

Something more than a year or two ago the building also caught fire on the roof and was saved only by the daring bravery of Henry Frey, the janitor, who nearly lost his life in slipping when on top of the roof. A good many jokes have been passed that the building was not worth saving. But the most of these jokes were made and passed by those who so bravely fought to save the school house. It has been suggested by one of the heavy tax payers that a corrogated metal roof should take the place of the old roof. This kind of a roof would cost the district around one thousand dollars. The building itself we doubt could be sold at auction for more than this sum. Then too we were informed that the frame, structure and foundation would not sustain such a roof. Just recently the district has been thru two bond issues and lost for a new school house.

The district is indeed glad to congratulate the fire fighters in their endeavor to save the building for just at this time Meservey could not well have some evil minded report circulating.

Mrs. Frank Hartwig of Painsville, Minn., has been here the past week visiting the homes of her brothers, Ralph and Chas. Waddingham, and other relatives.

SCHOOL NOTES

THE CRISIS

Society.

A ball was held at the home of John Elgin. The people were carefree and to witness them one would not think that the country was threatened by the British.

The attendants were richly dressed, the ladies all wore rings.

There are to be several dances held at different homes. These dances are unpatriotic and should not be attended.

The young men would do better if they gave their money for their country instead of giving a ring to their lady love.

Jokes

A correspondent of our paper visited an army camp last week. He found the men cheerful in spite of the despairing conditions. They told the following jokes:

Officer—(Speaking to private) Go down to the river and get a pail of water.

Private—Aw go on its your turn, I got one yesterday.

The army was marching to battle "Shoot at will," cried the lieutenant. "Which one is he?" came back from the awkward squad.

Officer—(To private who failed to salute him) "Aren't you a private?" Private—"No, I'm a yankee from Connecticut."

Officer—(To private after successful battle) "Well my man what did you do to help win this battle?"

Private—"Oh I walked up to one of the enemy and cut off both his feet."

Officer—"Very good but why didn't you cut off his head?"

Private—"Oh that was off already."

The Editor recently met a soldier and this is the following conversation that resulted:

Editor—"Well my man were you ever in a battle?"

Soldier—"No, but I nearly was."

Editor—"How was that."

Soldier—"Well at the battle of White Plains the general said 'My men strike for home and country,' most of them struck for country but I struck for home and am glad I did it."

A colonel reports the following story: During the battle of Trenton a new recruit continually followed him around. After the battle the colonel said, "Well my man you sure stayed by me faithfully today. You deserve to be commended."

The soldier replied, "Yes sir when I left home my mother said 'My son stay near the officers all the time, they never get hurt,' I see she is right as a bullet never came near us."

(Written by Vern Schulter a senior in the class of 1922.)

BIG DEAL AT SHEFFIELD

Chronicle: Mrs. C. C. Carhart last week contracted for the sale of her entire interest in the Sheffield Brick and Tile Company and the Sheffield Tile Company, at Sheffield, to H. L. Carhart, R. R. Carhart and Forrest F. Carhart. The consideration is said to be close to $200,000.

The property consists of two modern brick and tile plants, which were originally promoted and later developed into prosperous concerns by the late Charles C. Carhart, who, it will be remembered met his death in an automobile wreck last year, while on his way home from a trip to Des Moines. The accident happened near Zearing.

The new owners of the plants are among the reliable and progressive young business men of Sheffield, and they have also been associated in the ownership of the brick and tile plants with their brother, previous to his death, so that the management of the business will not be new to them. It is stated that Forrest F. Carhart will be in active charge of the business.

A WARNING

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said:
"My trade of late is getting bad,
I'll try another ten-inch ad."
If such there be, go mark him well;
For him no bank account shall swell;
No angels watch the golden stair
To welcome home the millionaire.

The man who never asks for trade
By local line or ad displayed,
Cares more for rest than worldly gain,
And patronage but gives him pain.
Tread lightly, friends, let no rude sound
Disturb his solitude profound.
Here let him live in calm repose,
Unsought, except by men he owes.

And when he dies, go plant him deep
That naught may break his dreamless sleep,
Wherein no clamor may dispel
The quiet that he loved so well.
And that the world may know its loss,
Place on his grave a wreath of moss,
And on a stone above: "Here lies,
A chump who wouldn't advertise."

MODERN DANCE STEPS INTERPRETED BY EDITOR

It was a surprise to us to know that interpretive dancing was being indulged in by the youth of the village and larger communities hard by until the other evening.

The first dance of interpretation was done to the music of a fox-trot.

One very young couple clasped each other around the waist with one arm and then fell upon each other's chest, gazing heavenward with their eyes and placed the palms of their hands together like a pious person does in prayer. This dance was an interpretation of "The Maiden's Prayer."

Closely following them was a couple impersonating "The Osteopath." He was patting her between the shoulders and rubbing the back of her neck with his left hand and massaging her upper left arm with his right hand, undoubtedly treating her for heart trouble.

As the dancers swept on a very tall young man and a short sweet-faced girl were interpreting "The Chiropractor." There could be no mistake for his big, broad muscular right hand was operating solely on her back bone and she was cringing a little at every adjustment.

"Le lansant du St. Vitas" was another beautiful interpretative dance done to waltz music by a timid-looking, curley-haired girl who had forgotten to tie a string around her waist and a young man who held her closely and lovingly to his breast and looked pityingly into her eyes and tried in every way to show her how he sympathized with her in her misery, while he attempted to prevent her from jerking herself clear from his arms. They did very little foot work but she kept up a continual jerking of both shoulders and one hip while he tried to hold her. It was a sublime effort and we called it a draw.

While the orchestra essayed a one-step a short, fat boy and a tall lean girl, did one of the most beautiful interpretive dances for the evening. She bent over him and laid the end of her pretty powered nose just under his right ear. He clasped her tightly about the waist with his right arm and held her up as best he could while she staggered thru the steps of the dance. He kept both eyes glued heavenward and did not even roll them. They were bumped into several times but they never changed their positions. It was "The Dying Calf."

The pianist in the orchestra also did a little interpreting on his own hook. It must have been "The Hod Carrier," for he tried to climb up the front of the piano and over it without turning his head to spit. Then he would setle on his stool and hit the keys a smash to imitate the hodful of bricks falling on the floor. It was a highbrow dance.—Mason City Glbe-Gazette.

U. S. TREASURY LAUNCHES SAFE INVESTMENT CAMPAIGN

William B. Bosworth, Government Savings Director for the Seventh Federal Reserve District, announced today the opening of a campaign to blot out the financial swindlers located in the five states of his district—Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin. During the month of March 50,000 city and rural mail-carriers will take the following message to their sixteen million patrons: "CONSULT YOUR BANKER OR POSTMASTER BEFORE YOU INVEST."

Sixteen million dollars worth of the Government's new Treasury Savings Certificates have been distributed among the five thousand post offices in the district and each postmaster is responsible for the campaign in his community. Money invested in the new certificates increases twenty-five per cent in five years and will be returned to the investor at any time within the five years upon demand to the Treasury Department. Registration insures the investor against any form of loss. Postmasters are authorized to receive investments as small as $20 and as large as $4,000 from any individual.

POP IS NOURISHING? AMES PROF. SAYS SO

Humboldt Republican: Prof. J. H. Buchanan, of the Ames chemistry department of the Iowa State College, says that he has analyzed more than 300 samples of pop, and that it contains more nourishment than an equal amout of oysters. That is, a man who drinks a bottle of pop is more nourished than he who eats an oyster stew.

We dunno. It is hard to believe. There are a lot of things to consider. For instance. There is so much gas in pop and it has such a way of filling the stomach and coming up thru your nose that the effects might make a novice believe that it was powerful. If the Ames book shark had said that he had consumed 300 bottles of pop and felt better than if he had consumed 300 oyster stews, we might have believed him. But to say that a bottle of canned wind and flavoring has more nutriment than an oyster stew—well, we dunno.

We hate to place our unscientific mind against the trained gray matter of the Prof. but it is hard to believe. We dunno.

ARE YOU DEAD?

Just to prove our contention: Here's a dispatch from Oklahoma which states that a merchant is suing a newspaper down there for $300 because his advertising copy was omitted from the last edition of the paper, having been lost in the office. That only shows how much the merchants are losing who don't get their copy in on time and get left out of the push in a business way.—Iowa Falls Sentinel.

But not all merchants take themselves so seriously or are so insistent in letting the public know they're in business. There are those who have to be coaxed into coming in, others there are who "wait to see what Tom, their competitor, has to say," still others who stay out "because Jim advertises and can't prove what he's saying along the line of price," still others who have the terrible mistaken notion that they're "supporting the newspaper" and others who believe the buying public will "trade at my place no matter whether Bill says he'll sell the same piece of cloth or pair of shoes for 50 cents on the dollar less."

Merchants should not delude themselves. Might as well expect to catch the dollars rolling up hill; as well expect the old chariot to roll along without axlegrease and make no outcry, as to expect to do a successful merchantile business in this day and generation without extending the invitation, persistetly, to "trade at headquarters." The firm that fails to advertise in the local newspapers is dead.—Ackley World Journal.

WRIGHT COUNTY SHARES IN FUNDS

News: The public schools of Wright county will receive $2,789.00 next Monday when Treasurer Allen receives the county's apportionment from the state treasurer's office. $108,514.95 is the total to be distributed by the state treasurer next Monday and a similar apportionment will be made in September.

These sums represent the interest on the permanent school fund of the state, which is apportioned to the schools in two semi-annual payments.

On Jan. 1, 1921, the permanent fund was $4,807,156.76, plus $10,937.18 of state bonds issued to pay losses that occured many years ago a total of $4,818,093.94.

During the year 1921 there was added to the fund $889.72 from the sale of school lands in Des Moines county, and $2,590.59 from escheated estates in Linn, Madison, Scott and Pottawattamie counties. This brought the fund up to $4,821,574.25 on Jan 1, 1922, and the interest on this sum for the coming year will be apportioned to the school in 1923.

The interest is apportioned to each county on the basis of the number of children between the ages of 5 and 21 in said country, and the county auditors then apportioned it among the various schools. As there are now 690.650 children between the above ages in the state the interest paid out on March 6 will amount to .15712, or about 15 and three-fourths cents for each child of school age.

The roads are almost impassible in this community at the present time We understand a farmer or two is advocating a hard surface road between his place and Ventura. It is our opinion that for years to come a good gravel road would be a better proposition, especially since the drainage tax is on and the district cannot afford a good school edifice. It is our opinion that for most rural roads of Iowa it is the best and the cheapest.

The Reformed church people have decided to remodle their present church building and build onto it at an estimated cost of $4,500.

ADVERTISE

The codfish lays a million eggs,
While the helpful hen lays one;
But the codfish does not cackle
To inform us what she's done.
And so we scorn the codfish coy,
While the helpful hen we prize;
Which indicates to thotful minds
That it pays to advertise.
The gink who wrote these truthful lines
Forgot to sign his name;
And 'tis a pity for we'd like
To add unto his fame.
We think that one who is so wise
And who us truly teaches,
Should take a tumble to himself
And practice what he preaches.

GOLDFIELD FIRE BURNS 110 HOGS

News: The fire which destroyed the Jno. Jeppson herd at Goldfield the first of the week, remains a mystery. Mr. Jeppson estimates his loss at around $12,000. There was no insurance protection on most of the property destroyed.

The fire was discovered early in the morning, and had made such headway that there was no chance to save the hogs. One of the boars had brought an offer of $500 a few days before the fire. There were 110 head of pure breds in the barn at the time, and all were burned to death. Two horses, two cows and considerable hay and grain also were burned in the fire, with other minor equipment.

It is one of the biggest losses reported in a barn fire in recent years, and it is a hard blow to Mr. Jeppson.

One report was that a heater used in the barn was the cause of the fire, but it is only a surmise.

The results of weighing the grade children on March 1st are as follows: 8 per cent lost weight; 15 per cent made no gain; 67 per cent made a substantial gain. For comparison we will repeat the results of the previous months: January thirteen per cent lost weight; 20 per cent made no gains; 67 per cent gained weight. Unless it is on account of sickness a loss of weight or failure to make gains is due to an unbalanced diet. We believe the increase in February over January in the number that lost weight was due to sickness.

The Library fund which is being raised by the combined efforts of the teachers and pupils now amount to over one hundred dollars. The high school play to be given soon will give the fund its final boost.

HAMPTON TRUCK DRIVER MEETS BELMOND MANS FATE

Chronicle: As a result of being struck by the east bound "ping-pong" on the Chicago Great Western railroad last Friday morning, L. E. Von Ahn lies in the Luthern hospital suffering from a fractured skull and a broken back, and his International truck, in which he was hauling gravel at the time, is in a local garage, a complete wreck.

Surgeons at the Luthern hospital operated upon him Tuesday and found that one vertebrae was broken and a splinter from it had entered his spinal cord, causing the paralysis of the lower half of Mr. Von Ahn's body. The broken bone was on the spinal cord and the last report from the hospital was that he was improving nicely and that there was a fair chance that he would regain the use of his legs.

Mr. Von Ahn is a married man and has been living in Hampton but a short time, coming here from Lake City.

Mr. Von Ahn was hauling gravel for the Miller Construction Company, of Souix City, for the graveling of primary road No. 10, west of Hampton. The gravel was being hauled from a pit at the John L. Roberts home, near the old Beed's lake, and he was driving south on the road which passes the farm of Geo. A. Bird and R. J. Thompson. As he was crossing the Chicago Great Western track just east of the F. J. Scantlebury home farm his truck was hit by a Chicago Great Western freight train. Other men were also hauling gravel from the same pit, and traveling the same road, but it is said that no one saw the accident except the engine crew. The engineer and fireman on the train state that they saw the truck coming south, and also state that the train whistle was sounded for the crossing the same as usual, and the engineer also turned on the extra "toot" when he saw the loaded truck coming close to the track, but as the truck could be stopped quickly they had no idea but what the driver would stop before running up on the crossing.

The injured man in an interview with a reporter for the Chronicle on Monday afternoon stated that he did not hear or see the train coming, and that he did not realize what struck him. The auto truck was badly demolished, the motor totally destroyed, about the only thing left is the rear axle. The engine hit the truck near the front end. Mr. Von Ahn was riding in an enclosed cab on the truck, and there was a window on the side that he could have easily seen the train coming from the west.

NO TRACE FOUND OF SCHAEFER

No information has been received as to the whereabouts of George C. Schaefer, who has been operating the W. D. Evans farm in Wisner township, and who suddenly dropped from sight while at Thornton a week ago last Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer drove to Thornton that morning to look after some business matters and to do some trading, and they ate lunch together in a restaurant shortly after 11:00 o'clock, and he told his wife they would soon be ready to start for home. Mr. Schaefer never came back, and in due time his wife began to worry about his absense and began making inquiries around Thornton concerning him. She found no one who could give her any information, and after several hours' of fruitless search she drove the team back to their home on the farm, and notified her relatives, who went to Thornton to make further inquiries. No information could be secured that would lead to any clue, and whether he left town on one of the trains due in Thornton along about noon no one seemed to know.

He had purchased the Burmester farm north of town, near the dry bridge, and $6,500 had been paid down on it, but he had no obligations on this deal to worry him, as he had his choice of either throwing up his deal, or to lease the farm for the coming year. He had not fully decided the matter, but told friends in Hampton a few days before his departure that he expected to let the farm go back and rent it for the coming year. He had cancelled a sale of live stock and other personal property which he had already made arrangements to advertise, because he expected to move his stuff down from Wisner township to the Burmester place.

He did not have any personal obligations so far as known, and went away leaving his wife considerable money in the bank and all of his live stock and personal property on the farm. The day he left Thornton he cashed a check for about $150 and this money he took with him, but members of his family do not believe that he had much other money on his person when he went away. The cause of his sudden departure is just as much mystery to his wife and other relatives as it is to his friends.

He is a son of the late August H. Schaefer, and was a fine young man in every way so far as known. He was a member of Uncle Sam's army from Franklin county and saw service in France, but he escaped injury in all battles, was not gassed, and it is evident that it was not because of any injury he received in the war which may have unsettled his mind and cause him to disappear. Previous to the war he clerked in the McKee clothing store, and other places in Hampton, and was always held in high regard by those who knew him.—Chronicle.

BIG FIGHT ON "GERMAN" AS NAME OF TOWNSHIP

GARNER, Feb. 27.—Red-hot arguments are on and a fight to the finish is scheduled between Legionaires of this, Hancock county, and residents of German blood of Liberty township over the move to change the name of the township from "Liberty" back to "German." The township was named "German" before the war. During the war the name "Liberty" was taken. Now 87 of the 102 male voters in the township have signed a petition filed with the board of supervisors asking that the old name be returned. All of the county's Legion posts, Garner, Britt, Crystal Lake, Corwith, Kanawha and Goodell, have adopted resoltions of protest.

Hearing set by the board for April 17.—Mason City Globe-Gazette.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is skipper, Neils Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII. — Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.—Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer. Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

CHAPTER X.—Our three adventurers form a "syndicate,' with the gunboat, which they have renamed the Maggie II, as their base of operations. They sail for the South Sea islands, where they plan to obtain valuable black coral.

CHAPTER XI.—Going ashore with supposedly friendly natives, Gibney and Scraggs are taken prisoners, to be held for a cannibal feast.

CHAPTER XII. — McGuffey, believing his friends to have been killed, shells the island. Gibney and Scraggs escape, and reach the ship with two prisoners, the king of the island and his "prime minister." Utilizing the blacks as divers, the "syndicate" collects a valuable cargo of black coral and sails for home. With the double idea of punishing the cannibals for their treachery and having some fun with Scraggs, who is not fond of a fight, Gibney and McGuffey arrange a fistic combat with the prisoners, Gibney to fight one and Scraggs the other. The five land on a desert island, and while they are engaged in the fistic fun the steamer sails, leaving the five marooned.

CHAPTER XIII.—When the ship arrives in Honolulu, Neils Halvorsen, former member of the Maggie's crew, suspects foul play and, seizing the vessel while the white crew is ashore, obtains a crew of natives and sets out to find the owners, guided only by information he obtains from the ship's log. He reaches the island just in time to save the lives of his old friends.

CHAPTER XIV.—In reward for his services, Neils Halvorsen is made a member of the "syndicate." At Honolulu the cargo is sold for a large sum and the owners of the Maggie II, fearing the Mexican government might cause trouble over the captured gunboat, present the vessel to the treacherous mate who had left them marooned on the island. In San Francisco the corporation plans the management of its wealth. Gibney purchases a derelict which turns out to be loaded with codfish, seemingly worthless, and resenting the bitter criticism of his associates for wasting their money, that gentleman resigns from the "syndicate." He and Halvorsen join hands and McGuffey and Scraggs, in partnership, purchase a small schooner, the Victor, planning to engage in coastwise trade. Gibney makes a contract with Scraggs to ship five hundred tons of "agricultural stuff" on the Victor. The "agricultural stuff" turns out to be the codfish, which by this time is an advanced stage of decay, and the shipment naturally would make the Victor worthless for passenger service, which the owners had planned. After natural acrimonious exchange of personalities, Mr. Gibney relents and releases the owners of the Victor from their contract. Scraggs, however, refuses to be pacified and withdraws from the "syndicate," announcing his intention of engaging in "chicken farming." With McGuffey and Halvorsen, Gibney purchases a power schooner and the three sail for the South seas, presumably to engage in occupations dear to their adventurous souls.

"I move you, members of the syndicate, that the schooner Maggie II proceed to some barren, uninhabited island, and that upon arrival there this savage king and his still more savage subject be taken ashore in a small boat. I also move you, gentlemen of the syndicate, that inasmuch as the two aggrieved parties, A. P. Gibney and P. Scraggs, having in a sperrit of mercy refrained from layin' their hands on said prisoners for fear of invalidin' them at a time when their services was of importance to the expedition, be given an opportunity to take out their grudge on the persons of said savages. Now, I notice that the king is a miserable, skimpy, sawed-off and hammered-down old cove. By all the rules of the prize ring he's in Scraggsy's class." (Here Mr. McGuffey flashed a lightning wink to the commodore. It was an appeal for Mr. Gibney's moral support in the engineer's scheme to put up a job on Captain Scraggs, and thus relieve the tedium of the homeward trip. Mr. Gibney instantly telegraphed his approbation, and McGuffey continued.)

"I notice also that if I was to hunt the universe over, I couldn't find a better match for Gib than Tabu-Tabu. And as we are all agreed that the white race is superior to any race on earth, and it'll do us all good to see a fine mill before we leave the country, I move you, gentlemen of the syndicate, that we pull off a finish fight between Scraggsy and the king, and Gib and Tabu-Tabu. I'll referee both contests and at the conclusion of the mixup we'll leave these two murderers marooned on the island and then—"

"Rats," snapped Captain Scraggs. "That ain't no business at all. You shouldn't consider nothin' short of capital punishment. Why, that's only a petty larceny form of—"

"Quit buttin' in on my prerogatives," roared McGuffey. "That ain't the finish by no means."

"What is the finish, then?"

"Why, these two cannibals, bein' left alone on the desert island, naturally bumps up agin the old question of the survival of the fittest. They get scrappin' among themselves, and one eats the other up."

"By the toe-nails of Moses," muttered Mr. Gibney in genuine admiration, "but you have got an imagination after all, Mac. The point is well taken and the program will go through as outlined. Scraggs, you'll fight the king. No buckin' and grumblin'. You'll fight the king. You're outvoted two to one, the thing's been done regular, and you can't kick. I'll fight Tabu-Tabu, so you see you're not gettin' any the worst of it. We'll proceed to an island in the Friendly group called Tuvana-tholo. It lies right in our homeward course, and there ain't enough grub on the confounded island to last two men a week. And I know there ain't no water there. So, now that that matter is all settled, we will proceed to heave the anchor and scoot for home. Mac, tune up your engines and we'll get out of here a-whoopin' and a-flyin'."

It was an eight-hundred-mile run up to Tuvana-tholo, but the weather held good and the trade-winds never slackened. Ten days from the date of leaving Kandavu they hove to off the island. It was a long, low, sandy atoll, with a few coconut-palms growing in the center of it, and with the exception of a vast colony of seabirds that apparently made it their headquarters, the island was devoid of life.

The bloodthirsty McGuffey stood at the break of the poop, and as he gazed shoreward he chuckled and rubbed his hands together.

"Great, great," he murmured. "I couldn't have gotten a better island if I'd had one built to order." He called aft to the navigating officer: "Scraggsy, there's the ring. Nothin' else to do now but get the contestants into it. Along in the late afternoon, when the heat of the day is over, we'll go ashore and pull off the fight. And, by George, Scraggs, if that old king succeeds in lambastin' you, I'll set the rascal free."

Seeing that there was no escape, Captain Scraggs decided to bluff the matter through. "Let's go ashore and have it over with," he said carelessly. "I'm a man of peace, but when there's fightin' to be done, I say go to it and no tomfoolery."

"Clear away the big whaleboat with two men to pull us ashore," said Mr. Gibney to the mate. Five minutes later the members of the syndicate, accompanied by the captives, climbed into the whaleboat and shoved off, leaving the Maggie II in charge of the mate. "We'll be back in half an hour," called the commodore, as they rowed away from the schooner. "Just ratch back and forth and keep heavin' the lead."

They negotiated the fringe of breakers to the north of the island successfully, pulled the boat up on the beach and proceeded at once to business. Mr. Gibney explained to Tabu-Tabu what was expected of him, and Tabu-Tabu in turn explained to the king. It was not the habit of white men, so Mr. Gibney explained, to kill their prisoners in cold blood, and he had decided to give them an opportunity to fight their way out of a sad predicament with their naked fists. If they won, they would be taken back aboard the schooner and later dropped at some inhabited island. If they lost, they must make their home for the future on Tuvana-tholo.

"Let 'er go," called McGuffey, and Mr. Gibney squared off and made a bearlike pass at Tabu-Tabu. To the amazement of all present Tabu-Tabu sprang lightly backward and avoided the blow. His footwork was excellent and McGuffey remarked as much to Captain Scraggs. But when Tabu-Tabu put up his hands after the most approved method of self-defense and dropped into a "crouch," McGuffey could no longer contain himself.

"The beggar can fight, the beggar can fight," he croaked, wild with joy. "Scraggs, old man, this'll be a rare mill, I promise you. He's been aboard a British man-o'-war and learned how to box. Steady, Gib. Upper-cut him, upper—wow!"

Tabu-Tabu had stepped in and planted a mighty right in the center of Mr. Gibney's physiognomy, following it up with a hard left to the commodore's ear. Mr. Gibney rocked a moment on his sturdy legs, stepped back out of range, dropped both hands, and stared at Tabu-Tabu.

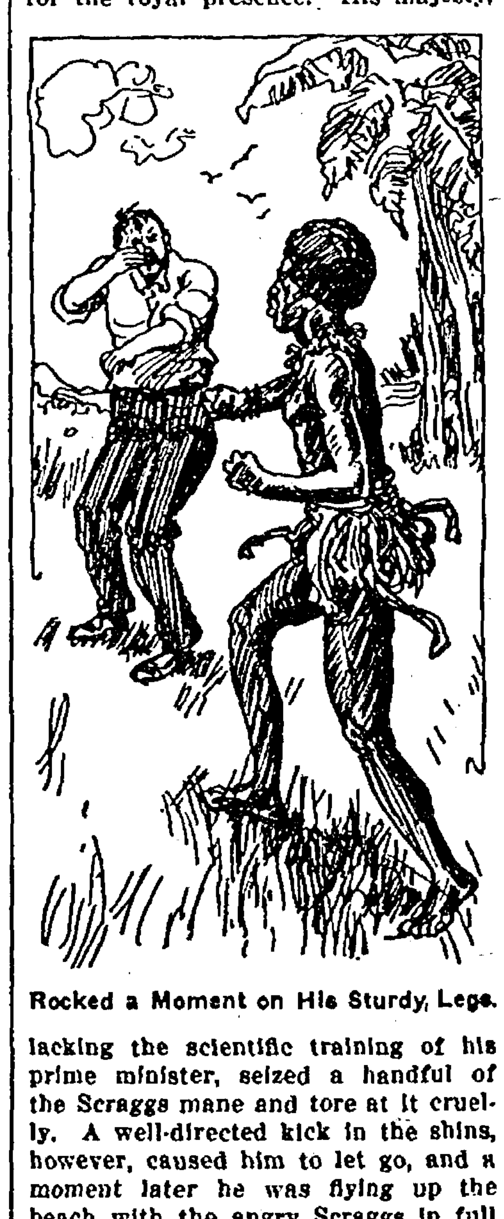
"I do believe the nigger'll lick you, Gib," said McGuffey anxiously. "He's got a horrible reach and a mule kick in each mit. Close with him, or he's due for a full pardon."

"In a minute," said the commodore faintly. "He's so good I hate to hurt him. But I'll infight him to a finish."

Which Mr. Gibney forthwith proceeded to do. He rushed his opponent and clinched, though not until his right eye was in mourning and a stiff jolt in the short ribs had caused him to grunt in most ignoble fashion. But few men could withstand Mr. Gibney once he got to close quarters. Tabu-Tabu wrapped his long arms around the commodore and endeavored to smother his blows, but Mr. Gibney would not be denied. His great fist shot upward from the hip and connected with the cannibal's chin. Tabu-Tabu relaxed his hold, Mr. Gibney followed with left and right to the head in quick succession, and McGuffey was counting the fatal ten over the fallen warrior.

Mr. Gibney grinned rather foolishly, spat, and spoke to McGuffey, soto voce: "By George, the joke ain't all on Scraggsy," he said. Then turning to Captain Scraggs: "Help yourself to the mustard, Scraggsy, old tarpot."

Captain Scraggs took off his hat, rolled up his sleeves, and made a dive for the royal presence. His majesty, lacking the scientific training of his prime minister, seized a handful of the Scraggs mane and tore at it cruelly. A well-directed kick in the shins, however, caused him to let go, and a moment later he was flying up the beach with the angry Scraggs in full cry after him. McGuffey headed the king off and rounded him up so Scraggs could get at him, and the latter at once "dug in" like a terrier. After five minutes of mauling and tearing Captain Scraggs was out of breath, so he let go and stood off a few feet to size up the situation. The wicked McGuffey was laughing immoderately, but to Scraggs it was no laughing matter. The fact of the matter was the king was dangerous and Scraggs had glutted himself with revenge.



Rocked a Moment on His Sturdy Legs.

"I don't want to beat an old man to death," he gasped finally. "I'll let the scoundrel go. He's had enough and he won't fight. Let's mosey along back to the schooner and leave them here to amuse themselves the best way they know how."

"Right-O," said Mr. Gibney, and turned to walk down the beach to the boat. A second later a hoarse scream of rage and terror broke from his lips.

"What's up?" cried McGuffey, the laughter dying out of his voice, for there was a hint of death in Mr. Gibney's cry.

Synopsis—Episode Six
"AT THE RISK OF HIS NECK"

Nancy Kellog's paper mill continues to prosper, but success is threatened when Marlow, allied with the Paper Trust, buys all timber tracts but one, upon which Nancy holds on option expiring at noon. She and Hutch, unaware that Marlow has sent Tigerly and Big Bill to detain them, set out. Tigerly opens the sluice gate of a dam, and Hutch and Nancy are in the rushing water. An overhanging tree saves them, but they are too late and the timber is sold to Marlow and the Trust.

In the lost formula for making paper from seaweed lies the only hope of salvation for Nancy's mill and for Harrison, the Harrison, the newspaper publisher, fighting the Paper Trust. He offers the use of his yacht to convey Bella and Nancy to the faraway coast where Brinkley is an exile from the law.

Ann learns of the trip and tells Marlaw who, after a futile effort to force from Bella the lace scarf and her father's location, succeeds in a plot to get Bella and Nancy on board his yacht, instead of the Harrison's.

After they have started, Hutch learns how the girls have been duped. He hurries to a bridge under which the yacht must pass and, from a lowered rope, plans to "board" the yacht by grabbing the mast. The boat approaches—he misses the first mast!

Barley For Sale—300 bushels, good for seed, at 60 cents a bushel.—Chris Sorenson. 162*

The meeting of the Good Fellowship club held last week Wednesday evening was very well attended, and was enjoyed by all present. Judge Fry gave an excellent address which was much enjoyed, etc., etc. All of which would have been O. K.—had there been a meeting. But there wasn't—and nobody, apparantly, seemed to know that there wasn't to be—the imagination can fill in. Some severe criticism was heard on account of nothing being said either in the local papers, by placards, or word of mouth, that the meeting had to be postponed. Such things leave an unpleasant taste, and it would seem that some sort of notification should be given when meetings are for any reason unavoidably postponed. The meeting scheduled was laid over a week on account of the inability of Judge Fry, who had been scheduled to speak, to get away from court.

Miss Lucy Ludtke is reported as being on the sick list this week.

OPERATION OF SUGAR FACTORY NOW ASSURED

Fire Wrecks Store of Adam Hollman

Early Morning Blaze Totally Destroys Store Building Of Local Merchant

FIREMEN DO FINE WORK

The grocery and dry goods store of Adam Hollman was completely wrecked early Monday morning by fire, the blaze starting around 3:00 o'clock in the morning.

Nothing is left of the building but the shell, the inside being a total wreck, especially on the first floor. Nightwatchman Holver Pierson saw the blaze on his rounds about the time named, and turned in the alarm The fire company tumbled out of bed and got into action in most remarkably short order, and to their splendid efforts can be given credit for saving the rest of the block to the west. The fireman cannot be praised too highly for the excellent work they performed in figthing this blaze, as nothing but their promptness and fighting spirit saved a many-thousand dollar loss.

Fire Starts In Basement

The fire appears to have originated in the basement, from what cause has not been determined. The first flames seemed to come from the rear of the basement, and rapidly spread thruout the whole structure. Entrance was made by the firemen, who had three lines of hose playing, and water was poured into the building from almost every angle. While Ned Packard and Rich Thompson were in the building with one hose, the second floor caved in, missing the two men by but a few inches. Thompson suffered a gash on one hand from falling glass.

Mrs. Hollman was awakened by the siren, and opened the back door of the second floor rooms, where the family live, to see where the fire was, and was met by a cloud of smoke. Mr. Hollman was out of town on business. Practically all the family's furniture was more or less damaged, while the first floor, containing the stock of goods, is just about a total loss.

Loss Covered By Insurance

The building and stock of goods were covered by insurance to the amount of $11,000. The Independent has not yet learned what the future plas of Mr. Hollman are regarding the business. The location is one of the best in Belmond, and will undoubtedly be rebuilt for business either by Mr. Hollmon, or some other party.

Belmond can congragulate itself on and be proud of the fire department. For a volunteer outfit it takes the gold medal, and no mistake. And the town has given an excellent example of the advisability of having a night watch. A few minutes more headway for the blaze, or a few minutes more in the fire company getting into action, and there would undoubtedly have been a five times heavier loss.

ROBINSON OF HAMPTON IS OUT FOR CONGRESS

Recorder: The people of Franklin county will learn with pleasure that T. J. B. Robinson of this city, is a republican candidate for congress at the coming primary election. Mr. Robinson has had the matter under consideration for some time. His decision has been influenced in no small degree by the spontaneous and hearty expressions of fellow citizens of Franklin county, coupled with many letters received during the past few weeks from people residing in the other counties of the district asking him to run on proffering their hearty support.

He is a life-long republican, but has never sought office with the exception of having been chosen state senator from this district and making a record that placed him among the leading progressive members of that body.

Mr. Robinson has been very active in business and civic affairs, has reached the age of 54 years, which places him in the full strength of manhood, and is splendidly equipped to take up the duties of congressman.

His canvass will be thorough and dignified and if he wins the nomination his election is sure to follow and the third district will have chosen a splendid man for their representive in congress. The Recorder most heartly recommends his nominatioin and will take great pleasure in according him loyal support. We shall have more to say regarding his candidacy as the campaign progresses.

The Independent likewise heartily endorses Mr. Robinson and pledges him the hearty support of this paper.

Frank Miller, from Fort Dodge was in town Monday transacting busiess matters with W. H. Wolle.

LOCAL SCHOOL NOTES

Last Friday night Belmond finished their season of Basket Ball. Our boys played a creditable game with the Hampton team, the winners being in doubt until the final whistle. Altho Belmond lost the game by one point, the game was fast and exciting from start to finish. It was a clean game and showed good team work from both teams. Belmond has been unfortunate in losing the last seven games. The season stands 11 victores and 9 defeats. However, the games our boys won were by wide margins on the score board, while the last seven games played no game was won by more than five points, while two were won by one point only What should there be in victory if your team plays fast, and clean basket ball? Only one team can win in any contest, and we should not be knockers when we lose by the score of 26 to 27 or by only one point.

The Basket Ball Team wishes to thank the followers of their games for their loyal support in every contest of the season. Their only hope is that they can give you better games next year. They will miss the work of William Vestweber and Teddy Johnson in their respective positions. However, they have left Madsen, Tyrrell, Parsons and Christie of the first team, with a world of good material in our second string. Vere Jenison, Winston Tingen and Samuel Leinbach should bid well to fill the shoes of Teddy Johnson at guard, while Tyrrell and Fred Vestweber show signs of developing into a good center.

Coach Gruetzmacher issued his call Monday night for all students who wish to try out for base ball to meet in Room 37 for the preliminary understanding.

The present outlook shows plenty of good material to put out a winning team this spring.

Games have been scheduled with Dows, Garner and Klemme, and letters written to Rowan, LuVerne, Renwick, Iowa Falls and Sheffield.

There will be no Community night in the gymnasium March 16th, on account of the North Central Teachers' meeting at Fort Dodge.

Charles Kral has left the fourth grade to go to the country.

Marjorie Tomson has entered the fourth grade on trial.

The following people visited in the grades the past week: Mrs. G. F. Elder, Mrs. S. S. Packard, Miss Henrietta Pals, Mrs. H. H. Gowdy, Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Fitts and Mrs. Harberts.

BELMOND LOSES TWO GAMES BY ONE POINT

Play Hampton Teams Two Of Stiffest Games Ever Seen On Local Floor

For a genuine hair-raising,, nerve-racking exhibition, the two basket ball games staged in the school gymnasium last Friday night were the limit. Two of the finest, fastest, and most interesting games that have been played in Belmond were given, and those present certainly got the worth of their money.

Both games were lost by one point and while Belmond lost both games, it was simply on the turn of luck, and by but one lone, solitary point in both affairs. The girl's game was fast from the start, with no advantage on either side that was noticeable. The score sawed back and forth from one side to the other, and at the end of the last half the score was even. The referee stated five more minutes would be played, the leader at the end of that time to be declared the winner. This is the rule for boy's games, not girls,, but was allowed to slip by. According to the girl's rules the first two points in extra periods wins, but under the agreemnt the Hampton girls managed one point at the end, and took the game.

The boys game was a whirlwind from beginning to end. Hampton took the lead early in the game and the first half closed with the visitors in the lead, 14 to 10. Belmond seemed slow in getting started. But in the second half they started to play the Hampton bunch off their feet, and the audience was kept in a constant state of anxiety. Belmond made three field baskets in as many minutes and Hampton began to get uneasy. From that on the score was passed from one to the other, until the last three minutes of play, when Belmond tied. Hampton made two more points in the last couple of minutes, and in the last minute or two Hampton tied. A break of luck gave the visitors a free throw in the last minute, which they made, winning by the one point.

It was a humdinger of a game, with the fastest playing seen here yet, and while Belmond lost, they need not feel sorry over it, for it was simply up to Lady Luck in the end. The Hampton players are a fine lot of young men and women and played a clean game.

Judge Fry Addresses Good Fellowship Club

One Of The Best Ever Was Meeting Held Last Wednesday Evening

NEXT MEETING THE 22ND

By far one of the best yet, was the Good Fellowship meeting held last Wednesday evening in the library basement. Judge Fry, of the district court, was the speaker of the evening, with his topic the Federal Reserve Banking system. To say that the judge covered his subject thoroly only half states the matter. His address was among the most interesting Good Fellowship club members have ever had the pleasure of hearing, and was timely to every business man in the country. The Judge explained the Federal Reserve Banking system in a manner that made every detail plain, and illustrated the working of the system in a thoro manner. He cleared up, to his audience, things which they run across every day, but which they heretofor never understood. The system as Judge Fry described it, is one of the best things that the country has every had, and one which contains more power than has ever been given to any one bureau or department before in American history.

A selection by the quartette was the opening feature of the program. A solo by Bert Nelson followed a brief business session. After the address by Judge Fry, the members were favored by two good readings by Miss Shattock, head of the public speaking department at Ames. Miss Shattock, who gave a program at the school that evening, was secured thru the efforts of Prof. Fyler, and certainly entertained the crowd with her selections.

The usuaul good eats were enjoyey, and a social hour spent. Around 125 men were present, and the meeting in all ways, was among the best ever held.

The next meeting is planned for the 22nd of March, at which time Wilbur H. Bender, of Des Moines, a candidate for State Supt. of schools will be here. His address will not be in any way a political one, his subject being "Education For A Republican Democracy." Plan to be at the meeting, enjoy the program, hear an excellent address and partake of the "feed." If you aren't a Good Fellow, better become one.

I. O. O. F. MOVING PICTURES MONDAY

Next week Monday night the Belmond lodge of the I. O. O. F., No. 265, will give a free moving picture at the Lyric theatre. The pictures some eight views, are from the Odd Fellow's Home at Mason City, and are highly interesting of the work being done by this organization. In addition to the pictures, A. W. Stubbs of the organization will deliver an address on the home. Belmond people have often heard of the home; some have seen it; and these pictures will be of interest to many. No charge is made for the entertainment, and everybody is invited to attend. Mark Monday, March 20, on your calendar and be present. The entertainment is uder the auspices of the local lodge.

Announcement For Clerk

I hereby announce my candidacy for the office of clerk of the district court of Wright county, subject to the will of the republican voters at the primaries to be held June 5, 1922.

Politics Likely To Be Mighty Hot Affair

Caucus Ticket Is To Be Opposed By Ticket Filed By Petition

WARM FIGHT IN PROSPECT

Politics, which cooled off somewhat immediately after the recent caucus, has begun to warm up, and the indications point to a hot time in the old town the 27th. A real old-time hot scrap is in prospect, with no quarter asked or given. The ticket placed in nomination at the caucus is to be opposed by another ticket filed by petition.

The Lineup For Battle

The citizens' caucus ticket nominated was as follows:

For Mayor—R. C. Morse.

For Councilmen—M. D. Sullivan, A. W. Russel, John Dorenkamp, C. J. Papousek, L. F. Simerson.

The ticket filed by petition is:

For Mayor—L. O. Skovlin.

For Councilmen—Ole Thompson, C. C. Griesy, John Greenlander, H. L. Gowdy, Chas. Sampson.

Variety is the spice of life, and the voters of the incorporated town of Belmond should be able to choose a pretty good from the two tickets. Prospets are for the heaviest vote ever cast in a municipal election in Belmond, especially as the ladies will have a say this year. And the feminine vote is the great big question mark that will probably decide the issue. Politically speaking, as has been said before, it looks like a warm spring.

PLEASANT TOWNSHIP

The Annual Township Meeting was held in the Central School last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Dorenkamp and family were visitors at the H. B. Dorenkamp home one day last week. Mrs. Charles Barkema and children were Saturday visitors at the parental home.

We are sorry to say that Mr. Sol Mennenga, who has taken treatments at Iowa City is not recovering as well as was expected.

Bertha Gartz, who has been attending the I. S. T. C. the past winter, returned home last Wednesday. She is now engaged in teaching school District No. 4, Wisner Twp., in Franklin County.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

There was just a little increase last Sunday over the week before, but twenty-eight more than were present a year ago. Let us keep the good work going. We hope to see many of the members of the Sabbath school come into full membership of the church on Easter Sunday. The choir is working hard on the cantata for Easter night and this service we know will be the climax of a glorious day.

A great many families are co-operating in the fellowship of prayer during the Lenten season. The gospel of Luke is a fine study to prepare us for the Easter Service.

Come to the Bible Study Thursday night at 7:30. We will begin with the fifth chapter of Luke and go through to the eighth.

Quite a number were kept away from the services last Sunday on account of sickness. We hope that all will be able to be in their accustomed places next Sunday.

Sabbath School at 10:00 a. m. Morning services at 11:00 and the evening young peoples and preaching services begin at 7:30.

DISTRICT COURT ITEMS

News: District court continues to grind away. The most important suit of the week was decided against the Great Western when the Bailey Co., of Belmond, won its suit against the railroad for damages alleged to have resulted from the failure of the road to deliver cars to the gravel pit at Belmond which the Baileys were operating. The company had a contract to furnish so many cars of gravel, and the road had agreed to deliver the cars to the pit, so many a day. They were not delivered and the Baileys asked around $3,000 damages. The jury awarded them $2,050. The costs added to this sum will amount to considerable more.

The county was winner in the suit brought against it by Lockerse Bros. who had done some drainage ditch work. Their sureties, the Lion Bonding Co., later went broke and Lokerse Bros. sued on a note given in payment for their part of the work, making the county a principal to the suit. The court held that inasmuch as the construction company failed to complete the contract, they were not obligated to pay Lockerse Bros., as the county had already paid out the mony due on original contract in order to complete the job. Lockerse Bros., therefore, will have to seek recourse from the contracting firm.

The Rossman habeas corpus case in which the father is asking for possession of the little girl, on the ground the mother is not a fit person to have the care and custody was continued until the April term of court.

Barbara Lance, who about two years ago broke into the store at Olaf, and was given a suspended sentence, was arraigned in court and given a five year sentence to the reformatory at Rockwell City. She had stolen some personal property at Mason City and her guardian asked her committment.

AGNES ENGER

Miss Agnes Enger died at Colorado Springs, Colorado, last Friday night, death being caused by tuberculosis.. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Enger, the family having made their home at Colorado Springs the past year or two in hopes that Miss Agnes would be benefited. The body was brought to Belmond Tuesday of this week, for burial, funeral services being held in the Trinity church Wednesday afternoon. The family have the sympathy of the community in their loss.

ORPHAN ORCHESTRA TO GIVE CONCERT HERE

Splendid Musical Organization To Give Concert Here On Easter Sunday

The Orpheus Orchestra of Luther college and seminary, of St. Paul, Minnesota, will make their appearance in Belmond on Easter Sunday night. The orchestra comes to us highly recommended as a college orchestra. For a number of years it has made annual tours, and has been very successful in the undertaking. As time has passed they have greatly increased their ability to handle the various instruments. Only the best material has been selected for this organization and after much time and patience and pains they have succeeded in building up an an orchestra which is well deserving of its name. The past record is sufficient evidence of their ability. It has been the experience of the past that wherever they have given a concert that those who heard them expressed a desire that they might be favored again on the next annual tour. Several times this desire was satisfied as in case with all ambitious young men, they sought new territory. The tours in Minnesota and Wisconsin have been very successful in the past. Therefore we may rest assured that we will not be disappointed. This occasion promises to be a good treat to all lovers of music.

SECOND ANNUAL RAT-KILLING CONTEST MAR. 17 TO APR. 7

The Second Annual Rat Killing Contest in the State of Iowa will be held March 17 to April 7, accordig to announcements received the first of the week. The Des Moines Register is offering $200 in prizes for the champion killers in the state, and many county farm bureaus, commerical clubs, community clubs and business concerns are offering local prizes.

Destroy Millions in Grain.

It is estimated that rats destroy $60,000,000 of grain in Iowa every year, besides $40,000,000 worth of poultry. Medical authorities state that the rodents have been the cause of many deaths by spreading diseases, such as scarlet fever, influenza, and the like. Many fires are laid to rats, and the loss in many other ways runs into gigantic figures.

Active Plans Under Way For Operation

Plant To Be Operated By Iowa Valley Operating Company This Year

ACREAGE IS SOLICITED

Belmond people are rejoicing over the assured operation of the sugar factory this year,, which fact was announced last Thursday. After almost innumerable obstacles were surmounted and a hundred different perplexing problems solved, operation of the factory was finally assured.

Creditors' Committee Agrees

The final problem to be solved was that of the objection placed by the chairman of the Creditors' Committee. The officials of the company were able to bring their viewpoint fairly before the chairman, who finally agreed with the balance of the committee and gave his consent to the plan. Immediately work was started toward operation.

Beet Contracts Being Placed Now

Fieldmen were placed in the various districts at once, and the fairest beet contract ever offered in this locaiy is being placed before the farmers. Around ten or a dozen fieldmen are on the job, and acreage is being signed, and has been in process of signing, for the past week or so. Good success is reported.

The factory will be operated this year by the Iowa Valley Operating Company, which is simply those who signed up for the campaign subscription. The factory is leased from the sugar company, as the Independent understands it for one dollar, and a half of the profits of the campaign. The most rigid economy is to be practiced in operating, and with anywhere near a normal year the Belmod factory cannot help but return a profit.

Funds Practically Assured

Funds for operating are practically assured now. While there are various details to be worked out, the officials are busy on them and the near future will see the year's compaign definitely mapped out. Operation of the factory means a great deal to every citizen in the community, and the boosting spirit of the town in putting up its money and moral support has played a large part in the successful conclusion of the plans. A successful year undoubtedly means many more, and very probably the salvation of the company.

Meanwhile, Belmond is on the job and will do all in its power to assist in making this year a successful one for the factory.

MUNICIPAL PLANT FOR MANUFACTURE OF HOOTCH

Last week a trasportation of lines in the local news of the Champion caused considerable comment. In mentioning the fact that other towns were having trouble with the electric service furnished by highlines, we wound up by saying that "Whittemore has a municipal plant." Another item told of bootleggers being found in a neighboring town and the line reading as above was attached to the end of that, making it appear as though Whittemore had a municipal booze plant. Some were mad because we had not informed of this fact sooner and some intimated that they knew it all the time. It is certainly hard to please everyone.—Whittemore Champion.

A CORRECTION

We have frenquently mentioned J. C. Janssen as a farmer near Meservey. We are informed that Mr. Janssen has not lived on the farm for about ten years. Possibly we got the wrong impression from his school article where-in he called to his brother farmers for help.

Mrs. A. Kessler, of Iowa City, grandmother of Mrs. M. C. Barry died Tuesday of this week. Mr. and Mrs. Barry left Tuesday for that place to attend the funeral.

Mrs. Wm. Harbison, who has been at Rochester the past month where she underwent two operations, is getting along very nicely and is expected to be home the latter part of this week.

Geo. Brady moved his barber shop and pool hall the first of the week from the H. N. Hill building to the Aug. Foss building, formerly the Home Hotel, where he is now nicely located.

P. M. Gresemer, of Klemme, and Mr. Byers, for Garner, were in town the first of the week, transacting some business matters with W. H. Wolle.

WANDERING HOG WAS "STEWED" ON MASH

A wandering hog from West Bend that had strayed from its owner's home (this was a real four-legged hog) got into the back yard of a man who was clandestinely conducting a still, and filled itself with mash that was just ready for the still. When the hog got home, which was in the small hours of the morning, it had a beautiful jag, from which it had not yet recovered. It owner is afraid to sell it, and he don't want to keep it, so there is trouble all around.

REFUSES TO PAY DEBT

San Jose, Cal., Mar. 9.—On paper Henry B. Staurt is unquestionably the richest man in the world. Twenty-five years ago he loaned George Jones $100 at ten per cent interest per month compounded. Jones went to Kansas, prospered, returned here recently and went into business. Stuart entered suit for the $100. Jones recalled the loan and confessed judgment.

Superior Judge Welsh started to figure the amount, called an accountant, who after two hours' work announced Jones owed Staurt $304,840,332,912,685.16. The judgement was duly entered.

"I wouldn't pay it," said Jones.—Chronicle.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

BELMOND'S FACTORY LUCKY

That the Iowa Valley Sugar Co. was lucky in not operating their factory here during the season of 1921 is illustrated very aptly by a report of one of the leading beet sugar companies in California, The Union Sugar company. This company operated in the year named, and their balance sheet on the 31st of December shows a net loss of $473,793.

The company entered the year 1922 with a carryover stock of sugar and molasses valued on the balance sheet at $846,825, but this stock has been materially reduced since then. Four hundred and seventy-three thousand dollars is some loss for any factory, and while the Belmond factory, had it operated, would not have lost anywhere near this sum, it would have lost, and that is the main point. It was lucky for the stockholders that the factory did not operate, for nothing but loss could have occured.

That the loss in operation was due to conditions over which those in charge had no control, was the opinions of the stockholders, and they backed their opinions up by re-electing all officers of the company, including the directors.

The president of the company, in discussing the 1922 outlook, was optimistic, and viewed the coming year with favor.

All this may be very approriately applied to conditions in the Iowa Valley Sugar Co.'s factory and campaign. Conditions in their year of operation were abnormal, and that a loss was sustained was not due to negligence or inability of the officers in charge. The men at its' head were capable, hardheaded sugar men who knew the business, and the company was fortunate in having them. The 1922 prospects are bright, very bright, and with half a chance the factory will return a profit. A successful year means a continuation of operation, and it is to be hoped that every effort will be forthcoming to make it so, on only on the part of the officials of the company, but the public generally as well. Petty jealousies and ambitions never get anything very far, and old man Gloom never yet brought happiness o rprosperity. If you can't boost, keep your mouth shut; you look better, if nothing else.

Government Officials Figure by End of Year o Million Apparatus Will be i nDaily Use

THE GROWTH IS REMARKABLE

Before the year is over there will be installed throughout the United States a minimum of 1,000,000 receiving apparatus to pick up the "chatter" that is being broadcasted daily through the air by radio, so government officials estimate.

No license and no record is required of receiving stations and there is no way of knowing just how many there are today, but where there were only about 25,000 a year ago, it is believed there are at least 200,000 now and of that number fully half have broken into the radio game in the past thirty days.

Washington has never witnessed anything like the way the wireless telephone has caught the imagination of the American people. All such matters here come under D. B. Carson. commissioner of navigation in the department of commerce, who is literally deluged with applications for licenses for sending stations, especially the big broadcasting plants. His bureau is swamped.

The big growth has come within the yast thirty days since the few successful demonstrations on a large scale of the wireless telephone.

Judges in Franklin County

Our local county agent spent Saturday in Franklin county judging the grain at the grain and poultry show which was held at Latimer, a small town near Hampton.

Judging from the exhibits in the various departments of the farm products it would seem that the farmers in Franklin are very much interested in growing corn of better quality because the greater part of the day was spend in judging the corn exhibits.

Shipping Association Meetings

Under the leadership of Knute Espe, secretary Iowa Cooperative Livestock Shippers, four meetings were held in Wright county last week for the purpose of discussing all problems connected with the shipping of livestock products.

Steps were taken in these meetings to incorporate these shipping associations under the state law and an effort was made in each case to sign the shipping association on the producer's contract. The shipping ass.sociations of Wright county have shown a wonderful growth in the past year and judging from the interest shown in the meetings of last week the livestock shipping association is an institution which has come to stay, simply because it has been rendering the farmer a service which has been long needed.

To Guide Agricultural Bloc

Last week the agricultural bloc of the senate met and elected Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas as chairman to take the place of Senator Wm. Kenyon of Iowa, who resigned from the senate to accept a federal judgeship. Senator Kenyon in formally resigning from the chairman of the bloc stated that it had been a source of more pleasure to him than any other activity in which he had been engaged since he entered the senate. He said:

"Many months ago Gray Silver of the American Farm Bureau Federation and I talked over the matter of agricultural legislation and the need for organizing to obtain it. As a result there was called a meeting down town (in the American Farm Bureau Federation's office) last spring for the purpose of discussing agricultural legislation and deciding upon ways and means of promoting it. The agricultural bloc has been maligned and lied about more than any other group in congress and I have enjoyed the whole proceeding. The idea has been sold to the public and is very favorably received at least in the west and south. It is gaining strength every day and we have, been able to be of much help to the country in the passage of a number of agricultlral bills."

R. E. ECKHOFF KILLED BY TRAIN

Great Western Motor Hits Aged Citizen Killing Him Instantly

Meservey has had another sad accident, Mr. R. E. Eckhoff well known retired farmer of Meservey was struck by the C. G. W. train last Friday morning while walking on the track and killed instantly. Mr Eckhoff who is some where near the age of 68 years was very hard of hearing and visited at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Koenen about three-fourths of a mile west of town and was returning home about 11 a. m., when the steam train ,which was taking place of the motor struck him about 80 rods west of town, both of his legs were broken just above the ankle and he was thrown clear off the track down a steep bank and this last fall is thought to have broken his neck. A doctor who happened to be a passenger stated that death was instantaneous. It is thought that Mr. Eckhoff was under the impression that the 10 o'clock train had passed but the motor broke down and the steam train was substituted. No one is held at fault for this accident.

REINT EARNEST ECKHOFF

Friday March 10, the news of the sad and untimely death of R. E. Eckhoff, at Meservey, came with shocking suddenness to the large circle of friends and relatives in this commuity.

In the morning he left his home to call on his daughter, Mrs. John Koenen, not knowing he would never enter it again alive.

Mr. Eckhoff, who was deaf, was walking down the middle of the C. G. tracks, being on his way home from his daughter, failed to hear an incoming passenger train, was struck down by the engine, resultig in instant death and his lifeless form was carried to the Klemme Undertaking rooms.

O the tragedy of such an accident! Who can imagine the sadness, the heart anguish of this painful moment of those who had stood nearest to him in life, who would never again look into the face of him they loved so dearly.

On Monday the funeral services took place first in the home, and then in the Reformed church of which he was an active and faithful member. The Rev. H. Pannkuk pastor of the church had charge of the funeral services. The large numbers who had gathered long before the the services began filling the auditorium to overflowing, is a beautiful testimony of their esteem and love for him who had gone to his enternal rest.

R. E. Eckhoff was a man of good parts, he possessed a cheerful disposition, was always hopeful, kind and friendly to all he would meet.

He was born on the first day of April 1853 at Bunderhameirich Ostfr., Germany and died the 10th of March 1922 at the age of 68 years, 11 months and 9 days.

On the 8th of October 1882 he was married to Touke Meyer. The union was blessed with 8 children, namely, Mrs. Joe Suntken, Alexander, Iowa; Mrs. Ben Boelman of Meservey Iowa; Mrs. Reint Kasjens of Bradford, Iowa; Mrs. John Koenen of Meservey. Mr. George Eckhoff, Mr. Earnest Eckhoff, Mr. Simon Eckhoff and Mr. Carl Eckhoff all of Meservey, Iowa.

His sad and untimely death is mourned by his wife, the above named children, 26 grandchildren, 4 half sisters, besides other relatives and a host of friends.

His body was laid to rest in the Meservey cemetery to await the resurrection at the last day.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish tto thank the kind friends and neighbors and also the American Legion who assisted us so gennerously and kindly in our late bereavement and also for the beautiful floral offerings.

Mrs R. E. Eckhoff and children.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiko Mennenga; of Belmond were here Monday attending the funeral services of R. Eckhoff.

THAT TAXI SERVICE IS GOING GREAT

Humboldt Republican: That yellow taxi service from Emmetsburg, south to Fort Dodge a nd back the same day is going great in this section of the state. The "bus" starts from Emmetsburg at about 6:30 P. M., and comes down through Mallard, Pocahontas, Gilmore City and Humboldt, passing through here about ten o'clock in the forenoon. It is supposed to arrive at Fort Dodge at eleven. It starts on its return trip at about four o'clock, and passes through Humboldt about five, hiking right along to Emmetsburg where it is supposed to arrive about eight o'clock.

It goes through Humboldt with a snort, and the driver seems to like to make all the noise possible as he hikes along.

It gives transportation between Humboldt and Gilmore and Pocahontas, which has been badly needed for many years. In fact, the dream of transportation between these points east and west through this section is at last realized. A man can now come from Pocahontas or Cilmore to Humboldt and get back the same day. There will be lots of travel on this road when the fact of its running becomes known to the people.

In the mean time we suggest that the company behind the enterprise advertise the trips and thus increase their patronage. At this time the only schedule that we know of is tacked up in the pool hall.

THE FARMER'S WIFE

To Detect Poisoning in Food Substances—"How can I detect canned goods, both meats and vegetables, which are likely to cause ptomaine poisoning," writes one reader. "It is necessary for me to keep large supplies of canned goods on hand and rather than serve my family suspicious food I have for my motto 'When in doubt throw away.' "

The only safe way to detect such poisoning is to send a sample of foods you suspect to your State college bacteriology laboratory for examination by expert bacteriologists. Food which is likely to cause poisoning is very often not noticeably altered in appearance, odor or taste. It pays to play safe in this matter.

Sour Cream Cookies—1 c. sugar, ½ c. butter, 2 eggs, 1 c. thick sour cream, grated rind of 1 lemon, 1 t. lemon extract, ½ t .salt, 3 c. flour, 1 t. soda and 2 t. baking powder. The less flour used for these cookies the more moist and tender they will be.

Discarded razor blades should be kept in the sewing basket. They come in handy for ripping garments and for cutting threads. There is less chance of tearing the material when ripping is done with razor blades instead of scisssors.

WRIGHT COUNTY TELEPHONES PROPOSES TO MAKE SALE

Humboldt Republican: Over in Wright county where they are having a jangle over the telephone rates, the telephone people are proposing to sell to the farmers and allow them to run the phones to suit themselves.

The company claims that there is no profit in the phones as they are now operated, and that there will be an actual loss if the rates the farmers seem to think are right, are put in force. Therefore the telephone people are desirous of selling to the farmers, and let them run their own phones.

It is believed by the telephone people that the farmers could perhaps manage the lines less expensively than they do.

Not to give advice, but to state what we do believe is a well-known fact: The people who are acquainted with an enterprise and who have had long experience in it, can operate it better and cheaper than any one who is new to the business. Of course if the experienced man is a crook this would not hold good. But the Wright county farmers had better "lay off" that telephone proposition.

Mrs. E. Edens left Monday for Rochester. Minn., for a visit with her husband who is still at the hospital taking treatments.

BOLD ATTEMPT AT JAIL DELIVERY AT EMMETSBURG

One day the last of the week some unknown parties secreted themselves at the foot of the southeast cellar windows of the old jail room beneath the county treasurer's office and, by using hooked wires, which they pushed through the bars on the inside, succeeded in pulling close to them jugs of hootch which the officers found some time ago in the possession of A. G. Frey. Small flat cans were shoved in between the bars and the jugs tipped to one side. In this way the cans were repeatedly filled and the contents of the jug conveyed to the outside and emptied into another vessel. The lovers of the beverage that exhilerates were getting along swimmingly well until one of them decided he would put his mouth between the bars and get a good drink fresh from the jug. The vessel and the hootch was soon scattered all over the floor of the jail. The hootch sippers then became alarmed and fled. The smell of the liquor, which was of good quality, soon reached the county treasurer's office. People who stepped in to pay their taxes asked Mr. Smith if he were "setting 'em up" to all to make settlements. They were reluctant to credit his statements when he replied that he did not have full supply of corn juice in his desk or in his vault. The brain subduing odor soon reached the court room where Judge Lee was trying a case. His honor became alarmed fearing the the anti-prohibitionsists had taken possession of the halls of justice and he hurriedly ordered an examination. We need not say that he was pleased to learn that the other jugs in the old jail had not been touched. The candidates for honors in the June primaries declare that they did not plan the attempted delivery of the prisoners and the outgoing officials are equally as earnest in their professions of innocence. Here is an opportunity for some federal inspector to make a reputation for himself by hunting down the criminal thirsty. —Emmetsburg Democrat.

HE WAS FAR FROM BROKE

Chronicle: John B. Bates ought to be at the head of some big advertising agency. He has the right idea. To make advertising pay one must have the goods to back up his advertising. John has the goods, and he proved it to a large crowd of people who saw him walk across the street last Friday morning with an armful of currency that would make an ordinary sized weight of the load.

Someone in Hampton recently circulated the story the "John Bates had gone broke." John heard of it away up in Minneapolis. He just drew about $100,000 out of his bank account there, placed the currency in his grip and started for Hampton, accompanied by his son, Guy Bates. Upon his arrival here he registered at the Hotel Franklin, and presently he stepped aside at the clerk's desk and opened his grip. When Hank Weeks saw him loading up his arms with the long green he just went dumb—dropped the cigar out of his mouth and could hardly catch his breath. He came to as John was leaving the lobby of the hotel with his load of money. People along the street stood in amazement as Mr. Bates passed them on the walk. They had not thought of knocking John down until after he had gone into the bank. However, Mr. Bates' son was following in the rear with a couple of modern sawed offs in his side pocket, and was ready for any emergency.

It pays to advertise.

ARREST TWO AS CHECK ARTISTS

Eagle Grove Times: Two men giving their names as Jack Putrits and John Eutrey, of Mallard and Havelock respectively, were taken into custody here on Monday evening. They were taken from the Northwestern passenger train and placed under arrest by Officer Cline.

The two men were placed in jail here at the request of the authorities at Havelock, charged with forging checks on several parties in Mallard and Havelock. They were held here until Wednesday when they were turned over to the sheriff from Emmetsburg who returned with them to the county seat, where a charge of forgery will be lodged against them.

JOHN BARLEYCORN STILL FIGHTING

Now comes another prohibition industry.

It is already fattening on citizens throughout the state, according to a warning issued by the Iowa Anti-Saloon League.

The industry collects "dues" from citizens who were formerly of wet tendencies, under the cloak of agrition to bring back wines and beer as a preliminary step to open the way for whiskey and other intoxicants. The league's warning declares that several men working in Iowa have already made huge sums from such collections. League officials say that they have letters on file now, showing where one organizer in one of Iowa's counties collected 3,000 "membership" at $1 each, retaining 50c out of each dollar for himself and sending the other 50 cents to the "headquarters" of the organization in another part of the state.

"We know for a certainty that the state is to be invaded this spring by a host of these due-collectors," Supt. R. N. Holsaple of the anti-saloon league said. "Our investigators have been watching the scheme for some time and it is such a good money maker that there are now more than thirty-six such 'organizations' at work in the country at the present time."

One of the league investigators, working under the guise of a traveling man, received an offer of 50 cents on the dollar for every "membership" obtained and was assured of a "virgin field" and easy work, according to Holsaple's statement.

If they keep on these people will have a larger income than the saloons used to have, is Holsaple's prediction.

Roads about the country are getting pretty fair for traveling. Altho somewhat spongy in spots, with an occasional mud hole, they are rapidly drying up and rounding into shape for the numerous 'Lizzies' which their respective owners are getting anxious to excercise.

Dr. Brown, of Belmond was here on business matters Monday.

MUCH CORN BEING USED

If the farmers continue to dispose of their corn as rapidly as present the entire reserve now on hand in this country will be consumed before the 1922 crop is ready for marketing, according to a digest of official government crop surveys issued by Col. Leon W. Ainsworth.

Contrary to the talk about "over production," the present farm holdings of grains are the smallest that they have been in years, Ainsworth's report declares, Surplus corn states show 218,000,000 bushels less than last year and with anything like regular feeding in the corn belt, Iowa and these other states will have very little corn to carry over to the new crop. Corn has disappeared faster this winter than in any previous year recorded, Ainsworth says. About 300,000,0000 bushels have been marketed within the last four months, according to official government summaries.

Here are the official figures:

On March 1 there were 1,899,668,000 of wheat, corn, oats and barley on farms in the United States.

This is 641,189,000 bushels less than at this time last year.

Corn showed 1,313,000,000 bushels, a disappearance of 251,000,000.

Wheat reserves on the farm are 131,138,000, which is 86,000,000 less than last year.

There are 404,461,000 bushels of oats March 1, a loss of 280,000,000 in reserve.

Col. Ainsworth says that in actual volume the domestic commercial disappearance of corn this year to date exceeds that of the last two years by 30 per cent or more while we have exported double the amount of corn and the export clearances increase daily.

ACKLEY IS TO HAVE BASE BALL

World Journal: Fifty or more of the enthusiastic pushers and boosters for base ball in Ackley this coming season, assembled in accordance with the call of a week ago, Tuesday evening, and enthusiastically favored base ball.

It's a sure go; the same as in past seasons, only this season the prospects are even better than for several seasons past, for even a more powerful organization. Several of the enthusiastic sports made what might be termed their "maiden speech" that evening, and they were received with rounds of applause because of the good will and fervor with which they were presented.

Principally the evening's business consisted of perfecting an organization.

"That's an elert office boy you have."

As a rule Meservey can gain as much notoriety as any of our neighboring towns when it comes to a school or city election. In our school election last Monday H. K. Pals was elected director by a small vote and received all but one vote which was cast for a mule driver.

Special efforts have been made to have but one ticket in the field for the city election and from present indications Meservey will not again dig up past histories of its candidates.

Our school election was a quiet affair as far as the election was concerned—but the report was circulated on that day that a still was in operation at the school house which for a time caused quite a little excitement until it was found that there was no mash connected with the affair, but that it was only a bottle with a tube connected to the neck and was used to distill water in the labaratory.

Miss Eva Whetstone's condition does not improve as rapidly as her friends would like to see. She was unable to attend to her duties as Principal last week and reports from her bedside indicate that she will not be at school this week. She is suffering from an attack of flu.

The annual March moving has caused a decrease in our enrollment. The Bergman children are the latest ones dropped from the roll. Their parents moved to Belmond.

Our movie program for Tuesday March 21 will consist of the following reels: "Careless America" showing causes of many avoidable accidents; "Chu Chu" or the chewing gum industry and the usual type of comedy.

Rev. Wilkinson of Belmond gave a very interesting talk to our movie crowd last Tuesday evening. His subject was "Burbank and What He is Accomplishing in the Plant World." His remarks were right to the point well received and threw in many interesting side-lights on this great man and the wonders which he is preforming in the plant world.

EAGLE GROVE MAN IS GRAIN GROWERS DELEGATE

F. H. Allen of Eagle Grove, Iowa was elected a national delegate to the first annual convention of the U. S. Grain Growers, Inc. last week, when the representatives of U. S. Grain Grower membership from each shipping station in the 3rd congressional district met at Hampton, Mr. Allen will carry the combined votes of 240 members in this district to the convention held in Chicago, beginning March 21, and represent them in the determination of importat policies and the election of a national board of 21 farmer directors for the ensuing year.

Frank M. Myers, Secretary of the U. S. Grain Growers, Inc, of Fort Dodge and Adam L. Middleton of Eagle Grove, are on the U. S. Grain Growers board of directors this year. J. E. Wooters has been in active charge of the organization work in this state which has resulted in signing more than 4896 grower members and 135 elevators and local Grain Growers' associations to date. Nationally, the U. S. Grain Growers now has 50,000 members and 1050 contracts with facilities at shipping points. The organization is growing at the average rate of 2000 members and 20 elevators affiliations weekly. More than 110,000,000 bushels of grain are under contract through the national selling agency for five years. Hence the national delegates who will select the men to conduct this enormous and constantly growing association have a great responsibility.

Mr. Allen's Election as a national delegate of this organization is the highest honor that the grain growers of his district can confer upon him. It is a token of their confidence and respect for his business judgement. The 47 national delegates elected in the eleven states where organization work of the U. S. Grain Growers, Inc. has been carried on, will serve for one year. They have full power to act in any special national convention that may be called in addition to the regular annual meeting. The national delegates constitute the supreme tribunal and governing body of this farmers' organization. This method of governing the association was chosen so the membership would have direct control.

LEVY TAX TO SUPPORT BAND

Times: We notice in one of our exchanges that at Terril, Iowa a petition has been circulated around to bring the question of levying a two mill tax for band support before the voters. The last state legislature passed a law permitting a town to levy such a tax when approved by the taxpayers, which question can be brought up on a ballot at an election. Many towns have taken advantage of the two mills in the ordinary small town like Klemme will bring in from perhaps $200 to $300 per year for the support of a band, which is a very norminal sum for that purpose.

It is a good law for it takes the burden of the support of the band from the shoulders of a few public spirited business men and shifts it over the town so that all have a hand in giving a small sum toward the support of a band.

A community which wants a band ought to support one and general taxation is the only fair and honest way to do it. If the people of Klemme decide to support the band this right way they can vote a two mill tax for the purpose as they are doing in other towns.

Klemme ought to have a band this year and now is the time to get together so that the boys can get a director and get in shape for the summer concerts.

A town without a band is considered among the dead towns. Klemme has always been considered a live town let's not fall down on the band this year but get it started now and get some money together for the boys so they can hire a leader now.

CLARION PHONE FIGHT

News: The telephone situation is not clearing very fast. If the local patrons, in town and country, expect to get any reductions in rates they will have to light a bigger fire than they have so far got started and carry the battle to towns represented by company exchanges, and by a concerted action it is very likely that reductions could be had. But the company practically admits that to grant a reduced rate here would call for wholesale reductions at their various exchanges, and that it could better afford to close the plant here than do this.

The company really prefers to sell the rural lines. They would rather get the money invested in them into cash. Then the rural lines would continue to pay switchboard charges and serve as feeder for the toll lines, admittedly profitable.

The final proposition made by the company was that the farmers should purchase the phone lines at an agreed price of $18 per phone, plus a switch charge of $6 per year for a five year period. The company would then furnish the switching service at $4.50 per year. The company claims it would cost $75 per phone to build a rural line at this time. In effect they would sell the present system at an average price of $25.00.

Another proposition submitted by the company, and which it hopes to see accepted, is that if the subscribers will continue the service at the present rate, the company will agree to spend $10 per phone for improvements. The company, by offering this improved service is not of the best at this time. The company, in a letter dated the 4th, says this latter offer apparently met favor with some of the committeemen named to represent farmers.

If the fight could be carried into the territories served by the Western Electric Co., it would probably win, but with Clarion making the proposition cold bloodedly and knows in dollars and cents that it could lose the business of the local plant and retain the present rates elsewhere and be ahead. This is one factor that cannot be changed.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is skipper, Nells Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII. — Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.—Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

CHAPTER X.—Our three adventurers form a "syndicate,' with the gunboat, which they have renamed the Maggie II, as their base of operations. They sail for the South Sea islands, where they plan to obtain valuable black coral.

CHAPTER XI.—Going ashore with supposedly friendly natives, Gibney and Scraggs are taken prisoners, to be held for a cannibal feast.

CHAPTER XII. — McGuffey, believing his friends to have been killed, shells the island. Gibney and Scraggs escape, and reach the ship with two prisoners, the king of the island and his "prime minister." Utilizing the blacks as divers, the "syndicate" collects a valuable cargo of black coral and sails for home. With the double idea of punishing the cannibals for their treachery and having some fun with Scraggs, who is not fond of a fight, Gibney and McGuffey arrange a fistic combat with the prisoners, Gibney to fight one and Scraggs the other. The five land on a desert island, and while they are engaged in the fistic fun the steamer sails, leaving the five marooned.

CHAPTER XIII.—When the ship arrives in Honolulu, Nells Halvorsen, former member of the Maggie's crew, suspects foul play and, seizing the vessel while the white crew is ashore, obtains a crew of natives and sets out to find the owners, guided only by information he obtains from the ship's log. He reaches the island just in time to save the lives of his old friends.

CHAPTER XIV.—In reward for his services, Nells Halvorsen is made a member of the "syndicate." At Honolulu the cargo is sold for a large sum and the owners of the Maggie II, fearing the Mexican government might cause trouble over the captured gunboat, present the vessel to the treacherous mate who had left them marooned on the island. In San Francisco the corporation plans the management of its wealth. Gibney purchases a derelict which turns out to be loaded with codfish, seemingly worthless, and resenting the bitter criticism of his associates for wasting their money, that gentleman resigns from the "syndicate." He and Halvorsen join hands and McGuffey and Scraggs, in partnership, purchase a small schooner, the Victor, planning to engage in coastwise trade. Gibney makes a contract with Scraggs to ship five hundred tons of "agricultural stuff" on the Victor. The "agricultural stuff" turns out to be the codfish, which by this time is an advanced stage of decay, and the shipment naturally would make the Victor worthless for passenger service, which the owners had planned. After natural acrimonious exchange of personalities, Mr. Gibney relents and releases the owners of the Victor from their contract. Scraggs, however, refuses to be pacified and withdraws from the "syndicate," announcing his intention of engaging in "chicken farming." With McGuffey and Halvorsen, Gibney purchases a power schooner and the three sail for the South seas, presumably to engage in occupations dear to their adventurous souls.

"Marooned!" said the commodore hoarsely. "Those two sailors have pulled back to the schooner, and—there—look, Mac! My Gawd!"

McGuffey looked, and his face went whiter than the foaming breakers beyond which he could see Maggie II, under full sail, headed for the open sea. The small boat had been picked up, and there was no doubt that at her present rate of speed the schooner would be hull down on the horizon by sunset.

"The murderin' hound," whispered McGuffey, and sagged down on the sands. "Oh, the murderin' hound of a mate!"

"It's—it's mutiny," gulped Captain Scraggs in a hard, strained voice. "That bloody fiend of a mate! The sly sneak-thief, with his pleasant smile and his winnin' ways! Saw a chance to steal the Maggie and her rich cargo, and he is leavin' us here, marooned on a desert island, with two cannibals."

Captain Scraggs fairly shrieked the last two words and burst into tears. "Lord, Gib, old man," he raved, "whatever will we do?"

Thus appealed to, the doughty commodore permitted his two unmatched optics to rest mournfully upon his shipmates.

He gulped and thoughtfully rubbed the knuckles of his right hand where the skin was barked off. He thought of the silly joke he and McGuffey had thought to perpetrate on Captain Scraggs by leading him up against a beating at the hands of a cannibal king, and with the thought came a grim, hard chuckle, though there was the look of a thousand devils in his eyes.

"Well, Mac, old sporty boy, I guess there ain't much to do except to make up our minds to die like gentlemen. If I was ever fooled by a man in my life, I was fooled by that doggone mate. I thought he'd tote square with the syndicate. I sure did."

For a long time McGuffey gazed seaward. He was slower than his shipmates in making up his mind that the mate had really deserted them and sailed away with the fortunes of the syndicate. Of the three, however, the stoical engineer accepted the situation with the best grace. He spurned the white sand with his foot and faced Mr. Gibney and Captain Scraggs with just the suspicion of a grin on his homely face.

"I make a motion," he said, "that the syndicate pass a resolution condemnin' the action of the mate."

It was a forlorn hope, and the jest went over the heads of the deck department. Said Mr. Gibney sadly:

"There ain't no more Maggie II syndicate."

CHAPTER XIII.

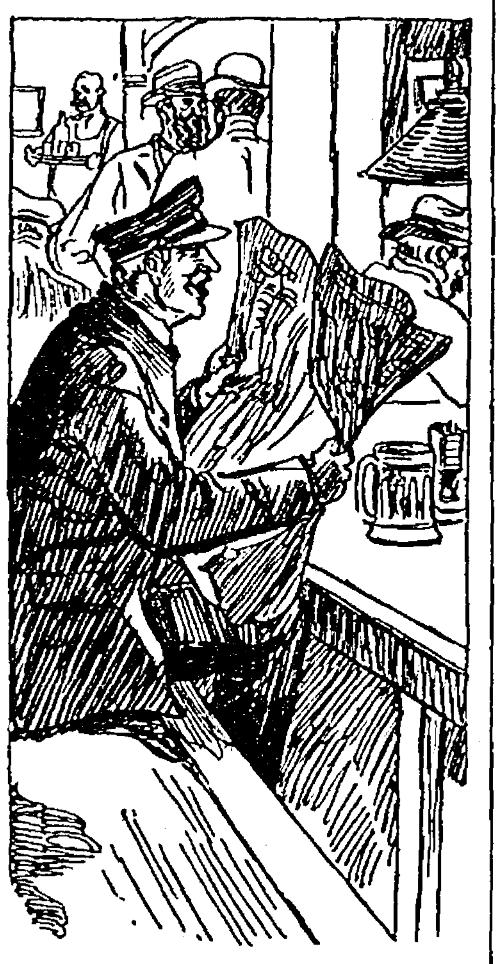
Nells Halvorsen often wondered what had become of the Maggie and Captain Scraggs. Mr. Gibney and Bartholomew McGuffey he knew had turned their sun-tanned faces toward deep water some years before Captain Scraggs and the Maggie disappeared from the environs of San Francisco bay, and Nells Halvorsen was wise enough to waste no time wondering what had become of them. These two worthies might be anywhere, and every conceivable thing under the sun might have happened to them; hence, in his idle moments, Nells Halvorsen did not disturb his gray matter speculating on their whereabouts and their then condition of servitude.

But the continued absence of Captain Scraggs from his old haunts created quite a little gossip along the waterfront, and in the course of time rumors of his demise by sundry and devious routes came to the ears of Nells Halvorsen.

Hence "The Squarehead" was puzzled. In fact, to such an extent was Nells puzzled, that one perfectly calm, clear night, while beating down San Pablo bay in his bay scow, the Willie and Annie, he so far forgot himself and his own affairs as to concentrate all his attention on the problem of the ultimate finish of Captain Scraggs. So engrossed was Nells in this vain speculation that he neglected to observe toward the rules of the ocean highways that nicety of attention which is highly requisite, even in the skipper of a bay scow, if the fulsome title of captain is to be retained for any definite period. As a result, Nells became confused regarding the exact number of blasts from the siren of a river steamer desiring to pass him to port. Consequently the Willie and Annie received such a severe butting from the river steamer in question as to cause her to careen and fill. Being, unfortunately, loaded with gravel on this particular trip, she subsided incontinently to the bottom of San Pablo bay, while Nells and his crew of two men sought refuge on a plank.

Without attempting to go further into the details of the misfortunes of Nells Halvorsen, be it known that the destruction of the Willie and Annie proved to be such a severe shock to Nells' reputation as a safe and sane bay scow skipper that he was ultimately forced to seek other and more virgin fields. With the fragments of his meager fortune, the ambitious Swede purchased a course in a local nautical school from which he duly managed to emerge with sufficient courage to appear before the United States local inspectors of hulls and boilers and take his examination for a second mate's certificate. To his unutterable surprise the license was granted; whereupon he shipped as quartermaster on the steamer Alameda, running to Honolulu, and what with the lesson taught him in the loss of the Willie and Annie and the exacting duties of his office aboard the liner, he forgot that he had ever known Captain Scraggs.

Judge of Nells Halvorsen's surprise, therefore, upon the occasion of his first trip to Honolulu, when he saw something which brought the whole matter back to mind. They were standing in toward Diamond head and the Alameda lay hove to taking on the pilot. It was early morning and the purple mists hung over the entrance to the harbor. Nells Halvorsen stood at the gangway enjoying the sunrise over the Punch-bowl, and glancing longingly toward the vivid green of the hills beyond the city, when he was aware of a "put," "put," "put," to starboard of the Alameda. Nells turned at the sound just in time to see a beautiful gasoline schooner of about a hundred and thirty tons heading in toward the bay. She was so close that Nells was enabled to make out that her name was Maggie II.



It Was Just a Squib in the Shipping News.

"Vell, aye be dam," muttered Nells, and scratched his head, for the name revived old memories. An hour later, when the Alameda loafed into her berth at Brewer's dock, Nells noticed that the schooner lay at anchor off the quarantine station.

That night Nells Halversen went ashore for those forms of enjoyment peculiar to his calling, and in the Pantheon saloon, whither his pathway led him, he filled himself with beer and gossip. It was here that Nells came across an item in an afternoon paper which challenged his instant attention. It was just a squib in the shipping news, but Nells Halvorsen read it with amazement and joy:

> "The power schooner Maggie II arrived this morning, ten days from the Friendly islands. The little schooner came into port with her hold bursting with the most valuable cargo that has entered Honolulu in many years. It consists for the most part of black coral.
> "The Maggie II is commanded by Captain Phineas Scraggs, and after taking on provisions and water today will proceed to San Francisco, tomorrow, for discharge of cargo."

"By yiminy," quoth Nells Halvorsen, "aye bat you that bane de ole man so sure as you bane alive. And aye bat new hat he skall be glad to see Nells Halvorsen. I guess aye hire Kanaka boy an' he bane pull me out to see de ole man."

A Jacob's ladder was hanging over the side of the schooner as the canoe shot in under her lee quarter, and half a minute later the expectant Nells stepped upon her deck. A tall dark man, wearing an ancient palmleaf hat, sat smoking on the hatch coaming, and him Nells Halvorsen addressed.

"Aye bane want to see Cap'n Scraggs," he said.

The tall dark man stood erect and cast a quick, questioning look at Nells Halvorsen. He hesitated before he made answer.

"What do you want?" he asked deliberately, and there was a subtle menace in his tones. As for Nells Halvorsen, thinking only of the surprise he had in store for his old employer, he replied evasively:

"Aye bane want job."

The Auction Sale

There are many kinds of places
 That I sort of like to go
Where I see the many faces
 Of the neighbors that I know;
But if I should be a choosing—
 I would meet them on a rail
Where the pitch is slowly oozing
 At a public auction sale.

There is something rather pleasing
 Just to hear the auctioneer,
Just to listen to the sneezing
 In the open atmosphere;
Then there's lots of satisfaction
 Just to start the bid along
Slipping from he scene of action
 When it gets to going strong.

But there's still one other matter
 Which endears the sale to me,
Has to do with tin cup clatter
 As it sounds across the lea .
Buns and crackers for the taking
 Over flowing coffee pail;
Yes, if I a choice were making—
 Let me meet them at the sale.
 —H. O. Smith.

Over at Eagle Grove they have been having more or less of a fight over electric service rates, and an agreement was finally reached last week that a reduction would be made. There was considerable talk in the town of starting up a municipal plant. Garner is still chewing the rag with the Iowa Falls company over service and rates there, with the town of Klemme seconding the motion. Clarion, which had a greivience too, with the northern people, came in under the same proposition that was made to Eagle Grove.

March 15th was the last day that income tax returns were supposed to be in, and the last minute stragglers —to which we plead guilty— were hot on the job getting the necessary "dope" together for their reports. Making out this income tax business is a good deal like riding on a merry-go-round; you get off the same place you got on, and you've spent your money but where have you been? It is one of the best things ever invented for filling the asylums, for by the time you get thru making out the blamed thing, and are completely enveloped in red tape, you're a fit subject for the bughouse, and no mistake.

Rich Ziska, the genial city mail carrier, attached signs to the various mail boxes about town giving the hours at which mail was gathered from the respective boxes. A good move. Now, if some one in authority will see that the street names are displayed on every corner, and the houses in the town numbered, we will be in pretty good hape to find out where folks live, and to direct strangers to the right place without having o tell them so many blocks one way, so many another, cut across the vacant lot, and it is the third house on the other side—you can't miss it.

The city authorities dragged the roads in town the first of the week, and flushed off the pavements. Begins to look like spring all right. Besides, two robins have been seen, and the kids are playing marbles, which proves it.

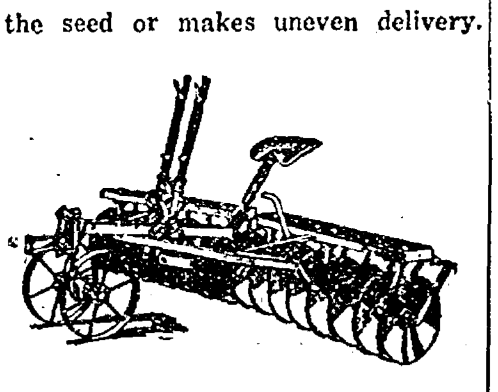
Do This Job Right

Good seeding and bigger yields go hand in hand. Top profits do not follow a seeder that cracks part of the seed or makes uneven delivery.



This year be sure the seed goes in right. If your seeder is too worn to do good work or you doubt its reliability, then buy or borrow a seeder worthy of your confidence,—a Hoosier.

The seed bed has been the foundation of good crops since tne world began—and will be till its end. When measured by results there is no more wonderful art in farming than the preparation of the soil for planting. It's a job that can't be overdone. And time and weather demand that it be done quickly. But you need not approach the task with fear that you may be forced to neglect it. The right kind of equipment will solve the problem completely. In the International Line, you will find the kinds and sizes of tillage implemets that can remove for you the handicaps of time, weather, and stubborn soil. See them —from plows to planters.

Operation Plans for Factory Progressing

Officials Going Ahead With Plans For Finances And Securing Acreage

COMMITTEE OF THREE

Plans for operation of the sugar factory this year have been going steadily forward, and it is believed are nearing completion. Fieldmen have been soliciting the necessary acreage the past two weeks, and considerable acreage has been contracted for.

In a recent letter sent out to stockholders, the plan of operation was outlined in brief.. It is proposed to have stockholders contribute a fund of money sufficient for operation, contributions equalling around 15 per cent of their preferred stock holdings. The fund from operating is to be used first to pay indebtedness incurred in operation, next to return to the contributors their respective contributions with 8 per cent interest, and the balance divided 20 per cent to the contributors and 80 per cent to the Iowa Valley Sugar Co. For securing contributors to this fund, an amount of the Series A Bonds equal to the amount of contributions to this fund will be deposited. These bonds are the same as bonds issued to creditors and will be ratably secured therewith. The bonds are a lien subject to the lien of the Dyer mortgage, on the main plant and first lien on all the other fixed property of the company not covered by the mortgage.

All details connected with the manner in which this operation is to be carried out are to be determined and put into effect by a Committee, composed of Henry Martini, of Sebewaing, Michigan; W. C. Tyrrell, of Belmond; and H. J. Klemme, of Belmond.

Payments of Contribution to the operating fund are to be made one-third April 1, one-third June 15, and the remainder whenever called for by the committee.

It appears as tho the operation was now an established fact, and working out of the plans is going forward so that Belmond and Wright county may look forward to a revival of business this summer and fall.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP MEETS

The Good Gellowship Club held its meeting last evening in the library basement, with Wilbur H. Bender, of Des Moines, as the speaker. SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

Community night Thursday evening of this week. This is the last community night of the year. Make it the best.

Spring vacation will be the week of April 3. School year closes June 2nd.

Call for track was given Monday night and about twenty-five responded. We hope to hold two or three meets in Belmond this year, which will prove interesting to all who enjoy foot races and similar events.

School was dismissed last Friday in order to give the local teachers an opportunity to attend the meetings of the North Central Secion of the State Teachers Association. Twelve of the teachers took advantage of the opportunity and attended Friday's sessions.

The school is in receipt of thirty new steel lockers for the gymnasium. These were purchased through the Library Fund without expense to taxpayers, at a cost of $135.

Since 1919 the cost of all athletics has been paid from this fund. Over $300.00 has been spent for Library Books and Magazines. A projection lantern was purchased for the school, one set of sterograph views and twelve scopes, $175.00; physics apparatus for laboratory, $60; one set of dishes for Home Ecomomics Room, $51.40; thirty-six folding chairs for use in gymnasium, $50. In addition to what has been mentioned, the cost of commencement speakers and all declamatory contest expenses have been paid.

An itemized account of expenditures of the funds is in the hands of the Secretary and may be seen by calling upon him. This statement shows how all money in this fund is spent.

Tuesday evening March 14, Britt, Garner and Belmond held their Tri-Angular Declamatory. Each school had a contest. Mrs. Peterson went to Britt with Leona Smith, Eloise Brooks and Beatrice Davenport. Miss Sharon went to Garner with Raphael Kernan, Luella Hauge and Irving Madsen. Our representatives at the home contest were William Vestweber, William Tyrrell and Bill Butts.

Belmond won first in the oratorical class at all the contests and first in the dramatic class at Britt. This gave Belmond four firsts, Britt three firsts and Garner two firsts. Belmond winning the greatest number of first places is the winner of the tri-angular.

Miss Liddle, County Nurse, is at the school house this week checking new pupils who were not here last fall.

A High School Band has been organized and entered into the musical contest to be held at Garner April 14. When all the material matures, there will be approximately twenty pieces.

The orchestra, which now numbers twenty-seven pieces, is planning on giving a public concert, to be followed by a one act play. This is to be a benefit program for athletics and music. Watch for further announcements.

Mrs. C. Norby and Mrs. Ned Packard visited in the grades on Wednesday.

"FAMINE WEEK" HELD IN IOWA NEXT MONTH

"Famine week" in Iowa was tentatively set for the week of April 16 by executives of the American Committee for Russian Famine Relief. During "famine week," citizens of the state will be urged to respond to the needs of millions who are starving in the Volga valley of Russia.

All relief supplies and funds collected by the American committee in Iowa will be distributed by the American Friends Service committee (Quakers), who have a large field in Russia.

In preparation for the state-wide appeal, local organizations of the American Committe for Russian Famine Relief will be strengthened to insure effective results. The committee now has oganizations in every county, James H. McGill, secretary said.

State headquarters will be established in Des Moines in a few days.

Reports from Russia say the death toll, constantly increasing, now approximates 40,000 a day. Fifteen million people face certain death from starvation and disease, unless all available aid is vastly increased, according to Wilbur. Thomas, excutive secretary of the American Friends Service committee.

The divorce case of Helen Norman vs Harry Norman of Dows was decided in favor of the wife, who may remarry within a year on proper showing to the court.

The divorce granted Lovina Loraine of Clarion from her husband John Loraine last week was later set aside when it was found that proof of service was not on file.

Barbara Lance, who formerly resided near Olaf, was taken to the women's reformatory at Rockwell City last Wednesday by Mrs. Henry Lang to serve a five year sentence. About two years ago Mrs. Lance was indicted by the grand jury for the theft of some merchandise from a traveling man's trunk while in the baggage room at the Olaf station. Later County Attorney Rogers secured her conviction and the court imposed a five year sentence. This was suspended during good behavior and the woman paroled to M. F. Birdsall, of Clarion. Of late Mrs. Lance has been working for a family at Mason City. Last week when she left a $400 diamond lavalier simultaneously disappeared. When the woman reached Belmond the officers were at the train to meet her and perchance she came on to Clarion Sheriff Lang was at the depot. TRADING AT HOME

Iowa Falls Citizen: Along through the course of the years the writer has occasionally written an article on trading at home. Conditions do not materially change and an article written twenty years ago applies fairly well to this day and time. The arguments are about the same and the results of a discussion about the same. People will go on doing as they please.

Of course we all feel that it is best to trade at home or any way we talk that way in public. The people at home pay the taxes, build the school houses, support the churches, make the public improvements, build the roads, bury the dead, sing at the funerals, preach the sermons, etc., etc. A man can easily write a column of good argument along this line, still people trade away from home. The reason is always the same. They think they are getting something better or cheaper.

In the course of years it is interesting to sit in the printing office and listen to the various arguments of all classes of people. A business man comes in. He is ugly at the catalog houses and is provoked at the farmer for sending to Chicago. Sometimes he touches on most of the arguments in favor of trading at home and sometimes he just gets a hold on the tail of the animal.

However, the business man is not the only complainant. In comes a farmer. He is ugly. Some business man has sent away for potatoes and the farmer has potatoes to sell. The business man, like the farmer thought he could buy cheaper or better in Minnesota, so he does it.

Now here comes an interloper. He has been in Des Moines and is rolling a choice morsel under his tongue. He has seen, actually seen, a bunch of women coming home with bundles bought in the city, costing no doubt, hundreds of dollars. They are, so he says, the wives of the main advocates of trading at home. The argument is all the same, something better or cheaper.

A printer from a neighboring town comes in. He is disgusted. Enough printing is being set out of town to keep five or six families. He says that the banks arethe worst offenders in his town and that they buy only such printing at home as they cannot buy elsewhere, Poor idiotic printer! He as been keeping his surplus millions at one bank for two decades, more or less, and still he is limited to a few crumbs, perhaps names on checks. The excuse is always the same. They think that they are buying something cheaper or better.

To make matters more amusing, in comes a firm from a neighboring town and want to buy a hundred dollars worth of advertising space. The printer looks at the $100, steps to this side then to that side, smells of it, touches it, bows low, and arises saying no, I must protect the banker and the home merchant. Selah.

FARMERS' ELEVATOR HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING SAT.

The farmers' Co-operative Elevator Company held its annual meeting last week Saturday, March 18th. Three directors were elected: Marvin Christie, C. P. Luick and John Blank. The C. P. Luick, and John Blank. The annual report of the elevator showed that the year 1921 had not been a profitable one, and several thousand dollars was chalked up as loss. The company bought during the year a total of 343,703 bushels of grain which was valued at $97,518. This was the business of the elevator in Belmond, and the one at Palsville, which is owned by the same firm.

Indications Point To A Record Vote

Stiff Battle In Prospect Next Monday—Feminine Vote Will Decide

ALL WOMEN CAN VOTE

Next Monday, March 27th, is the Big Day in the municipal politics, when a mayor and five councilmen, a treasurer and an assessor are chosen.

"There'll be a hot time in the old town" that day, judging from present indications. Not in several years has there been the determined feeling in evidence this year. The Citizens' Ticket and the People's Ticket go forth to the battle next Monday determined to carry home the bacon. The two tickets are well lined up, and the voters may be assured of a real hop-to-it scrap.

L. O. Skovlin vs R. C. Morse for Mayor appears to be the objective, with the councilmen following close behind. Both tickets carry a strong line-up; both are being bitterly pushed; and the day of the battle will witness the heaviest bombardment of ballots that Belmond has ever beheld, or there's nothing in signs.

The People's Ticket contains L. O. Skovlin for Mayor, and as councilmen Ole Thompson, John Greenlander, Cato C. Griesy, Chas. Sampson, Dr. H. L. Gowdy.

The Citizens' Ticket contains R. C. Morse for Mayor, and the councilmen M. D. Sullivan, Dr. A. W. Russel, John Dorenkamp, C. J. Papousek, Lud Simerson.

Women can vote March 27th for any of the candidates. The prospects are for scratched ballots almost entirely; the heaviest vote ever cast; and some time. As the ladies vote, so will the election go seems to be the universal opinion. At any rate, their vote will certainly have a large bearing on the outcome. The polls will be open from 8 a. m. until 7 p. m., at the city hall.

There is no contest on treasurer and assessor; C. M. Morse for the former, and O. Young for the latter office, have the support of all.

COMMUNITY WELFARE CLUB

The regular meeting of the community Welfare Culb will be held in the High school auditorium, Friday afternoon March 31, at the regular hour, 2:30.

Mrs. M. N. Volding from Woodward Iowa will give a talk and demonstration on "Better Shoes and Better Health.".

Mrs. Volding is very highly recomended. Mrs. A. E. Martin heard this talk given by Mrs. Volding at the State Fair last fall and said it was fine.

Mrs. Volding is also chairman of one of the committees of the State Federation of Womens Clubs, chairman of the Child Health committee. Her husband is in charge of the Epileptic Hospital at Woodward.

The Principal of the local school is co-operating with the club in arranging this program and the people of Belmond are fortunate in being able to get Mrs. Volding to come here and talk. Everyone should plan to hear her.

Don't forget the time and place of this meeting—School Auditorium, 2:30 p. m., March 31.

WELL, HOW ABOUT THE BAND?

Are any arrangements being made towards securing a band for Belmond this summer? If there are, we have not heard of them. Belmond cannot afford to be without a band this summer; it is just the question of whether we want people to come here or go somewhere else. It woud seem that it was time some definite action was being taken if we are to have concerts this summer. Why make Belmond dead? Let's look alive and get something started before it is too late.

At the election next Monday, this question will be submitted to the voters:

"Shall a tax not exceeding two (2) mills be levied each year for the purpose of furnishing a band fund?"

This was authorized by the city council at their meeting February 6th. While, if this is voted, it will help some, yet the amount will not be sufficient. The business men will make up the difference. We understand, however, that this cannot take effect until next year. This year the business men will put up $1,000. The money is waiting; who'll see about the band?

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

ARE THE WOMEN SLACKERS?

After the years and years of agitation for their rights; after the long, hard struggle for suffrage, are the women going to use their privilege of voting now that they have it? Are they going to "take the trouble" to go to the polls and cast their vote for the candidate they think should be chosen, or are they going to consider that it is "too much bother," and "let George do it"?

Voting, whether the voter be masculine or femine, is a privilege and a duty—the one as much as the other. If we had our way, we would make voting compulsory upon every citizen 21 years of age, and excusable only only on conditions similar to those of jury duty. The ladies, now that they have the right, are in duty bound to their government—national, state and city— to excerise it. "Too much bother" has put many a man into office who should not have been there, and kept many a man from the office who would have been elected had the voters turned out as they should.

If you don't vote, don't crab after it's over; you have no right to holler if you didn't do your share. If the "other fellow" is elected, and you failed to cast your vote, you have nothing to say whatever; you failed to do your duty, take your medicine. No one has a right to criticise who stayed at home because there was a party, or bread to bake, or it was too much trouble to dress up, and the hundred and one other trivial, insignificant excuses usually put forward. The women of the country now hold equal position with the men; they are as much to be credited if things "go right," and as much to blame if they "go wrong," as the men; neither can lay it on the other. Women the country over hold the balance of power today in every election; as they excerise their privilege and fulfill their duty, so will the returns be. If they cast their votes and express their opinion, they will decide the questions; if they stay at home, they will have to take the outcome and keep quiet about it. One vote is as good as another, one way or the other, and should be cast. "One vote won't make any difference" is as silly an excuse as can be found; if everybody felt that way no-one would vote but the candidates. It takes votes to secure public choice; your's is a part of the whole. Do you want to have something to say about it, or don't you care? If you do, cast your vote at every election; in other words, do your duty as an American citizen. You wanted the vote; you've got it; what are you going to do with it?

A POEM FROM KANSAS

A Kansan with nothing else to do wrote this:

Legs to the right of us,
Legs to the left of us,
Legs to the front of us
How thy display them!
On they go, tippingly,
Dainty and skippingly,
Frost that bites nippingly
Does not dismay them.

Straight legs and bandy ones.
Bum legs and dandy ones,
Awkward ad handy ones
Flirt with the breezes!
Round legs and flatter ones,
Thin legs and fatter ones,
Especially the latter ones
Showing their kneeses!

Knock kneed and bony ones,
Silk-covered tony ones,
Second to none.
Straight and distorted ones,
Mates and ill sorted ones,
Home and imported ones,
Ain't we got fun!

Why They Wear Out

Every battery has two kinds of wear—the natural slow wear due to use, and the more rapid wear that comes from abuse.

Keep the proper amount of water in your battery by putting in a little every two weeks. Test with the hydrometer to make sure there's enough charge. Come in to Battery Headquarters at the first faint sign of trouble.

Then your battery will wear out slowly and gradually, giving you uninterrupted service at lowest cost per month and per mile.

Farm Bureau News

By R. M. Edwards

Grant Social at Reed Home

The E. G. Reed home, one mile east of Cornelia, was the scene of a lively community social on Tuesday evening, March 16th, when the Grant Township Farm Bureau held its regular monthly social.

About 150 farmers of the township packed themselves into the Reed home to enjoy the interesting program which was given entirely by talent from within the bounds of the township. Grant is one of the townships in this county which insists upon having its regular monthly social affair and the spirit of cooperation which prevailed throughout this meeting is evidence of the fact that these people are able to work together as well as play together.

The evening program consisted of several dialogues, a number of readings and a few musical selections. The program committee had hoped to secure an outside speaker for this occasion but being unsuccessful in this plan the county agent was called upon for a short address. Following the program sandwiches and hot coffee were served and before the happy crowd disbanded everyone had forgotten the troubles of the day and had entered into the spirit of the occasion.

To Organize Poultry Club

The officers of the Wright County Farm Bureau have decided to organize a county-wide poultry club to be carried on in connection with the poultry division of the extension department at Ames. All boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 20 inclusive are eligible to membership in this poultry club.

The plan of the poultry club stated breifly is as follows: Each boy or girl will be expected to purchase fifteen eggs from some reliable poultry breeder of purebred poultry. The club member will be expected to care for chicks until four months of age after which the birds must be exhibited at some poultry show of county fair. Poultry breeders will be asked to furnish eggs at half price to the boys and girls. In case the boy or girl has poor luck with the first hatching the breeder will be asked to furnish a second setting free of charge. It is thought that breeders will be willing to do this in order to create more interest in poultry production and above all to assist the younger set to get a start in the purebred breeds of poultry.

Any boy or girl between the ages of 10 and 20 inclusive, who is interested in becoming a member of this poultry club is urged to write to or call at the office of the county agent and get further information regarding the details of membership in this club.

Iowa Feeder's Day

Come Wednesday, April 12, to the Iowa cattle feeders' day Ames, Iowa, new agricultural building, 9:30 a. m. sharp.

Cattle feeders everywhere have found much of practical dollars and cents interest in the experimentally fed cattle at the Iowa station in previous years—this year is no exception.

The two-year-old steers on feed are demonstrating the place of alfalfa, clover, mixed and timothy hays, corn silage, and limited grain in the rations.

The live question of how to best feed, and the puzzling question of "What Roughage and Other Feeds to Use" will be thoroughly gone into; and real cattle in the Ames feed lots, ready for market and fed in different ways so as to gain data on "today" problems, will, in combination with their feed and cost record, tell you a live, clearcut, and authoritative story.

Bring your practical questions in. We will all discuss them together. We will have a regular question box and answers.

Expect cattle men, buyers and sellers from the yards, will place actual valuations on the cattle, give talks and answers feeders' questions. The packers will be represented. Markets and marketing will be discussed.

Limited grain rations, value of corn silage, value of corn fodder, and other roughage considerations, salting and other essentials will be covered, and it should be a gala day for everyone present. This will be a day of exchange ideas and to build for a more profitable future.

Come with your neighbors to Iowa cattle feeders' day, on Wednesday, April 12. The animal husbandry section of the Iowa station Ames bids you welcome—Ames is at your service. Come let's all enjoy a practical livestock feeders' day together.

As Others See the County Agent

Country Gentleman: This week closes the tenth year of county agent work in the northern and western states. It has been a decade of wonderful accomplishment. The full scope and value of the forces set in motion by the county agent cannot be gauged now; that is a task for history. But in the wide application of better methods of production and distribution, the realization by farmers of the inportance and the needs of their industry, we can now see and credit the hand of the county agent.

The stimulus the county agent has given to farm cooperation would justify all the expense and labor involved in county agent work. Business done by cooperative organizations which county agents helped to create in the northern ad western states grew from $3,764,783 to $375,714,660 from 1915 to 1920. And it is estimated these cooperative organizations save the farmers more than $20,000,000 a year.

But better even than the direct saving has been the sense of self-help this cooperative work has engendered in the farmer himself to solve many of his problems. Moreover, he has caused farmers to see that they, as well as other business men, can afford to hire a skilled man to do for them the things they haven't the time or training to do themselves.

We might go on for many columns telling of the beneficial work of the county agent. It can be found in increased soil fertility, seed improvement, better farm management, elimination of scrub sires, boys' and girls' clubs and community betterment.

The county agent has measured up to the task to which he was assigned, that of helping establish a profitable, economically sound agriculture and a satisfactory home and community life. He has been one of the most useful Americans in the decade just closed."

The Farm Bureau in Washington

The proposal to reorganize the administrative departments of the government at Washington is causing a deal of controversy between the departments involved. The changes causing most criticism are the proposed transfer of the forestry service from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of Interior and the bureau of markets from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of Commerce.

Secretary of interior, Albert B. Fall, has just announced a new plan for the development of Alaska which involves the forestry service. The secretary would have congress set aside a revolving fund to be used by him in buying saw mills, paper factories, smelters, and railroads in Alaska. These enterprises would be operated by the government until they became self-supporting, at which time they would be sold to private corporations. He would also have the government sink experimental oil wells and prospect for mineral deposits.

It is certain that transfers of any of the bureaus of the Department of Agriculture to other departments will meet with the opposition of the American Farm Bureau Federation and many other farm organizations as already recorded in their resolutions.

ROBINSON FOR CONGRESS IS SLOGAN

Recorder: The announcement made last week by the newspapers of Hampton that T. J. B. Robinson of Franklin county would enter the race as a republican candidate for nomination at the primary election to succeed Burton E. Sweet as representative in congress from the Third district, not only received practically a unanimous indorsement from the voters of this county but seems to have voiced the sentiment of leading citizens from other counties of the district. Mr. Robinson is the recipient of hundreds of letters offering him loyal support, which is indeed gratifying for it shows that he is universally recognized as a man possessing ability to fill the post admirably. It can truly be said that his candidacy is growing daily and so far not a discouraging feature has arisen. A few words regarding Franklin county's candidate for congressman will prove of especial interest to our readers.

T. J. B. Robinson was reared in Hampton and has practically spent his entire life here. For many years he has been closely indentified with the business and civic interests of Hampton and Franklin county and is known as a leader always in affairs that tend toward the betterment of the community. He is high minded, clean as a hound's tooth, a christian gentleman and splendid citizen. He is distinctively a self-made man and while his business views are conservative and safe, he possesses in a marked degree deep earnestness and great energy. While he takes a decided stand always in matters pertaining to the public welfare, he never loses his head when discussing them, and is so affable and genial in temperament and habits that he holds the respect of he people who disagree with him.

In politics Mr. Robinson is a dyed-in-the-wool republican and has worked incessantly for the success of the party and never asked for or held a political office, excepting that of state senator for the 43rd district, and while filling the place made an enviable record. He never failed to work and vote for measures that would contribute to the success of the Iowa farmer. He advocates woman suffrage when that issue was far from being popular with politicians. His record in the state senate is an open book which he points to with pardonable pride.

Mr. Robinson had two sons in the world war, both serving overseas. He was chairman of the Liberty Loan committee in Franklin county and chairman of the Red Cross. It is needless to add that his sympathies are with the ex-service men and that he is strongly in favor of the soldier bonus bill. He says that Congressman Haugen expressed his thought recently when asked how he stood on the matter replied: "I believe the quicker the soldier bonus is passed the better. If Canada can raise $85,000,000 as a starter for the relief of her boys, Uncle Sam ought to be able to do at least as well, and if the government can pay other war claims aggregating enormous sums, some of which were merely moral obligations, it can and should pay the bonus."

The Recorder is for Mr. Robinson for congressman for several reasons: He is congressional size and in the primo of life; a clear thinker and ready debater; right on every issue confronting the farmer so far as relief measures go; a true friend of the laboring man which he proved conclusively when in the state senate fighting for the passage of the employer's liability insurance law. He is strong and capable and if chosen to represent this district in congress will give an account of stewardship that will reflect high credit to himself and the people. He will make a worthy successor to Burton E. Sweet, our present congressman who has shied his hat into the senatorial ring.

Get behind Franklin county's congressional candidate. The going is good. Hop into the Robinson band wagon.

MUNICIPAL BAND TAX MEANS BUT LITTLE

News: Last week, George Richards, secretary of the Clarion Municipal band, circulated a petition asking for an election on the proposition to authorize a levy of not to exceed two mills, for the support of the band, and he secured practically every signature asked. No one seemed to oppose it. The petition will be filed with the city council and a ballot will be prepared to give the voters an opportunity to decide whether or not Clarion is willing to give this measure of support to the band.

Means Little to Individual

The authorization of the two mill levy for the band will mean but a little to the average taxpayer. On the average home in the city it will be in he neighborhood of fifty or sixty cents. The business man will pay his proportionate share of the levy also, and the railroad companies will pay more than any individual.

City Support is Not Unreasonable

Support of the band by the entire city is not unreasonable. It is a cummunity enterprise, and the entire community benefits. Heretofore, the business men have borne practically the entire load which a band necessitates. The band was financed last year by individual pledges of $5 to $25 a year by the business and professional men. Under the levy, the financial support would be divided. The News does not believe that many of the taxpayers will begudge the fifty cents to the support of the band. On some of the smaller homes the cost would be less. The average man who pays on personal property only would not know the difference.

The band is a worthy institution, and now that the people have a chance to endorse its work, they should be glad to do so.

COAT CAUGHT IN GEAR —STRIPPED FROM BACK

Humboldt Republican: Ben Stoebe had a narrow escape last week. He was standing near a corn sheller, and the wind caught the tail of his blouse ad threw it against the gear of the corn sheller. The gear promptly gathered in the coat, and Mr. Stoebe braced himself and kept free from the whirling wheels as they chewed up his coat. One side of the coat was entirely torn away, and one sleeve was taken.

It was a narrow escape, and lucky that he escaped without injury.

THIS IS THE RECORD

We are going to like the Congressional Record. For twenty or thirty years it has been coming to our exchange table and getting dumped off into the waste basket by the office boy before we could get our hands on it, and so we never knew what a fine paper it was until the other day we found some nice obituary poetry in it that made the tears come to our eyes. And today we rescued from the grimy hands of the office boy a copy that he was just ready to fire into the basket, and turning over the pages we came to the great oratorical effusion of Senator Heflin, who said, dramatically:

"There stood the kaiser on the battle plains of France, with folded arms, gazing into the distance thru his field glasses."

Wouldn't it be just lovely to see the kaiser looking through field glasses that were strapped to his head so he could strike an attitude with his arms folded? But perhaps it was Senator Heflin who said of the Goddess of Liberty:

"There she stands in all her majestic glory, one foot on the Atlantic, one on the Pacific, and one on the Gulf of Mexico."

Yes, we are going to like the Congressional Record, and it doesn't cost anything. Uncle Sam is the publisher ad he sends it out free of charge.—Hampton Chronicle.

Come to our store today and let us show you the great progress that has been made in wall paper manufacture since poor Schinkel's trial.

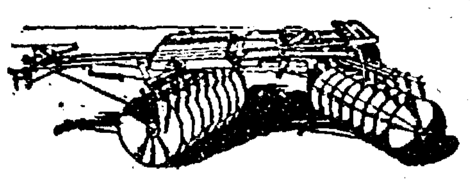
The Hoosier end gate seeder is practically double throughout. There are two large size fluted force feed rolls, two cut-offs, two distributing wheels, two seed tubs, double gears, etc. The path of distribution is from 36 to 40 feet in width for oats, 42 to 52 feet for wheat, 20 to 26 feet for flax, 24 to 28 feet for clover, and 20 to 24 feet for timothy.

Always criticise a mule to his face.

Considering the size of your farm, the power at your disposal, and your crop rotation methods, what size of disk harrow should you buy? And should it be a large single disk or a smaller double disk? We can be a wonderful help to you in answering such important questions. We know of other farms where conditions are similar to yours and how those farmers are meeting the problem. Why not get our suggestions? It will not obligate you in any way, for that is a part of the indispensable service we render to our customers.



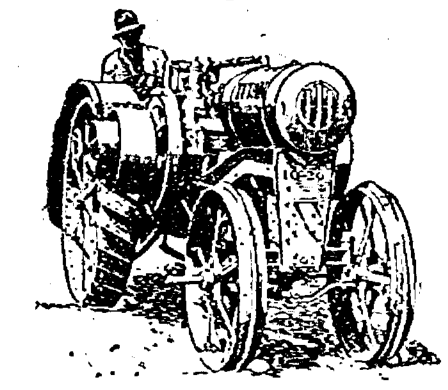
The girl who goes to the big city to get a job on her looks soon finds out what her mother has known for a long time—that peaches are about the first to be canned.

HAVE A FERTILE SOIL

It's the fertile acres that pay best, because they produce more bushels at less cost per bushel. On your farm it costs about as much to grow a half crop as to grow a big one. Why not have a fertile soil and get a bigger income? It's mainly a matter of lime, manure and clover. The clovers you can grow but manure and lime must be spread. Hand spreading is slow, tedious and inefficient. International manure spreaders and Hoosier lime sowers do the job cheaper, quicker, and many times better.

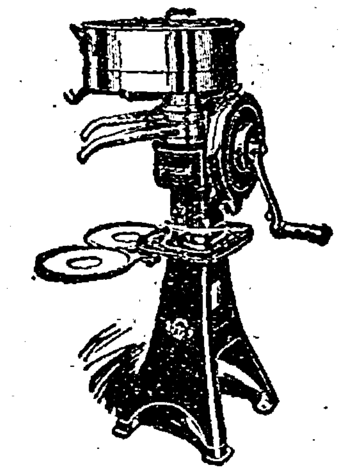
The world is blessed most by people who do things, and not by those who merely talk about them.

With the world's standard 3-plow tractor now selling at the lowest Price ever quoted, and a P & O 3-bottom plow free, the economy and profits of Titan power are within the reach of every farmer. The Titan 10-20 at the new price of $700 f. o. b. Chicago, is the greatest tractor value on the market today—bar none. Neither horses nor any other tractor can equal it. Remember, the Titan 10-20 is a THREE-PLOW tractor, and just as much at home on the belt as it is on the draw-bar. It comes to you COMPLETELY EQUIPPED.



It has truly been said that a mule makes no progress when he is kicking. Neither does a man. Be a booster.

If there is electric power available at your home, why not use a motor driven Primrose cream separator? When you are ready to skim, all you have to do is to turn the switch and let the motor do the work.



It gives a smooth even speed from the beginning to the end of the run. The attachment of the electric motor does not interfere with the operation of the separator by hand if you prefer. The motor can be applied to Primrose separators already in use.

Chief Rain-in-the-Face

Chief Rain-in-the-Face consiered himself a progressive Indian, so when a settler told him that feathers were comfortable to sleep on he decided to give the idea an impartial trial.

Procuring a nice shiny crow feather, he put it on the ground and lay down on it for his night's rest.

In the morning the Chief awoke tired ad stiff and very displeased with himself. He arose and said, "White man heap damn liar. Feather no good bed."

If you use advertising in the same way that Chief Rain-in-the-Face used feathers you will get the same proportion of results. A single advertisement in a year is worse than wasted because it leads you to believe that advertising itself is no good. If advertising is to produce good results, it must be taken steadily, presistently and in sufficent quantities to be effective—just like feathers.—Publishers Review.

A BANK OF SERVICE AND SAFETY
FARMERS SAVINGS BANK
FSB
MESERVEY, IOWA

A banquet was tendered the school board last Monday evening by W. F. Butz the retiring member. The bill of fare consisted of cakes, ice cream, apples and soft drinks. Evidently Mr. Butz was very appreciative of being relieved and took this method of showing it. It was voted that Mrs. Butz did not need any course in domestic science.

H. K. Pals, the new member, was elected President of the Board to take the place of Harm J. Groen, who has been president for many years. Mr. Groen has taken a deep interest in the school while he held the position, but asked to be relieved.

The new school board has some real problems confronting them for the next year. The matter of fire escapes for the old building had been held back thinking that this amount could be saved for the district in case bonds were voted; there is also talk of renting some other buildings in which some of the scholars can be housed.

Some idea of the housing conditions may be had when one thinks of the amount of space available in the present quarters. 28 years ago a building was built to take care of the town and a small territory adjoining; since that time about 20 sections have been added to the district, and only one small country school building has been provided to house this additional increase in scholars.

The condition is far from being pleasant or satisfactory; it is what the majority wished and this should settle the matter. Since the election it has been rumored that if the plans of the new building had provided for an observatory the bond issue might have carried.

Garner Signal: C. C. Tessier has installed a radiophone station at his electrical supply store. One end of the receiving wires are attached to a pole on top of his building and the other end to a pole on top of the postoffice building. The receiving instruments are in his store. He was unable to get the horn attached at the time and only has sort of telephone receiver. Later he expects to get the horn attachment and then parties can listen to concerts and news reports that are sent out a long distance.

There are broadcasting stations at the Des Moines Resgister building in Des Moines, besides others at Mason City and Iowa City, in this state, and at other large cities at a distance. On clear nights it is expected that it will be possible to catch reports from as far as Pittsburgh. The weather conditions make a big difference in how these reports may be received from.

This apparatus is a wireless telephone. The parts have been difficult to secure because there is such a big demand at this time.

Later Mr. Tessier expects to equip his station more fully and organize a club to enjoy the benefits that may be derived from the station. He has taken the agency for the equipment and it is likely that many others will install like outfits.

The next program of the Philomathean Society will be held on the 31st of March in honor of Iowa Day.

We are decorating our room in blue and white for Easter.

There was a man who came from a land across the sea
Where people never make a stronger drink than tea.
In Meservey, he was horrified to the fill
When he heard the seniors had a still,
He got in his car on Monday night
And came to town in a terrible fright;
He went to the school board and "By Heck
Stop this moonshining or I'll break your neck."
The board laughed and said "You go to grass
They haven't any still that wouldn't pass."
He went to the chief of police and told
A tale. that made the latter's blood run cold,
How corn whiskey was made in the school every day
(A costly occupation for which taxpayers had to pay.)
How raisins and yeast and corn meal mash,
Wood alchol and all such trash
Were kept in the science room for future use,
He said "It's cruel injustice and horrid abuse."
The marshall got alarmed and said,
"We must interview the Meservey school head."
The interview, alas, too good to say,
Was a victory for the school that day;
For the still, a bottle and a tube of glass,
Was used for distilling water in the class.
Now, dear readers, don't you believe it's best,
When you hear half a story to wait for the rest?

HOW DID YOU DIE?

Did you tackle the trouble that came your way
With a resolute heart and cheerful?
Or hide your face from the light of day
With a craven soul and fearful?
O, a trouble's a ton, or a trouble's an ounce
Or a trouble is what you make it,
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,
But only how did you take it?

You are beaten to earth? Well, well, what's that?
Come up with a smiling face.
Its nothing against you to fall down flat,
But to lie there—that's disgrace.
The harder you've thrown, why, the higher you bounce;
Be proud of your blackened eye!
It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts;
It's how did you fight—and why?

And though you be done to the death, what then?
If you battled the best you could,
If you played your part in the world of men,
Why, the critic will call it good.
Death comes with a crawl, or comes with a pounce,
And whether he's slow or spry.
It isn't the fact that you're dead that conuts,
But only how did you die?

—Edmund Vance Cooke.

State Bank Examiner Maus examined the Farmers Savings Bank last Friday.

In times past these examinations were not near so thoro as they are at the present. Not only must the books be in balance and all documents in place, but a signed borrower's statement is now requested, in which resources and liabilities are shown in full. These statements have been in use by the larger banks for years, and by those banks that have received advances from the War Finance Corporation, as they would not make advances unless the statement was furnished.

When your bank asks for a statement it is not any reflection on your credit but is one of the requirements of the Banking department.

School Notes

We expect to order our new Encyclopedias this week. It is the new International, twenty-four volumes. We will also order a new dictionary and an Atlas. Remember the school is paying for these books by giving programs and by using the proceeds from our movies. Moral attend our programs and the movies and save taxes.

Miss Eva Whetstone who has been under the doctor's care during the past two weeks, was able to assume the duties of the principalship last Monday morning.

The class in American constition completes the work this week. This makes the second class this school year, that has been given instruction in the constitution.

By the way the text that cost us a dollar and twenty-fixe cents last fall can now be purchased for fifty-seven cents. We sometimes wonder if the backers of the law requiring the constitution to be taught, were really doing it on account of their patriotism. Why can't the constitution be taught along with high school Civics.

A health program will be put on in the near future. We will announce the date later. A couple of reels will be shown in regard to sanitation, accompanied by a lecture. Health posters will be made by the school children. Also a health program will be given by the school.

Joe Pals who has been taking work in agriculture during the last three months, has discontinued school and has accepted in the Farm Corps Department of the Jesse Latham farm.

Either the writer of this column or the department at Ames made a misake in announcing the movie programs for this week. The movie program for next week March 28th is "The Oliver Plow Film," a story of soils, soil preparation, seed bed preparation, etc. "Going South," southern secnery or historical interest, and a comedy.

ALEXANDER CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

We are all aware of the fact that it does not take much to keep folks away from church, and especially noticed that last Sunday. However, we are thankful for those who are always in their place, and oh, what a wonderful world this would be if we could say the same of everybody, but that sounds too good to be true. It would be a fine thing if we would sometimes ask ourselves the question "What kind of a community would this be if everybody took as much interest in the church as I do?" How sad would be the picture of a community without a church, and yet some must confess that it would be such, as far as they are concerned. Let us show our loyalty to God and our community by attending church next Sunday.

The Helping Hand Society will meet with Mrs. Forest Gillet next Wednesday, March 29th. A good attendance is desired at this time, as the quarterly business meeting will be held.

IOWA FALLS COMPANY IMPROVES AT GARNER

Signal: H. P. Williamson and Ray Ingham of the Iowa Falls Electric Company were in Garner yesterday.

Mr. Ingham is here superintending a lot of work that the company is doing in way of installing new wires. A new line will be run to Concord and an effort made to get the people out that way good service. A number of new transformers will also be installed and anyone who has any grievance against the company because of poor service they are getting is requested to report it.

Mr. Williamson says that the company wishes to try out the new rates and see whether the people are satisfied or not. He took issue with us on what he said last week regarding their new schedule, and especially the minimum charge they have established. The minimum charge now is $1.25, and the old minimum charge was $1.00. He says that figuring the interest on their investment and the taxes their cost per customer is nearly $1.00 per month, and then there is the cost of producing the service, meter reading, etc. Figuring it as he does a customer that does not use at least $1.25 of service a month, is a losing proposition to the company.

Perhaps his way of figuring is correct. We are not an authority on the matter. But we have always contended that the rates charged were excessive according to their franchise and that if there was some other company that could give us better rates, we should make a change. If the Iowa Falls Co. will make the necessary changes to improve the service, it is not likely that there will be the complaint on rates that there has been.

We understand from talking with Mr. Williamson that the company will charge under the new schedule of rates for the next month of two, and then take the matter up through the city council.

THE IDEAL NEWSPAPER

Arthur H. Folwell, in Leslie's Weekly: A newspaper publisher, wishing to please his readers, asked for suggestions.

"How can I make mine the ideal newspaper?" he inquired.

"Cut out the crimes, the murders, the sensational divorce case reports," said the nice people.

"Cut out the accidents, the railway and steamship disasters," said the people who "couldn't bear" to read such things.

"Cut out the politics," said the old-fashioned woman, "I don't understand it, and haven't time for it."

"Cut out the League of nations and all that heavy stuff," yawned the flappers of both sexes." What's it all about anyway?"

"Cut out the so-called funny pictures," said the careful mother, "Such pictures aren't funny, and they're bad, very bad for children."

"Cut out the ponderous editorials," snapped the man who merely scans the headlines. "Nobody reads 'em nowadays."

"Cut out the wonan's page," said the female with the strong mind, "It's mushy, trashy, trivial; an insult to our sex."

"Cut out sports and theatres," said the intellectual. "Both are bad influences, and both have received altogether too much notice."

"Cut out—" began another and still another, but the publisher beat them to it.

"Stop all of you," he cried. "On second thought, I have decided to cut out myself. It is no use trying to publish the ideal newspaper until I come across the ideal reader."

Saying which, he shut up shop and went into the wholesale saxophone business for rest.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE AFTER SOME OFFICIALS

Iowa's first pre-election bomb was sprung today by the Anti-Saloon League.

The sheriffs of twelve counties, two district judges and a number of county attorneys and minor officials are already on the league's blacklist for the coming elections, Superintendent R. N. Holsaple announced.

Te result of the complaints which have reached the office of the Anti-Saloon League this week will be immediate campaigns against the reelection of these officials, and their supplanting by men who are pledged to prohibition enforcement in the full measure of the law. Every official in every county is having his record looked into at the present time and those who have performed their full duties with regard to prohibition will have the League's backing, officials said here.

Holsaple said investigation was revealing comparatively few complaints against officers unsympathetic with prohibition enforcement. The situation as a whole is good, he said, and practically all officials are co-operaing to the fullest in seeing that the law is observed.

The Anti-Saloon League has refused to divulge the names of those officers against whom the power of the organization has been directed. Holsaple promised, however, that the full record of each officer who has failed to preform his duties will be published by the League in his home community shortly before the primaries.

Committees are now at work on this in practically every county in the state, Holsaple said.

THE FARMER'S WIFE

Sioux City Journal: "Why I Am Glad that I Married a Farmer," was the strangest subject discussed by Mrs. C. W. Sewell, an Indiana woman, at the farm and home week gathering recently at the Kansas state agricultural college. Strange? To be sure. Why should any woman be glad that she married a farmer? Mrs. Sewell supplied five reasons, which breifly, are as follow: (1) The farmer seldom is in need or lacks the necessities of life; (2) he and his wife do not often appear in the divorce court; (3) when he goes to town he usually takes the children with him and he has no time, if he has the money to pursue an affinity; (4) his wife is never in doubt as to where he spends his evenings; (5) the farmer and his family generally are the closest of busiess partners.

It is Mrs. Sewell's opinion that the farmer's wife has a wonderful career—a career "worthy of the attainments of the most educated, cultured and refined women of the land." It is quite evident that Mrs. Sewell likes her job. It is gratifying when so much has been said on the other side of the question to hear her reassuring report.

SOME PLAIN TALK

Spencer, Iowa, News-Herald

If we were in the merchandising business we would want to be an advertiser, but we would hate to spend our money with an editor who was too lazy or did not have the courage to print a good newsy, fearless, independent paper. This paragraph is prompted by a perusal of some of our exchanges. It is a fact, moreover, that the paper that seems to be just "getting by" are not the ones which carry the biggest amount of advertising either. Those boys who work day and night, and we know nearly every one of them in this section of the state, who get the news of their respective communities, who print a neat, newsy, readable paper, conduct an editorial column, and classify their departments. are the ones who are making things hum, and they are nearly always well patronized in a business way.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is the skipper, Neils Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII. — Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.—Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer. Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

CHAPTER X.—Our three adventurers form a "syndicate," with the gunboat, which they have renamed the Maggie II, as their base of operations. They sail for the South Sea islands, where they plan to obtain valuable black coral.

CHAPTER XI.—Going ashore with supposedly friendly natives, Gibney and Scraggs are taken prisoners, to be held for a cannibal feast.

CHAPTER XII. — McGuffey, believing his friends to have been killed, shells the island. Gibney and Scraggs escape, and reach the ship with two prisoners, the king of the island and his "prime minister." Utilizing the blacks as divers, the "syndicate" collects a valuable cargo of black coral and sails for home. With the double idea of punishing the cannibals for their treachery and having some fun with Scraggs, who is not fond of a fight, Gibney and McGuffey arrange a fistic combat with the prisoners, Gibney to fight one and Scraggs the other. The five land on a desert island, and while they are engaged in the fistic fun the steamer sails, leaving the five marooned.

CHAPTER XIII.—When the ship arrives in Honolulu, Neils Halvorsen, former member of the Maggie's crew, suspects foul play and, seizing the vessel while the white crew is ashore, obtains a crew of natives and sets out to find the owners, guided only by information he obtains from the ship's log. He reaches the island just in time to save the lives of his old friends.

CHAPTER XIV.—In reward for his services, Neils Halvorsen is made a member of the "syndicate." At Honolulu the cargo is sold for a large sum and the owners of the Maggie II, fearing the Mexican government might cause trouble over the captured gunboat, present the vessel to the treacherous mate who had left them marooned on the island. In San Francisco the corporation plans the management of its wealth. Gibney purchases a derelict which turns out to be loaded with codfish, seemingly worthless, and resenting the bitter criticism of his associates for wasting their money, that gentleman resigns from the "syndicate." He and Halvorsen join hands and McGuffey and Scraggs, in partnership, purchase a small schooner, the Victor, planning to engage in coastwise trade. Gibney makes a contract with Scraggs to ship five hundred tons of "agricultural stuff" on the Victor. The "agricultural stuff" turns out to be the codfish, which by this time is an advanced stage of decay, and the shipment naturally would make the Victor worthless for passenger service, which the owners had planned. After natural acrimonious exchange of personalities, Mr. Gibney relents and releases the owners of the Victor from their contract. Scraggs, however, refuses to be pacified and withdraws from the "syndicate," announcing his intention of engaging in "chicken farming." With McGuffey and Halvorsen, Gibney purchases a power schooner and the three sail for the South seas, presumably to engage in occupations dear to their adventurous souls.

"Well, I'm Captain Scraggs, and I haven't any job for you. Get off my boat and wait until you're invited before you come aboard again."

For nearly a minute Neils Halvorsen stared open-mouthed at the spurious Captain Scraggs, while slowly there sifted through his brain the notion that he had happened across the track of a deep and bloody mystery of the seas. There was "something rotten in Denmark." Of that Neils Halvorsen was certain. More he could not be certain of until he had paved the way for a complete investigation, and as a preliminary step toward that end he clinched his fist and sprang swiftly toward the bogus skipper.

"Aye tank you bane d—n liar," he muttered, and struck home, straight and true, to the point of the jaw. The man went down, and in an instant Neils was on top of him. Off came the sailor's belt, the hands of the half-stunned man were quickly tied behind him, and before he had time to realize what had happened Neils had cut a length of cord from a trailing halyard and tied his feet securely, after which he gagged him securely with his bandana handkerchief.

A quick circuit of the ship convinced Neils Halvorsen that the remainder of the dastard crew were evidently ashore, so he descended to the cabin in search of further evidence of crime. He was quite prepared to find Captain Scraggs' master's certificate in its familiar oaken frame, hanging on the cabin wall, but he was dumfounded to observe, hanging on the wall in a similar and equally familiar frame, the certificate of Adelbert P. Gibney as first mate of steam or sail, any ocean and any tonnage. But still a third framed certificate hung on the wall, and Neils again scratched his head when he read the wording that set forth the legal qualifications of Bartholomew McGuffey to hold down a job as chief engineer of coastwise vessels up to 1,200 tons net register.

It was patent, even to the dull-witted Swede, that there had been foul play somewhere, and the schooner's log, lying open on the table, seemed to offer the first means at hand for a solution of the mystery. Eagerly Neils turned to the last entry. It was not in Captain Scraggs' handwriting, and contained nothing more interesting than the stereotyped reports of daily observations, currents, weather conditions, etc., including a notation of arrival that day at Honolulu. Slowly Halvorsen turned the leaves backward, until at last he was rewarded by a glimpse of a different handwriting. It was the last entry under that particular handwriting, and read as follows:

> "June 21, 19—. Took an observation at noon, and find that we are in 20—48 S., 178-4 W. At this rate should lift Tuvana-tholo early this afternoon. All hands well and looking forward to the fun at Tuvana. Bent a new flying jib this morning and had the king and Tabu-Tabu holystone the deck. A. P. GIBNEY."

Neils Halvorsen sat down to think, and after several minutes of this unusual exercise it appeared to the Swede that he had stumbled upon a clue to the situation. The last entry in the log kept by Mr. Gibney was under date of June 21st—just eleven days ago, and on that date Mr. Gibney had been looking forward to some fun at Tuvana-tholo. Now where was that island and what kind of a place was it?

Neils searched through the cabin until he came across the book that is the bible of every South sea trading vessel—the British admiralty reports. Down the index went the old deckhand's calloused finger and paused at "Friendly Islands—page 177;" whereupon Neils opened the book at page 177 and after a five-minute search discovered that Tuvana-tholo was a barren, uninhabited island in latitude 21-2 south, longitude 178-49 west.

Ten days from the Friendly islands, the paper said. That meant under power and sail with the trades abaft the beam. It would take nearer fifteen days for the run from Honolulu to that desert island, and Neils Halversen wondered whether the marooned men would still be alive by the time aid could reach them. For by some sixth sailor sense Neils Halvorsen became convinced that his old friends of the vegetable trade were marooned. They had gone ashore for some kind of a frolic, and the crew had stolen the schooner and left them to their fate, believing that the castaways would never be heard from and that dead men tell no tales.

He rushed on deck, carried his prisoner down into the cabin, and locked the door on him. A minute later he was clinging to the Jacob's ladder, the canoe shot in to the side of the vessel at his gruff command and passed on shoreward without missing a stroke of the paddle. An hour later, accompanied by three Kanaka sailors picked up at random along the water front, Neils Halvorsen was pulled out to the Maggie II. Her crew had not returned and the bogus captain was still triced hard and fast in the cabin.

The Swede did not bother to investigate in detail the food and water supply. A hasty round of the schooner convinced him that she had at least a month's supply of food and water. Only one thought surged through his mind, and that was the awful necessity for haste. The anchor came in with a rush, the Kanaka boys chanting a song that sounded to Neils like a funeral dirge, and Neils went below and turned the gasoline engines wide open. The Maggie II swung around and with a long streak of opalescent foam trailing behind her swung down the bay and faded at last in the ghostly moonlight beyond Diamond head; after which Neils Halvorsen, with murder in his eye and a tarred rope's end in his horny fist, went down into the cabin and talked to the man who posed as Captain Scraggs. In the end he got a confession. Fifteen minutes later he emerged, smiling grimly, gave the Kanaka boy at the wheel the course, and turned in to sleep the sleep of the conscience-free and the weary.

* * * * * * * *

Darkness was creeping over the beach at Tuvana-tholo before Mr. Gibney could smother the despair in his heart sufficient to spur his jaded imagination to working order. For nearly an hour the three castaways had sat on the beach in dumb horror, gazing seaward. They were not alone in this, for a little further up the beach the two Fiji Islanders sat huddled on their haunches, gazing stupidly first at the horizon and then at their white captors. It was the sight of these two worthies that spurred Mr. Gibney's torpid brain to action.

"Didn't you say, Mac, that when we left these two cannibals alone on this island that it would develop into a case of dog eat dog or somethin' of that nature?"

Captain Scraggs sprang to his feet, his face white with a new terror. However, he had endured so much since embarking with Mr. Gibney on a life of wild adventure that his nerves had become rather inured to impending death, and presently his fear gave way to an overmastering rage. He hurled his hat on the sands and jumped on it until it was a mere shapeless rag.

"Let's call a meetin' of the Robinson Crusoe syndicate," said Mr. Gibney.

"Second the motion," rumbled McGuffey.

"Carried," said the commodore. "The first business before the meetin' is the organization of a expedition to chase these two cannibals to the other end of the island. I ain't got the heart to kill 'em, so let's chase 'em away before they get fresh with us."

"Good idea," responded McGuffey, whereupon he picked up a rock and threw it at the king. Mr. Gibney followed with two rocks, Captain Scraggs screamed defiance at the enemy, and the enemy fled in wild disorder, pursued by the syndicate. After a chase of half a mile Mr. Gibney led his cohorts back to the beach.

"Let's build a fire—not that we need it, but just for company—and sleep till mornin'. By that time my imagination'll be in workin' order and I'll scheme a breakfast out of this Godforsaken hole."

At the first hint of dawn Mr. Gibney, true to his promise, was up and scouting for breakfast. He found some gooneys on a rocky crag and killed half a dozen of them with a club. On his way back to camp he discovered a few handfuls of sea salt in a crevice between some rocks, and the syndicate breakfasted an hour later on roast gooney. It was oily and fishy but an excellent substitute for nothing at all, and the syndicate was grateful. The breakfast would have been cheerful, in fact, if Captain Scraggs had not made repeated reference to his excessive thirst. McGuffey lost patience before the meal was over, and cuffed Captain Scraggs, who thereupon subsided with tears in his eyes. This hurt McGuffey. It was like salt in a fresh wound, so he patted the skipper on the back and humbly asked his pardon. Captain Scraggs forgave him and murmured something about death making them all equal.

"The next business before the syndicate," announced Mr. Gibney, "is a search of this island for water."

They searched all forenoon. At intervals they caught glimpses of the two cannibals skulking behind sand-dunes, but they found no water. Toward the center of the island, however, the soil was less barren, and here a grove of coconut palms lifted their tufted crests invitingly.

"We will camp in this grove," said the commodore, "and keep guard over these green coconuts. There must be nearly a hundred of them and I notice a little taro root here and there. As those coconuts are full of milk, that insures us life for a week or two if we go on a short ration. By bathin' several times a day we can keep down our thirst some and perhaps it'll rain."

"What if it does?" snapped Captain Scraggs bitterly. "We ain't got nothin' but our hats to catch it in."

"Well, then, Scraggsy, old stick-in-the mud," replied the commodore quizzically, "it's a cinch you'll go thirsty. Your hat looks like a cullender."

Two of our promising young men, who wanted to make a little spare change and get some experience in the world of salesmanship, started out one day last week, taking orders for an Eastern Shirt mill.

They took the 7:56 from Rowan and went to Goodell, having such good success selling shirts that they missed the evening passenger train. Leaving Goodell on high, they arrived in Belmond about 12:30 p. m. with a good appetite which they satisfied as best they could and started on their final journey for Rowan, (on intermediate) arriving in Rowan about 4 a. m.—sore, hungry and tired and only about 2½ lb of steam left—they were unable to whistle for the crossings.

LAW AFFECTING GARAGE OWNERS

County officials have received word from the officials that the new law governing the conduct of public garages must be complied with in every respect. The law affects public garages and repair shops to the extent that specials records must be kept daily in these places of business to show a complete report on the cars taken in at each garage. The provisions of the state law are designing to make it more difficult for the driver of a stolen car to leave the machine at any public garage without the police knowing the whereabouts of the car.

The garage section of the automobile law reads as follows:

"It is hereby made the duty of each and every person, firm, association, corporation, co-partnership, operating a public garage in this state to keep for public inspection a record of the license number and engine or factory serial number of all motor vehicles taken in or held in charge by said garage for the purpose of selling rental, livery, storage or repair. Said record shall be filled out and signed personally by the owner or driver of the motor vehicle taking such vehicle to the garage, and if signed by other than the owner then the owner's name must be signed first, followed by the name of the driver, and shall contain the name and address of the owner of the motor vehicle, the name and address of the person delivering or taking the motor vehicle to the garage and the license number and the engine number thereof, and record shall be verified by the operator of the garage.

"The alteration or obliteration of said engine number shall be prima-facia evidence of larceney of said motor vehicle, and the proprietor, agents, servants or employes, immediately upon the discovery of such obliteration or alteration shall notify the sheriff and police officers of the proper county and shall hold the said motor vehicle for a period of 24 hours or until inevsigation shall have been made by the sheriff or police officers. Provided, however, such record need be made when a motor vehicle is taken in or held in charge a second time when the owner or driver is personally known to the proprietor of such garage, his agent or employee"—News.

We heard yesterday that a Russian over near the county seat, who was engaged in the manufacture of his own private hooch, made a mistake the other day and drank some of his own stuff. He should be in line for a gold medal for life saving, because by his act he saved someone else. He died, let us say, saving others. The board of supervisors was in session Tuesday for the purpose of letting the contract for grading and draining approximately thirty miles of county road. Andrew Norem seeks to recover the sum of $1709 from Iowa Implement Mutual Insurance association of Nevada. For cause of action plaintiff alleges he purchased a residence property in Belmond on contract and applied to the company's local agent for a $2000 policy of insurance, which was paid for when delivered. A few months later the house was practically destroyed by fire. The company settled with James Kenefick, holder of the contract. In this petition Norem alleges he imformed the company's agent, W. H. Purdy, of the conditions of purchase and relied upon him to make proper entry in his application, which was not done, hence the suit.

Sams Purchases Fair Grounds

The sale of the Clarion fair grounds was made the first of the week to Dr. Sams, he buying the same from the Farmers Elevator Co., which acquired ownership some months ago. NEW REPORTS TELL OF FAMINE'S TOLL

Famine and disease in the Volga valley are taking a frightful toll, according to the recent reports received by the American Committee for Russian Famine Relief from the Russian Red Cross.

In Aktubinsk there is no medical aid whatsoever: Among 123,000 people, there are only three physicians. The death rate is terrible. Lacking sufficient help, the corpses are buried in shallow trenches, which threaten a new epidemic in the spring.

Field workers of the Red Cross report that 30 per cent of the inmates of children's home in Orsk died during December. The condition are no better in other districts in this territory. The death rate among children in Uralsk is 36 per cent.

There are 600,000 persons starving in Ekaterineslay district, almost one-third of them children. Only 9,000 children are being fed.

Ninety-six thousand are officially registered as starving in the Kherson district, 48,000 of them children. The figures are not complete, the Red Cross report adds.

These scattered reports from a district as large as Wisconsin, Illinois Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas having a population estimated between 25,000,000 and 33,000,000 will give a hint of the devastation.

Forty-two per cent of the physicians of Russia have died within the last two years or gone insane. Overwork in ministering to the suffering people, weakened their constitions and made them susceptible to disease.

SATURDAY TO DETERMINE BAND QUESTION

Straight Citizens' Ticket Is Elected

R. C. Morse Defeats Opponent ByLarge Majority-- Council Too

BAND TAX LOST BY FOUR

The straight Citizen's Ticket was elected at the municipal election, Monday, by an overwhelming majority. Voting was the heaviest in the history of the town, the feminine vote adding immensely to the total. Seven hundred and seven ballots were cast, which comes very near covering the limit of possible votes.

Morse Wins by 210 Majority

The big fight was doped to be the mayor, and R. C. Morse came thru the battle with his colors flying high, having a majority of 210 votes over L. O. Skovlin, the vote being 451 to 241. The returns when finally counted showed as follows:

For Mayor—Morse 451; Skovlin 241.

For Councimen—Sullivan 493; Russell 447; Simerson 426; Dorenkamp 428; Papousek 400; Thompson 265; Greenlander 203; Griesy 215; Gowly 209; Sampson 167.

Very Few Votes Spoiled

But a very few ballots were spoiled considering the large number cast, there being only eight thrown out. Of the total vote 38 per cent were women. The judges and clerks finished counting between 11 and 12 o'clock Monday night. As usual there were a great many more or less excited folks waiting up for the returns, and getting the returns as they went along. The council room was packed to overflowing by the crowd watching the count and keeping tally as they went along.

The question of a municipal tax of two mills for the support of a band lost by but four votes. Had the ballots all been voted on this question it would very probably have carried but there were 92 ballots handed in blank, unvoted. The vote went 293 for, to 297 against, with 20 spoiled ballots which is remarkable, especially so when but eight were spoiled in the election of city officials with two tickets on the ballot.

The new city officials take office next Monday night.

OBITUARY OF ED. FINCH

Leader: The body of E. Finch was shipped to Belmond Tuesday of this week for burial. He passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs Bertha Maben at Minneapolis, some time Sunday. His daughter, Mrs. Maben and son, Arthur, accompanied the body. The direct cause of his death was pneumonia, but for several years he has not been in good health. He was 78 years of age and a pecular circumstance of his passing is that he was called on his birthday. Ed. Finch was one of the four Finch brothers who are entitled to a place among the pioneers of Garner. It is now nearly thirty-five years since the Ed. Finch family left Garner. They first went to Davenport where they resided for a short time. They returned to Garner and lived here for about a year. Their next move was to Popejoy. Mr. Finch was indentified with his brother, Wm. Finch, in the grain business for many years. Their Garner property is now owned by the Greimen Ditcher Company. He is survived by his wife, Aunt Rose, who by the way, has been poorly for several years, being a sufferer from paralysis; one daughter Mrs. Bertha Maben, and two sons, John and Art, both of Cheyenne, Wyoming. It will be recalled by the older inhabitants that another daughter, Celia, met with a tragic death by being burned in a fire at Belmond, now all of twenty-five years ago. His nieces, Mrs. W. I. Rosecrans and Mrs. W. S. Pritchard, both of this place were present at the funeral service in Belmond, Tuesday. Word of his death was first telegraphed to his niece. Mrs. Mame Martin of Belmond, and it was she who notified other relatives. Art Finch stopped off here Wednesday for a visit with his old friends. Mrs. Maben went to Forest City the same day, but stopped in Garner today for a short time. His sons, John and Art are in the grain business in Wyoming. Of the four brothers who formerly resided here, there is but one living—Frank, of Box Elder, Montana.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Enger and daughters, left for their home at Colorado Springs Wednesday of this week.

Meetings of the Chain of Ten have been postponed until after the revival meetings.

Mrs. Adolph Thompson returned from Cedar Rapids Monday, where she has been visiting her daughter.

YOUR GRANDFATHERS YOUR GRANDMOTHERS AND YOU

The date was 1857, the place Northern Missouri. Civil war was only a few years ahead. Two people were sitting on a fence—a farmer and a merchant. Topic was what? "Think."

The world of finance was twisted; interest was high; money scarce and hard to get. Why? Everybody trying to get the other fellow. Men with money were hoarding it to get the fellow somewhat pinched. Farmers said prduct was too cheap, corn selling at 14 cents, oats too cheap to haul to market. What did they do? Lay Down? No. They all faced the situation, had hope and succeeded. Produce went up.. Land values went up, making this country what you have now, a glorious. free America. What? Yes, you live in it now, just because they boosted. Today the grandsons and the granddaughters are, or rather have, faced the same situation. Only one thing will save the next generation. Get busy; quit talking, look forward; assume the habit of helping the other fellow; buy and dig; let your money out; don't hoard; when you are laid to rest you will only have a shroud the same as the man with 15 cents.

The same sun shines today that shone in 1857; the same true God lives and reigns as did then. Just have faith; 1921 was good but 1922 will be better; it is up to you. It stands before us. It challenges you and me to spend less, earn more, save the small earnings; endure a few hardships, for that steels us to better things. Help one another; show the world we are from the old 1857 stock and 100 per cent American rustlers, out to win.

Oh well, the city election is over and no bones broken. Put your shoulder to the wheel—make Belmond a city to be respected. Look at the large sugar factory and its tall smokestack—it stands for INDUSTRY and a prosperous community. EVERYBODY SAY "HALLELUJA," LET'S GO"

W. H. WOLLE.

OPERATION FINANCED

Practically all the funds needed for operation of the sugar factory have been raised at this writing, and the plans for operation of the plant are rapidly going forward. The various fieldmen out soliciting the very necessary acreage, are meeting with quite good success, and more acreage is being contracted every day. It is understood that, at this writing, some three thousand acres have been contracted for the Iowa Valley Operating Co. this season, which certainly is an excellent record for the brief time that has been spent in working. It is probable that in the near future, work will begin towards get- the factory in shape for the campaign, overhauling the machinery, etc.. The Dyer Company, we understand, are to do this. An immense amount of detail work has to be gone thru, and much still remains, but the affairs appear to be rounding into good shape and active plans are well under way for the fall campaign.

Representative

I hereby formally announce my candidacy for re-election to the office of representative of Wright county, subject to the decision of the republican voters at the primaries to be held June 5, 1922.

TO INSTALL RADIOPHONE IN BUSINESS HOUSES

Belmond Battery Co., Clem Cannon And Independent To Co-operate

Joe Scott, of the Belmond Battery Station Co., Clem Cannon, and the editor of the Independent are cooperating in the installation of a wireless receiving station, or radiophone, which is to be installed in the Independent office. It is expected to have the outfit up and ready for operation within a few days, or as soon as the equipment reaches Belmond and can be erected.

A radiophone of sufficient magnitude is being installed capable of "listening in" to concerts, market reports, and the thousand and one things being broadcasted every day, as far as Pittsburg, or farther. Two receiving sets are to be placed, one in the Battery Company office, and one in the Independent office. Later it is planned to install an amplifier, with which concerts received can be heard for considerable distance from the receiver.

When ready for operation, the public will be cordially invited to come in and listen to the concerts being received. The wireless phone is the outstanding wonder of the 20th century, and while still in its infancy, has yet been developed to the point where it is no longer impractical. The Independent expects to give its readers later on the latest market reports, received from Chicago and Omaha. Mr. Scott handles special radio batteries for wireless work, along with his automobile batteries, and Mr. Cannon, who has been studying electricity at Ames, is familiar with the line.

Owing to the many improvements and changes which are constantly being made in wireless equipment, the three men named are not going as far now as had been planned, but expect later to add to their "plant" as desired. You are invited to come in and "see what makes it tick" as soon as installed.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Frohling and children were Sunday visitors at the home of Henry Schulte Sr.

Mr. and Mrs. Harm H. Pals were visitors at the Chas. Barkema home one evening last week.

Mrs. D. D. Pals, who was very ill the past wek is somewhat improved at this writing

Mr. and Mrs. Harm Braner are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby boy at their home.

Mr. Fol Mennenga, who was sick at the home of his parents in Belmond, visited his children on the farm last Sunday.

LOUIE FASTER THAN HIS CARS

As a salesman, Louie Tokman appears to take not only the cake but the whole bakery as well. Louie handles the well known and justly famous car popularly called 'Henry" technically known as the Ford, and during the past three weeks has sold a carload a week. Which we claim is going some, especially as each carload contains seven or eight cars. Therefore Louie has sold in the past three weeks a total of 21 to 24 cars. Not half bad. is it? Especially in these "hard times." Cars are not the only sellers, however, as he says it looks like there would be a big demand for tractors this spring, also.

Mrs. Winey and children, from Spencer, were guests at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lynch, last week.

SANDS MEMORIAL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

There will not be a meeting for Bible study on Thursday night on account of the protracted meetings which are in progress at the M. E. church.

The young people have been planing for a long time for a social evening and have chosen Friday night for it.

Painters and decorators are treating the walls and ceilings of the various offices at the court house with a fresh coat of paint which has brightened things up considerably.

Geo. L. Webster, ex-treasurer of Wright county, has started foreclosure proceedings against Amos H. Thompson et al. Six $2000 notes were given in a land sale and plaintiff asks judgment in the aggregate of $14,564.

Lawrence McLean, a Great Western brakeman, who alleges he accidently discharged the contents of a shot gun into his foot while hunting rabbits last fall is suing the Massachusetts Insurance C. on his accident policy, seeking to recover the sum of $2400.

Another foreclosure suit growing out of a land sale is that of W. L. Robinson vs. Archie McCallum et al. Suit is brought by the holder of the second $8000 mortgage; there is also a third mortgage for $2000, besides several hundred dollars in interest, taxes and costs.

Because of the non-payment of a $792 note Geo. and John Whyte of Goldfield ask the foreclosure of a $14,400 mortgage given for the purchase of a 160 acre farm by Chris Christenson et al. On the following day Chas. Troyer, one of the defendants in the above case, filed a foreclosure suit against the same defendants to collect the sum of $10,695.40 on a similar transaction.

Chris Christenson of Woolstock asks damages in the sum of $1041 from the Independent Grain & Lumber Co. For cause of action plaintiff alleges his tenant Leo Johnson delivered his share of the 1921 corn crop, 1958 bushels, to the foresaid company on or about February 7, 1922, which defendant's had agreed to store free of charge for fifteen days; that ten day later plaintiff called and learning the price offered his corn for sale; that defendant refused to comply with the request, claiming they had purchased said corn from the tenant; this plaintiff denies as his tenant had no authority to sell Taxes will become delinquent next Saturday, April 1st, and according to Treasurer Alen the prepayments are about on an average with other years at this time. Strictly speaking taxes are delinquent March 1st, but the one per cent penalty does not attach until April 1st. The complaint is quite general that taxes are much higher than last year. This is true only in rural districts where advantage was taken of the law permitting the school boards to issue warrants for the needed funds to carry on the school work. The total amount for the county was only $75,000. The levies for this year and next will take up these warrants.

GOODFELLOWSHIP CLUB

The regular meeting of the Good Fellowship Club was held last week Wednesday evening, in the library basement, and was very enjoyable. Wilbur H. Bender, of Des Moines, was the speaker, his subject being "Education for a Republican Democracy." Mr. Bender handled his topic in an able manner, and brought out some excellent points along the line of his subject.

A crowd of around 90 men was present, and good fellowship was in evidence. The audience was favored by a couple of selections from the quartette. Owing to the absence of one of the quartette, W. T. Gfeller substituted, and so well did he render his part that Mikesell, on behalf of the club, presented him with one of the bouquets. Mr. Gfeller's acceptance was as graceful as his singing was excellent, and both were thoroly enjoyed by the crowd.

The usual good eats were had, and a social hour spent. The Good Fellowship club is rapidly gaining in membership, and its programs are improving with every meeting, so much as it is possible for them to improve, for they are all excellent. If you aren't a Good Fellow better get in; you're missing something.

Last Effort To Be Made For Home Band

Defeat Of Band Tax Causes Business Men To Feel Much Discouraged

ONE MORE EFFORT MADE

Does Belmond want a band? If we do, we have just one last resort to secure one this summer. The people will be given an opportunity Saturday of this week to give their last answer.

The business men of Belmond are much in favor of a band, and, with the tax failing to carry Monday, they were somewhat inclined in disgust to let the matter drop. However, as a last resort, the following proposition is presented to Belmond citizens:

On Saturday afternoon, April 1, the Belmond High School Boys' Band of twenty pieces will give a concert on Main Street at three o'clock. Prof. Greutzmacher, the leader, has agreed to have the boys give a short concert to acquaint Belmond people with the organization. Listen to the boys, consider that their concert is given after only four rehearsals, that many of the players never played an instrument before in their lives, and, if after hearing them, you want to consider the following proposition, be prepared to drop your nickle in the fund:

The boys' band will give four months concerts this summer without pay; all they ask is their expenses and the expenses of the concerts. Prof. Greutzmacher will donate his time in keeping the boys in practice, and in addition, if the people will support them, donate each member of the band a free lesson a week thruout the summer. The business men will donate their time and money to keep the boys going.

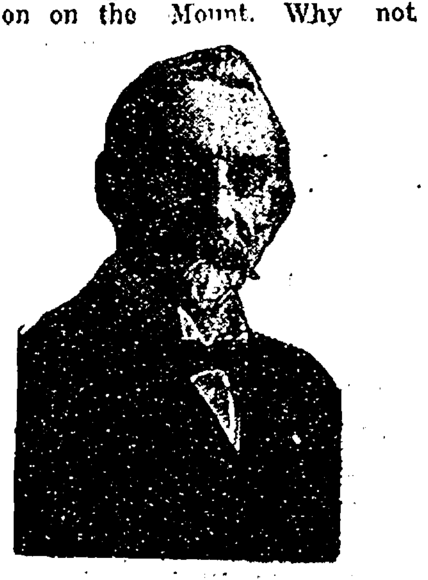
The plan of financing is this: You are asked to give whatever you wish; a dime, a dollar, or ten or twenty; whatever you want to. The money will go into a band fund for the purpose of paying the necessary expenses; and if, at the end of the season there is anything left, give the boys something. A full account will be published of everything given and spent. The boys are willing; the leader is willing; the business men are willing; are you? It is the last chance.

Belmond had a boys' band several years ago, when Prof. Scarbro was here, and it gave universal satisfaction. Prof. Greutmacher guarantees to have the boys in good shape by the time of the opening concert. During his absence of seven weeks this summer attending summer school, Adolph Skovlin agrees to take charge of the band. If the people of Belmond want to keep Belmond on the map, let them signify it by supporting the boys.

Saturday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. Hear them; form your opinion; and then ACT.

REVIVAL MEETINGS

Rev. J. C. Ludgate is pleasing those who hear him. He has been greeted with good audiences. All who hear him in his afternoon talks want to come again. At 2:30 each day he will give an address on the Sermon on the Mount. Why not give an hour each day to this study?



Services each evening at 7:30 p. m. Come learn a new song each evening.

Sunday services: Sunday School at 10:00 a. m.; Preaching at 11:00 a. m. and 7:30 p. m; Epworth League at 6:30 p. m.

We surely appreciate the friends of the Congregational church giving up the Thursday evening prayer service in order to attend the services.

W. A. Wilkinson, Pastor.

Mrs. Postel, of Wisconsin, who has been visiting with her sister, Mrs. Louise Veeder, at the hospital in Rochester, stopped over one day last week with her sister, Miss Anna Massman, who is staying with Miss Mildred during her mother's absence. Miss Massman just recently returned from California. Mrs. Veeder is reported as recovering nicely from her recent operation.

REQUIESCAT IN PACE

Now that the all-absorbing political fight is over, perhaps we can get back to normal again and review the field for further endeavors. First among them, perhaps, is the question of a band.

Are we going to have one? The Independent is informed that the chances are exceedingly slim. No-one seems to take sufficient interest in one to start anything. The Chamber of Commerce, upon which rightly rests the problem of providing Belmond a band, appears to have passed the buck, along with the bunk, and left it up to "George." As an organization, Belmond's Chamber of Commerce is a first-class cubist picture, starting nowhere for nowhere and arriving at the same place. It has the sleeping sickness in an acute form. If some kind-hearted person will kindly arrange for the flowers, it can be laid to rest from its' weary labors any time.

The writer has talked with many of the business men, and without exception found them in favor of the band, even anxious, and willing to back it with their hard-earned coin. We found them willing to do their part in securing concerts this summer. The business men will put up a thousand dollars. We are told the band will not play for this sum. If so, then let the band and the business men get together and see if they cannot compromise, or else let the Chamber of Commerce step in and arrange the matter. It was the Chamber of Commerce band last year, and rightly so; is ought to be this year. You never will get Belmond anywhere by lying down on the job; if the town needs something, it seems to us that a way can be arranged to get it.

If Belmond lets the band go, it will let hundreds of people go also every Saturday evening this summer. To jump in the car and drive to Clarion or Garner on a nice evening will be an easy thing to do; a nice, pleasant little trip, for Belmond folks; and we cannot imagine, no matter how hard we try, people from Rowan, Alexander, Meservey and Goodell coming to Belmond on Saturday night just to walk up and down Main street and gaze at the electroliers.

If we're going to be dead this summer, let's publicly announce the fact and save a lot of people from entertaining false hopes. It might, just possibly might, have a bearing in business also. What do you think?

ROBINSON FOR CONGRESS

T. J. B. Robinson, of Hampton, is a candidate for United States Representative from this district, and wherever he has campaigned so far, has met with almost unqualified support.

Mr. Robinson is pretty well known in this part of the country. He has been one of the most prominent bankers at Hampton for many years, has been activly interested in the farming industry in Franklin and the surrounding counties, and is a practical, hardheaded business man. He is a prominent member of the Methodist church at Hampton, and his philanthrophies have been the means of assisting more than one young man to get ahead.

He was a member of the Iowa senate for four years, where he was one of the leaders, and he is fully aware of the "ropes" and the game. His record thruout his private and public life has been clean and straightforward, and the Independent believes he will make a good man for the place. Mr. Robinson will doubtless be in Belmond during the campaign, and local people will have an opportunity to "size him up." We believe he will pass the test O. K.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS

Well, now that the election is over how did you like it? Funny how the American people raise such a hullabaloo over politics, and then after the big fight forget all about it until the next time.

And the town, like the nation always does, will go right along just the same as ever—despite the wild ideas of some before the election.

Pretty soon you are going to meet the slogan in every periodical you pick up: "Have you a little wireless in your home?"

One thing about this wireless phone, it's going to let some folks in on concerts without any charge—which will be attractive.

CLIPPINGS

"A Prophet Without Honor"

You know that a prophet is always without honor in his own country. D. M. Stephens was a candidate for the school board in Goldfield last week and was defeated, 74 to 143 votes. Evidently the Goldfield people themselves do not approve of Mr. Stephen's proposals for cutting off funds for athletics, which was one of the things the Stephen's petition called for.—News.

MRS. PREENY'S VICTORY

Country Gentleman: For years Mrs. Tom Preeny agreed with her husband when he said it made no difference what people thought of them, but she changed her mind, or rather she has begun saying what she really has felt all the time. Recently when she told him that everybody wondered why they didn't live better, he once more announced that it made no difference what people thought.

"Well I can tell you right now," she said, "that it does make a difference to me. I have spent a good many years of my life with the people of this neighborhood, and I expect to spend the most of my days here, and it makes a big difference to me what they think. It is all very well to say that we are just what we are regardless of other people's opinions, but to an extent at least my pleasure depends upon what they think of me and my family I don't want to be looked down upon and I don't want to be pitied. I want people to come and see me, and I want the home fixed up so I won't be ashamed for them to come here. It may be true that men think just as much of a man when he goes around with his clothes in shreds. altho I doubt it; but I know that women don't like to go anywhere with a women who always looks as if somebody had given her a lot of cast-off clothes. I believe in being good. but I believe in keeping up appearances."

When Mrs. Preeny finished making this talk she left the room, but she was so noisy with her house cleaning that Tom could tell that she was in a real state of revolution. He waited half a day for her to bring up the subject again, but when it began to look as if she were never going to say anything else to him he asked her how much money it would take to fix everything so the family would be as good as the neighbors.

THE FARMER'S WIFE

A well cooked egg dish is always a welcome substitute for meat for the light meal of the day. Escalloped eggs, curried, scrambled, shirred and stuffed eggs, egg salad and omelet are some of the ways of using eggs which have a food value comparing favorable with meat, milk, cheese and other animal foods.

The following is a tested recipe for foamy omelet: 4 eggs, 4 T. milk or water, 1 T. salt, pepper and 2 T. butter. Separate the yolks and whites of the eggs. Beat the yolks of the eggs until creamy; add seasoning and milk or water. Then beat the whites until stiff and cut and fold them into the yolk mixture. Place the butter in a pan, heat, and turn the omelet into it. Cook slowly (this is an important rule in good omelet making) occasionally turning the pan so that the omelet may brown evenly. When the omelet is set and delicately browned underneath, place it in a hot oven for a few minutes to dry the top. Fold and serve immediately.

To fold an omelet properly—first run a spatula under the omelet to loosen it, then make a slight incision with a knife through the middle of the omelet at right angles to the handle of the pan. Grasp the handle of the pan in the right hand, placing the back of the hand underneath with the thumb pointing away from you. Turn the omelet upon a platter.

Don't let the March winds tear your sheets and tablecloths when they are hanging on the closeline. A few moments spent in hanging them carefully so that both ends are well over the line will save time in darning holes.

Farm Bureau News

By R. M. Edwards

Wright County farm bureau has decided to take up the project of determining the varieties of corn which yield best under our growing conditions. You probably think that your variety of corn is giving best results, but if it were compared with other varieties under the same growing conditions you might find another variety which would give higher yield.

Each farmer who is interested in finding out just how good a yielder his corn is in comparison with other varieties is asked to furnish his township chairman with ten ears of his best seed. Plots of ground will be selected which are as nearly uniform in fertility as possible. Two rows of each variety of corn will be planted side by side with other varieties with two check rows at regular intervals throughout this field. The corn will be planted at the rate of five kernals per hill and will be thinned down to three so as to get a perfect stand,, and the same varieties will be planted in the various test plots.

The county agent will assist the co-operator who furnishes the land for the demonstration in planting the corn,, marking the rows and in keeping all records. In the fall of the year meetings will be held when we will get together, each bringing a team and wagon, if possible, to husk his corn. Rows about 40 rods long are best, so that an hour's work from each furnishing the seed will husk the corn which is weighed tested for moisture content and final results figured up.

This is your opportunity to compare your seed corn with other varieties. If you have been in doubt as to the yielding quality of your corn then get in on this test. Don't put it off, but act now and let the county agent know what you want to be included in the test. Plans are being made for four test plots in various parts of the county.

Officers and directors of Wright county farm bureau have decided to begin looking over the interests of the boys and girls, the men and women of tomorrow, by organizing Junior Poultry Clubs throughout the county. Boys and girls between the ages of 10-20 inclusive are eligible to membership in the poultry club.

Club members are required to set fifteen or more eggs from some standard variety of poultry, raise the chicks to four months of age after which time they may be disposed of or kept for breeding, do the work of caring for the chicks, except in case of illness or unavoidable emergency and exhibit one or more birds at a poultry show. preferably at the Iowa state fair, where very liberal prizes will be given, also a handsome banner to the county making the best exhibit. Members will be furnished with bulletins which will treat on all subjects regarding poultry. By the end of the season, club members will practically have been given a full course on poultry husbandry.

Parents are repuested to get back of this work and help their children in getting started. Poultry is the one sure means of revenue on the farm today and this work should be encouraged by every farm bureau member..

Boys and girls, if you wish to enroll in this work, get in touch with the county agent. Members should get their eggs set as early as possible so as to have chicks ready to show at the state fair.

Mr. I. W. Van Nice, assistant agent leader for this section of Iowa, met with the board of directors of our local county farm bureau last Tuesday, March 28th.

Mr. Van Nice is sent out from the state office at Ames, to reorganize the work in the various offices in his territory and give suggestions for carrying forth the work more efficiently. Most members have met Mr. Van Nice and know that he is entirely familiar with the administrative department of the county agent work. Mr. Van Nice's coming is generally welcomed by the board members because of helpful suggestions which he usually gives out. which he usually gives out.

The subjects are vitally related to the young people of our communities and shoud be helpful to those who are perplexed with the problems of our day.

CHARACTER AS AN ASSET

Character wins many times when cash is apparently beyond reach.. Business loans always hinge on the character of the man who needs them. If his character is doubtful the loan must be abundantly secured by collateral, and in many cases where the character is bad, loans are flatly refused regardless of security.

No man in business knows what may turn up to put him in financial distress, particularly in times such as the present, when credit is more or less uncertain, and sudden and unexpected needs swamp all cash reserves and demand large amounts in addition. Then character counts heavily and decisively. The reputation of a business is one thing; the character of the men who conduct it is quite another. Banks give reputation all due consideration; but in times of stress and desparate need it is character that decides the future of many a man in business. Therefore, build character as you go along. It is a pillar of strength.—Exchange.

When We Promise

If we say your battery is going to be ready for you at ten a. m. Saturday, you can depend on having it then; or of getting a phone call from us in advance explaining why it won't be ready.

And it doesn't make a bit of difference whether it happens to be a Willard Battery or some other make—you get the same consideration, the same courtesy, the same skilled workmanship.

Bring your battery to Battery Headquarters! You may be sure we won't try to sell you a battery if repair of your present one is going to save you money.

Vol. 1 BELMOND, IOWA, MARCH 30, 1922. No. 4.

CORN WANTED

More corn—more bushels to the acre, lower production costs. It's the way that farmers can make money in 1922. You spend just as much time plowing, harrowing and cultivating whether your planter works or not. Don't risk your crop—buy a new Hayes or International Planter, priced right.

FOR RENT

We have a few good lots for garden purposes which we will rent very reasonable. Call No. 10 or 105.

Did you know that high test kerosene and gasoline is the cheapest to use in the long run. We have both.

For any street errand your wish done, don't hesitate in calling Phone No. 10.

Just arrived—A large shipment of bulk and packet garden and flower seeds and onion sets.

PLAN NOW FOR BETTER YIELDS

Farmers blessed with a keen sense of observation have noticed that an A-1 job of seeding is absolutely essential to the growing of big yields. Too much seed—or if it is bunched and scattered—is just as bad as not enough. Old Mother Nature will not be fooled. Do your seeding with a Hoosier seeder—a seeder that does not "skip" or "bunch" and does not crush or crack kernels—then Nature will generously reward your good judgment at harvest time.

Smile a while, and while you smile
another smiles,
And soon there's miles and miles
of smiles,
And life's worth while because you smile.

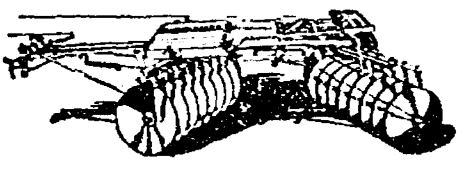
NO HUMP HERE

The International disk harrow cannot hump up in the middle. The adjustable snubbing block, together with the shape of the strong connection bars, holds the gangs just where you put them. There are other features on International harrows you will like. There's the built-in weight box, for example. And the angle-steel, wedge-shape frame. Spring tension scrapers, easy-to-fill grease cups, dustproof bearings, bumper gang construction, etc. Next time you're in town drop into the store. We have a full line of tillage implements and you'll enjoy looking them over whether you expect to buy or not.



Make a better friend of everybody you deal with and your success and happiness will be assured.

CHICKENS—SURE

Then come in and let us show you our brooders that take the place of the laying hen. To be sure and get good strong heathy chicks use our Quaker chick starter. It's guaranteed.

CLEAN UP. PAINT UP.

Before you contract that job of painting or interior decorating investigate our line of Minnesota Paints, Oils, Varnishes and Dutch Boy White Lead. Not the cheapest but the best.

PROBLEM IN SUBTRACTION

Find how much a farmer really pays for a stripped Titan tractor, formerly sold at $900 but now sold at a reduction of $200 including complete equipment worth $130, and a plow worth at least $175, free.

Former Titan price	$900
Amount of reduction	200
Value of 3-bottom plow given free	175
	525
Value of necessary equipment included in regular price	130
Answer	$395

A farmer actually pays $395 for a stripped Titan. Remember the Titan is a 3-plow tractor.

It's a useless task to strike a match and look into your tank to see if you need gas—you won't need any.

TO HEAR NEW YORK CONCERT

Chronicle: The Hobbie Auto Company and the Iowa Battery Service Station are jointly installing a radio receiving station in the Hobbie garage and have already a great deal of work done. At the present they are waiting for the arrival of more parts before the station will be ready for use and it will probably be about ten or more days before the outfit is completely set up.

All of the equipment will be of the latest and most improved type and with it messages may be received from navy, commerical, special land and ship to shore stations. Concerts by fine orchestras and bands, lectures, church services on Sunday and many other novel entertainments may be heard from the radio broadcasting stations at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Chicago; Sprinfield. Massachusetts; Newark, New Jersey; Detroit, Michigan and many other cities.

As soon as the receiving station is ready the public will be given an opportunity to hear anything from market reports to first class vaudeville patter at the Hobbie Auto Company. The set is to be equipped with a system of amplifiers that will make a band in New York City sound as if it were playing out in front of the Hobbie garage.

L. W. Hobbie, manager of the Hobbie Auto Company, announces that he will probably handle a complete line of radio supplies as soon as the business becomes so standardized as to enable him to do so. Already the Iowa Battery Service Station has started to receive a stock of radio batteries of every type to take the place of dry cells usually used.

A receiving set has already been sold to the Farmers Elevator Company by the Hobbie garage and as soon as this set is installed Manager C. C. Scantlebury reports that the Farmers Elevator Company will always have the latest market reports.

BOYS

Boys are well-known. You don't have to go to far lands or to the County Fair to look upon them. Everywhere, it is still the style to have Boys.

Perhaps you are trying to run one or more Boys right this minute. Then you will know that since the world began they were never so tremendously important as now. Your hopes and your aims center on them. You must deliver them out of Boyhood into successful Manhood.

Will your sons stay with the land, or will the will-o-the-wisp of the cities call them away? Armies of country Boys, who could be happiest and most successful on farms, respond to the artificial glamour of town life before they are old enough to know their own minds. They do not know that the rewards of country life—in money, health, and happiness—are far greater. Make them realize that! Guide the restless ambitions of your Boys and spare no pains!

Machines have been a powerful factor in stemming the flow to the cities. Machines banish drudgery and make labor interesting; machines foster the love of mechanics in the Boy; machines are builders of fortunes.

You now own many of the machines made by the International Harvester Company. We are headquarters for the International Full Line, including Titan tractors, International engines, and manure spreaders, Primrose cream separators, McCormick and Deering harvesting, haying, and corn machines, tillage tools, P&O plows, etc. Give the Boys every chance for liking farming and farm life. Perhaps more of these machines will help keep them contented.

C. Bier 1.
Mrs. H. Reif 1.

For Assessor—
H. F. Reif 70.
Mrs. Reif 8.

There was but one ticket on the ballot and this accounts for the mixture of votes—the old guard apparently made little effort to carry the election. Several young wouldbe Tammany Hall leaders were out soliciting votes but did little good.

The men elected are all business men and have interests on main street and should have the united support of all the citizens to make Meservey a better place to live.

School Notes

The entire faculty went over our physical labaratory last Monday evening in order to be sure that the promiscious placing of apparatus did not form anything that might look suspicious to the causual observer. The only thing found which might draw criticism, was a piece of rubber tubing about two feet long, that had a one and a half turn twist in it. This was immediately straightened out. We are sure that it will stand a Volstead inspection.

The class in agriculture is very busy figuring our balanced rations for all classes of live stock this week. They use the terms, proteins, Carbohydrates, fats and nutritive ratio as glibly as a housewife speak of coffee and tea.

The high school play for this year is "Deacon Dubbs." The participants are hard at work upon it now. It will be given just as soon as possible.

We don't want to be placed at the mercy of rainy weather that always assists us in the last week activities.

The high school pupils were entertained at a party given last Friday night in the auditorium. All report an excellent time.

Everything moved along smoothly. There was just enough evidence of the eternal triangle to make it interesting. Bennie and Water were two sides of the triangle. Now if you are a mathematican you should be able to find the third side. The Misses Whetstone and Benard chaperoned the party.

The Domestic Science girls are very busy indeed. In fact they are at top speed. Those who have sampled their wares in the Culinary Art say that they are improving right along.

A Mr. Williams representing the "Near East Relief," will visit our community in the near future. Several reels will be thrown upon the screen showing the actual conditions and the sad plight of our neighbors asross the sea. No admission will be charged. All contributions will be voluntary.

Miss Gladys Hauge of Belmond visited our school one day last week. Miss Hauge was the guest of the Misses Alman and Ruth Johnson.

The reels for next Tuesday night April 4th are "The Panama Canal," "Current Occurences," showing the manufacturing and the use of electrical household utensils. We are supposed to have a comedy if we don't get beat out of it again.

Beginning next Sunday, April 2, the evening services will begin half an hour later. Let us also remember that next Sunday is communion Sunday.

MAIL CARRIERS COUNT THE HOGS

A special report that will indicate the probable pig population of the leading swine states this spring and next fall will be made by the United States department of agriculture cooperating with the United States post office department early in May, it was announced. Over 24,000 rural mail carriers connected with 9,500 post offices in the fourteen representative states will collect the necessary data about May 1.

The plan is to secure reports on simple card questionaires from not less than twelve farms on each rural route in the various states. This information will be collected by rural mail carriers in the regular course of delivering mail and returned to the department of agriculture at Washington for tabulation.

The card can be filled out in less than two minutes.

In Fourteen States

The states to be covered are Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, Special efforts will be made to have the returns truly representative of the territory from which they are taken. From these "sample returns ratios, percentages, and state totals can be worked out of farms in these states.

The information on each card will be confidential, and only percentages and totals will be published. The card will indicate the total acreage in each farm and total acreage of crop land, including hay land. The number of sows which farrowed or are due to farrow between Jan. 1 and June 30 1922, will be shown as well as the number of sows on farms last year which farrowed between the same the same dates in 1921. Similar information will be given with regard to sows farrowing between July 1 and Dec. 31. The average litter for the first six months of 1921 will be shown.

Of Value To Farmers

The questionaire is so simply arranged that the giving of all this information requires the notation of only nine figures and the name and address of the farmer. The survey and estimate will be made at remarkably small cost.

An accurate estimate of the probable pig population for the year will be of great value to hog raisers. This information, considered in connection with the estimate consumptive demand, will enable growers to plan their operations and marketing so that the supply at all times will be in proper relation to the demand which in turn will tend to stablize prices throughout the year and prevent wide range in prices. Both the producer and consumer will be benefited by such a condition.

CULLS

Grain weevil and bran bugs caused South Dakota grain to be docked at the terminals in 1921 for the first time in the history of the state.

The last man to starve will be a farmer.

A sheltered shed, a rack of hay,
Is all the milk cow wants.
Just feed her well three times a day
And then you'll have no runts.

It is a poor workman who finds fault with his tools; but he who goes on the job with dull tools is still worse.

Questions are the key holes in the door of success.

The use of poisoned bait in the control of grasshoppers , cut worms and army worms is discussed in a State college extension circular which is now being printed.

The silo causes many folks
To open wide their eyes,
The quality of feed therefrom
Gives many a surprise.

Drys have no objection to brandy in mince pies; but they won't trust the wets with the brandy.

IOWA WAR ON CORN BORER PEST

Agricultural interests over the state are considering what plans of attack should be used against the corn borer, which is proving to be very destructive to the corn crop in some states. In districts where the corn borer has secured a start, the destruction is reported as ranging from fifty to one hundred percent of the corn. College authorities at Ames are planning to inspect as much of the seed corn brought into the state as possible in an effort to prevent this pest from gaining a foot hold on the corn crop of Iowa. Farmers all over the state are asked to be on the lookout for this pest and to give the state college authorities every assistance possible to prevent unnessary destruction of the crop.

The president of Iowa State College at Ames, R. A. Pearson, together with F. A. Fenton, acting state entomologist of the college met with Governor Kendall several days ago to consider the advisability of issuing a quarantine on the European borer, which has proven so destructive in the eastern states. The purpose of this quarantine is to prevent the intrastate shipment of corn, broom corn and other plants which can carry the eggs of this destructive insect. The federal government has issued a quarantine against interstate shipment of the egg carrying grains from the state affected, it was stated.

Those who have charge of this movement state that law passed by the thirty-eighth legislature would cover the violation of the quarantine to be issued by the Iowa State College and that the penalty for the offense would be, according to this statute, a hundred dollar fine or thirty days in jail.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is skipper, Neils Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII. — Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.—Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer. Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

CHAPTER X.—Our three adventurers form a "syndicate," with the gunboat, which they have renamed the Maggie II, as their base of operations. They sail for the South Sea islands, where they plan to obtain valuable black coral.

CHAPTER XI.—Going ashore with supposedly friendly natives, Gibney and Scraggs are taken prisoners, to be held for a cannibal feast.

CHAPTER XII. — McGuffey, believing his friends to have been killed, shells the island. Gibney and Scraggs escape, and reach the ship with two prisoners, the king of the island and his "prime minister." Utilizing the blacks as divers, the "syndicate" collects a valuable cargo of black coral and sails for home. With the double idea of punishing the cannibals for their treachery and having some fun with Scraggs, who is not fond of a fight, Gibney and McGuffey arrange a fistic combat with the prisoners, Gibney to fight one and Scraggs the other. The five land on a desert island, and while they are engaged in the fistic fun the steamer sails, leaving the five marooned.

CHAPTER XIII.—When the ship arrives in Honolulu, Neils Halvorsen, former member of the Maggie's crew, suspects foul play and, seizing the vessel while the white crew is ashore, obtains a crew of natives and sets out to find the owners, guided only by information he obtains from the ship's log. He reaches the island just in time to save the lives of his old friends.

CHAPTER XIV.—In reward for his services, Neils Halvorsen is made a member of the "syndicate." At Honolulu the cargo is sold for a large sum and the owners of the Maggie II, fearing the Mexican government might cause trouble over the captured gunboat, present the vessel to the treacherous mate who had left them marooned on the island. In San Francisco the corporation plans the management of its wealth. Gibney purchases a derelict which turns out to be loaded with codfish, seemingly worthless, and resenting the bitter criticism of his associates for wasting their money, that gentleman resigns from the "syndicate." He and Halvorsen join hands and McGuffey and Scraggs, in partnership, purchase a small schooner, the Victor, planning to engage in coastwise trade. Gibney makes a contract with Scraggs to ship five hundred tons of "agricultural stuff" on the Victor. The "agricultural stuff" turns out to be the codfish, which by this time is an advanced stage of decay, and the shipment naturally would make the Victor worthless for passenger service, which the owners had planned. After natural acrimonious exchange of personalities, Mr. Gibney relents and releases the owners of the Victor from their contract. Scraggs, however, refuses to be pacified and withdraws from the "syndicate," announcing his intention of engaging in "chicken farming." With McGuffey and Halvorsen, Gibney purchases a power schooner and the three sail for the South seas, presumably to engage in occupations dear to their adventurous souls.

Captain Scraggs choked with rage, and Mr. Gibney, springing at the nearest palm, shinned to the top of it in the most approved sailor fashion. A moment later, instead of coconuts, rich unctuous curses began to descend on McGuffey and Scraggs.

"Gib, my dear boy," inquired Scraggs, "whatever is the matter of you?"

"That hound Tabu-Tabu's been strippin' our coconut grove," roared the commodore. "He must have spent half the night up in these trees."

"Thank the Lord they didn't take 'em all," said McGuffey piously. "Chuck me down a nut, Gib," said Captain Scraggs. "I'm famished."

In conformity with the commodore's plans, the castaways made camp in the grove. For a week they subsisted on gooneys, taro root, coconuts and coconut milk, and a sea-turtle which Scraggs found wandering on the beach. This suggested turtle eggs to Mr. Gibney, and a change of diet resulted. Nevertheless, the unaccustomed food, poorly cooked as it was, and the lack of water, told cruelly on them, and their strength failed rapidly.

At the end of a week, all hands were troubled with indigestion and McGuffey developed a low fever. They had lost much flesh and were a white, haggard-looking trio. On the afternoon of the tenth day on the island the sky clouded up and Mr. McGuffey predicted a williwaw. Captain Scraggs inquired feebly if it was good to eat.

That night it rained, and to the great joy of the marooned mariners Mr. Gibney discovered, in the center of a big sandstone rock, a natural reservoir that held about ten gallons of water. They drank to repletion and felt their strength return a thousand-fold. Tabu-Tabu and the king came into camp about this time, and pleaded for a ration of water. Mr. Gibney, swearing horribly at them, granted their request, and the king, in his gratitude, threw himself at the commodore's feet and kissed them. But Mr. Gibney was not to be deceived, and after furnishing them with a supply of water in coconut calabashes, he ordered them to their own side of the island.

On the eighteenth day the last drop of water was gone, and on the twenty-second day the last of the coconuts disappeared. The prospects of more rain were not bright. The gooneys were becoming shy and distrustful and the syndicate was experiencing more and more difficulty, not only in killing them, but in eating them. McGuffey, who had borne up uncomplainingly, was shaking with fever and hardly able to stagger down the beach to look for turtle eggs. The syndicate was sick, weak and emaciated almost beyond recognition, and on the twenty-fifth day Captain Scraggs fainted twice. On the twenty-sixth day McGuffey crawled into the shadow of a stunted mimosa bush and started to pray!

It was the finish. The commodore knew it, and sat with bowed head in his gaunt arms, wondering, wondering. Slowly his body began to sway; he muttered something, slid forward on his face, and lay still. And as he lay there on the threshold of the unknown he dreamed that the Maggie II came into view around the headland, a bone in her teeth and every stitch of canvas flying. He saw her luff up into the wind and hang there shivering; a moment later her sails came down by the run, and he saw a little splash under her port bow as her hook took bottom. There was a commotion on decks, and then to Mr. Gibney's dying ears came faintly the shouts and songs of the black boys as a whaleboat shot into the breakers and pulled swiftly toward the beach. Mr. Gibney dreamed that a white man sat in the stern sheets of this whaleboat, and as the boat touched the beach it seemed to Mr. Gibney that this man sprang ashore and ran swiftly toward him. And—

Mr. Gibney twisted his suffering lips into a wry smile as he realized the oddities of this mirage—it seemed to him that this visionary white man bore a striking resemblance to Neils Halvorsen. Neils Halvorsen, of all men! Old Neils, "the squarehead" deckhand of the green-pea trade! Dull, bowlegged Neils, with his lost dog smile and his—

Mr. Gibney rubbed his eyes feebly and half staggered to his feet. What was that? A shout? Without doubt he had heard a sound that was not the moaning of their remorseless prison-keeper, the sea. And—

"Hands off," shrieked Mr. Gibney and struck feebly at the imaginary figure rushing toward him. No use. He felt himself swept into strong arms and carried an immeasurable distance down the beach. Then somebody threw water in his face and pressed a drink of brandy and sweet water to his parched lips. His swimming senses rallied a moment, and he discovered that he was lying in the bottom of a whaleboat. McGuffey lay beside him, and on a thwart in front of him sat good old Neils Halvorsen with Captain Scraggs' head on his knees. As Mr. Gibney looked at this strange tableau Captain Scraggs opened his eyes, glanced up at Neils Halvorsen, and spoke:

"Why if it ain't old squarehead Neils," he muttered wonderingly. "If it ain't Neils, I'll go to hades or some other seaport." He closed his eyes again and subsided into a sort of lethargy, for he was content. He knew he was saved.

Mr. Gibney rolled over, and, struggling to his knees, leaned over McGuffey and peered into his drawn face.

"Mac, old shipmate! Mac, speak to me. Are you alive?"

B. McGuffey, Esquire, opened a pair of glazed eyes and stared at the commodore.

"Did we lick 'em?" he whispered. "The last I remember the king was puttin' it all over Scraggsy. And that Tabu boy—was—no slouch." McGuffey paused, and glanced warily around the boat, while a dawning horror appeared in his sunken eyes. "Go back, Neils—go back—for God's sake. There's two niggers—still—on the—island. Bring—'em some—water. They're cannibals—Neils, but never—mind. Get them—aboard—the poor devils—if they're living. I—wouldn't leave a—crocodile on that—hell hole. If I could—help it."

An hour later the Robinson Crusoe syndicate, including the man Friday and the Goat, were safe aboard the Maggie II, and Neils Halvorsen, with the tears streaming down his bronzed cheeks, was sparingly doling out to them a mixture of brandy and water. And when the syndicate was strong enough to be allowed all the water it wanted, Neils Halvorsen propped them up on deck and told the story. When he had finished, Captain Scraggs turned to Mr. Gibney.

"Gib, my dear boy," he said, "make a motion."

"I move," said the commodore, "that we set Tabu-Tabu and the king down on the first inhabited island we can find. They've suffered enough. And I further move that we readjust the ownership of the Maggie II syndicate and cut the best Swede on earth in on a quarter of the profits."

"Second the motion," said McGuffey.

"Carried," said Captain Scraggs.

CHAPTER XIV.

The lookout on the power schooner Maggie II had sighted Diamond head before Commodore Adelbert P. Gibney, Captain Phineas P. Scraggs, and Engineer Bartholomew McGuffey were enabled to declare, in all sincerity (or at least with as much sincerity as one might reasonably expect from this band of roving rascals), that they had entirely recovered from their harrowing experiences on the desert island of Tuvana-tholo, in the Friendly group.

At the shout of "Land, ho!" Mr. McGuffey yawned, stretched himself, and sat up in the wicker lounging chair where he had sprawled for days with Mr. Gibney and Captain Scraggs, under the awning on top of the house. He flexed his biceps reflectively, while his companions, stretched at full length in their respective chairs, watched him lazily.

"As a member o' the Maggie syndicate an' ownin' an' votin' a quarter interest," boomed the engineer, "I hereby call a meetin' o' the said syndicate for the purpose o' transactin' any an' all business that may properly come before the meetin'."

"Pass the word for Neils Halvorsen," suggested Mr. Gibney. "Bless his squarehead soul," he added.

"We got a quorum without him, an' besides this business is just between us three."

"Meetin'll come to order." The commodore tapped the hot deck with his bare heel twice. "Haul away, Mac."

"I move you, gentlemen, that it be the sense o' this meetin' that B. McGuffey, Esquire, be an' he is hereby app'inted a committee o' one to lam the everlastin' daylights out o' that sinful former chief mate o' ourn for abandonin' the syndicate to a horrible death on that there desert island. Do I hear a second to that motion?"

"Second the motion," chirped Captain Scraggs.

"The motion's denied," announced Mr. Gibney firmly.

"Now, looky here, Gib, that ain't fair. Didn't you fight Tabu-Tabu an' didn't Scraggsy fight the king o' Kandavu? I ain't had no fightin' this entire v'yage an' I did cal'late to lick that doggone mate."

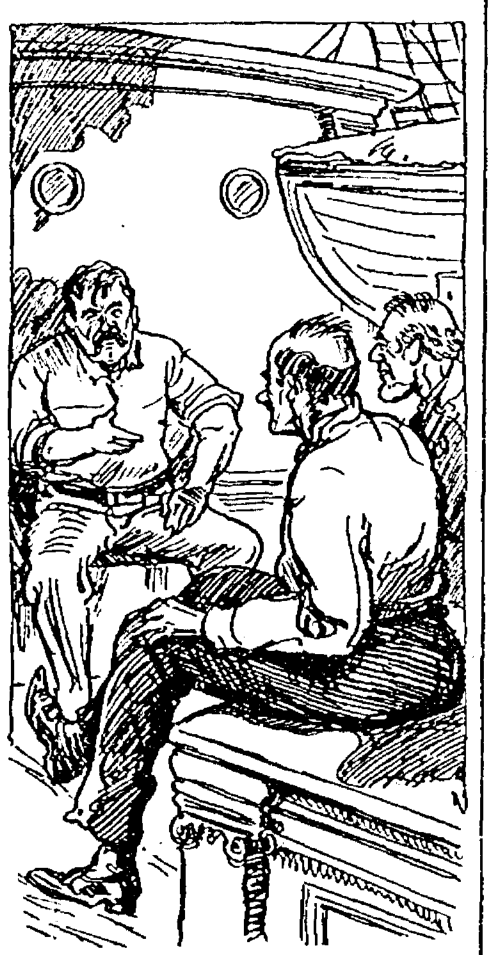
"Mac, it can't be done nohow."

"Oh, it can't, eh? Well, I'll just bet you two boys my interest in the syndicate—"

"It ain't that, Mac, it ain't that. Nobody's doubtin' your natural ability to mop him up. But it ain't policy. You wasn't sore agin 'em cannibal savages, was you? You made Neils go back an' save 'em, an' it took us two days to beat up to the first inhabited island an' drop 'em off—"

"But a cannibal's like a dumb beast, Gib. He ain't responsible. This mate knows better."

"Ah!" Mr. Gibney leveled a horny forefinger at the engineer. "That's where you hit the nail on the head. He's too fly, and there's only two ways to keep him from flyin' away with us. The first is to feed him to the sharks and the second is to treat him like a long-lost brother. I know he ought to be hove overboard, but I ain't got the heart to kill him in cold blood. Consequently, we got to let the villain live, an' if you go to beatin' him up, Mac, you'll make him sore an' he'll peach on us when we get to Honolulu. If us three could get back to San Francisco with clean hands, I'd say lick the beggar an' lick him for fair. But we got to remember that this mate was one o' the original filibuster crew o' the old Maggie I. The day we tackled the Mexican navy an' took this power schooner away from 'em, we put ourselves forty fathom plumb outside the law, an' this mate was present an' knows it. We've changed the vessel's name an' rig, an' doctored up the old Maggie's papers to suit the Maggie II, an' we've give her a new dress. But at that, it's hard to disguise a ship in a live port, an' the secret service agents o' the Mexican government may be a-layin' for us in San Francisco; and with this here mate agin us an' ready to turn state's evidence, we're pirates under the law, an' it don't take much imagination to see three pirates swingin' from the same yard-arm. No, sir, Mac. I ain't got no wish, now that we're fixed nice an' comfortable with the world's goods, to be hung for a pirate in the mere shank o' my youth. Why, I ain't fifty year old yet."



"We're Pirates Under the Law—"

"By the tail o' the Great Sacred Bull," chattered Scraggs. "Gib's right."

McGuffey was plainly disappointed. "I hadn't thought o' that at all Gib. I been cherishin' the thought o' lammin' the whey out'n that mate, but if you say so I'll give up the idee. But if bringin' the Maggie II into home waters is invitin' death, what in blue blazes're we goin' to do with her?"

Mr. Gibney smiled—an arch, cunning smile. "We'll give her to that murderin' mate, free gratis."

Captain Scraggs bounded out of his chair, struck the hot deck with his bare feet, cursed, and hopped back into the chair again. McGuffey stared incredulously. "Gib, my dear boy," quavered Scraggs, "say that agin."

"Yes," continued the commodore placidly, "we'll just get shet o' her peaceable like by givin' her to this mate. Don't forget, Scraggsy, old tarpot, that this mate's been passin' himself off for you in Honolulu, an' if there's ever an investigation, the trail leads to the Maggie II. This mate's admitted being Captain Scraggs, an' if he's found with the schooner in his possession it'll take a heap o' evidence for him to prove that he ain't Captain Scraggs. We'll just keep this here mate in the brig while we're disposing of our black coral, pearl, shell and copra in Honolulu, an' then, when we've cleaned up, an' got our passages booked for San Francisco—"

"But who says we're goin' back to San Francisco?" cut in McGuffey.

"Why, where else would men with money in their pockets head for, you oil-soaked piece of ignorance? Ain't you had enough adventure to do you a spell?" demanded Captain Scraggs. "Me an' Gib's for goin' back to San Francisco, so shut up. If you got any objection, you're outvoted two to one in the syndicate."

"When we're ready to leave Honolulu, we'll bring this mate on deck, make him a kind Christian talk an' give him the Maggie II with the compliments o' the syndicate. He'll think our sufferin's on that island has touched us with religion an' he'll be so tickled he'll keep his mouth shut. Then, with all three of us safe an' out o' the mess, an' the evidence off our hands, we'll clear out for Gawd's country an' look around for some sort of a profitable investment."

The commodore sighed. "She's a love of a boat an' it breaks my heart to give up the only command I've ever had, but the fact is, Mac, her possession by us is dangerous, an' we don't need her, an' we can't sell her because her record's got blurs on it. We can't convey a clean an' satisfactory title. Anyhow, she didn't cost us a cent an' there ain't no real financial loss if we give her to this mate. He'd be glad to get her if she had yellow jack aboard, an' if he's caught with her he'll have to do the explainin'. When you're caught with the goods in your possession, Mac, it makes the explainin' all the harder. Besides, we're three to one, an' if it comes to a show-down later we can outswear the mate."

Captain Scraggs picked his snaggle teeth with the little blade of his jack-knife and cogitated a minute.

"Well," he announced presently, "far be it from me to fly in the face o' a felon's death. I've made a heap o' money, follerin' Gib's advice, an' bust my bob-stay if I don't stay put on this. Gib, it's your lead."

"Well, I'll follow suit. Gib's got all the trumps," acquiesced the engineer. "We got plenty o' dough an' no board bills comin' due, so we'll loaf alongshore until Gib digs up somethin' good."

"How about Neils?" queried Captain Scraggs. "Do we continue to let that ex-deckhand in on our fortunes?"

"If Neils Halvorsen had asked you that question when he come to rescue you the day you lay a-dyin' o' thirst on that desert island, wouldn't you have said yes?"

"Sure pop."

"Then don't ask no questions that's unworthy of you," said Mr. Gibney severely. "I don't want to see none o' them green-pea trade ethics croppin' up in you, Scraggsy. If it wasn't for that Swede the sea-gulls'd be pickin' our bones now. Neils Harvorsen is included in this syndicate for good."

"Amen." This from the honest McGuffey.

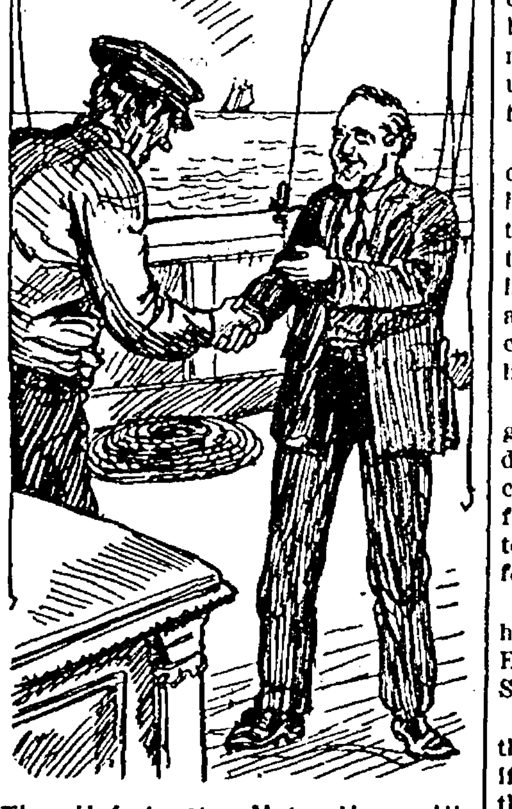
"Meetin's adjourned," said Captain Scraggs feelly.

Under the direction of the crafty commodore, the valuable cargo of the Maggie II was disposed of in Honolulu. During the period while the schooner lay at the dock discharging, Captain Scraggs and McGuffey prudently remained in the cabin with the perfidious mate, in order that, should an investigation be undertaken later by the Treasury department, no man might swear that the real Phineas Scraggs, filibuster, had been in Honolulu on a certain date. The Kanaka crew of the schooner Mr. Gibney managed to ship with an old shipmaster friend bound for New Guinea, so their testimony was out of the way for a while, at least.

When the Maggie II was finally discharged and the proceeds of her rich cargo nestled, in crisp bills of large denomination, in a money belt under Mr. Gibney's armpits and next his rascally skin, he purchased tickets under assumed names for himself, Scraggs, McGuffey and Halvorsen on the liner Hilonian, due to sail at noon next day.

These details attended to, the Maggie II backed away from the dock under her own power and cast anchor off the quarantine station. The mate was then brought on deck and made to confront the syndicate.

"It appears, my man," the commodore began, "that you was too anxious to horn in on the profits o' this expedition, so in a moment o' human weakness you did your employers an evil deed. We had it all figgered out to feed you to the sharks on the way home, because dead men tell no tales, but our sufferin's on that island has caused us all to look with a milder eye on mere human shortcomin's. The Good Book says: 'Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those what trespass agin us,' an' I ain't ashamed to admit that you owe your wicked life to the fact that Scraggsy's got religion an' McGuffey ain't much better. But we got all the money we need an' we're goin' to Europe to enjoy it, so before we go we're goin' to pass sentence upon you. It is the verdict o' the court that we present you with the power schooner Maggie II free gratis, an' that you accept the same in the same friendly sperrit in which it is tendered. Havin' a schooner o' your own from now on, you won't be tempted to steal one an' commit wholesale murder a-doin' it. You're forgiven, man. Take the Maggie II with our blessin', organize a comp'ny, an' go back to Kandavu an' make some money for yourself. Scraggsy, are you a-willin' to prove that you've given this errin' mate complete forgiveness by shakin' hands with him?"



The Unfortunate Mate Hung His Head. He Was Much Moved.

"I forgive him freely," said Captain Scraggs, "an' here's my fin on it."

The unfortunate mate hung his head. He was much moved.

"You don't mean it, sir, do you?" he faltered.

"I hope I may never see the back o' my neck if I don't," replied the skipper.

"Surest thing you know, brother," shouted Mr. McGuffey and swatted the deluded mate between the shoulders. "Take her with our compliments. You was a good brave mate until you went wrong. I ain't forgot how you sprayed the hillsides with lead the day Gib an' Scraggsy was took by them cannibals. No, sir-ee! I ain't holding no grudge. It's human to commit crime. I've committed one or two myself. Good luck to you, matey. Hope you make a barrel o' money with the old girl."

"Thanks," the mate mumbled. "I ain't deservin' o' this nohow," and he commenced to snivel a little.

Mr. Gibney forgot that he was playing a hypocrite's part, and his generous nature overcame him.

"Dog my cats," he blustered, "what's the use givin' him the vessel if we don't give him some spondulicks to outfit her with grub an' supplies? Poor devil! I bet he ain't got a cent to bless himself with. Scraggsy, old tarpot, if we're goin' to turn over a new leaf an' be Christians, let's sail under a full cloud o' canvas."

"By Neptune, that's so, Gib. This feller did us an awful dirty trick, but at the same time there ain't a cowardly bone in his hull carcass. I ain't forgot how he stood to the guns that day off the Coronados when we was attacked by the Mexicans."

"Stake the feller, Gib," advised McGuffey, and wiped away a vagrant tear. He was quite overcome at his own generosity and the manner in which it had touched the hard heart of the iniquitous mate.

Mr. Gibney laid five one-hundred-dollar bills in the mate's palm.

"Good-by," he said gently, "an' see if you can't be as much of a man an' as good a sport hereafter as them you've wronged an' who's forgive you fully and freely."

One by one the three freebooters of the green-pea trade pumped the stricken mate's hand, tossed him a scrap of advice, and went overside into the small boat which was to take them ashore. It was a solemn parting and Mr. Gibney and McGuffey were snuffling audibly.

The next day, as the Hilonian steamed out of the harbor, bearing the syndicate back to San Francisco, they looked across at the little Maggie II for the last time, and observed that the mate was on deck, superintending three Kanaka sailors who were hoisting supplies aboard from a bumboat.

Commodore Gibney bade his first command a misty farewell.

"Good-by, little ship," he yelled and waved his hand. "Gawd! You was a witch in a light wind."

Seven days after leaving Honolulu, the Hilonian steamed into San Francisco bay. The syndicate could not wait until she had tied up at her dock, and the minute the steamer had passed quarantine Mr. Gibney hailed a passing launch. Bag and baggage the happy quartette descended to the launch and landed at Meiggs wharf. Mr. Gibney stepped into the wharfinger's office and requested permission to use the telephone.

"What's up, Gib?" demanded Captain Scraggs.

"I want to 'phone for a automobile to come down an' snake us up town in style. This syndicate ain't a-goin' to come rampin' home to Gawd's country lookin' like a lot o' Eyetalian peddlers. We're goin' to the best hotel an' we're goin' in style."

With the assistance of the wharfinger an automobile was summoned, and in due course the members of the syndicate found themselves ensconced in a fashionable suite in San Francisco's most fashionable hotel. Mr. Gibney stored the syndicate's pearls in the hotel safe, deposited an emergency roll with the hotel clerk, and banked the balance of the company funds in the names of all four; after which the syndicate gave itself up to a period of joy unconfined.

At the end of a week of riot and revelry Mr. Gibney revived sufficiently to muster all hands and lead them to a Turkish bath. Two days in the bath restored them wonderfully, and when the worthy commodore eventually got them back to the hotel he announced that henceforth the lid was on—and on tight. Captain Scraggs, who was hard to manage in his cups and the most prodigal of prodigals with steam up to a certain pressure, demurred at this.

"No more sky-larkin', Scraggsy, you old cut-up," Mr. Gibney ordered. "We had our good time comin' after all that we've been through, but it's time to get down to business agin. Riches has wings, Scraggsy, old salamander, an' even if we are ashore, I'm still the commodore. Now, set around an' we'll hold a meetin'."

He banged the chiffonier with his great fist. "Meetin' o' the Maggie syndicate," he announced. "Meetin'll come to order. The first business before the meetin' is a call for volunteers to furnish a money-makin' idee for the syndicate."

Neils Halvorsen shook his sorrel head. He had no ideas. B. McGuffey, Esquire, shook his head also. Captain Scraggs wanted to sing.

"I see it's up to me to suggest somethin'." Mr. Gibney smiled benignly, as if a money-making idea was the easiest thing on earth to produce. "The last thing I remember before we went to that Turkish bath was us four visitin' a fortune teller an' havin' our fortunes told, past, present an' future, for a dollar a throw. Anybody here remember what his fortune was?"

It appeared that no one remembered, not even Mr. Gibney. He therefore continued:

"The chair will app'int Mr. McGuffey an' himself a committee o' two to wait on one o' these here clairvoyants and have their fortunes told agin."

McGuffey, who was as superstitious as a negro, seconded the motion heartily and the committee forthwith sallied forth to consult the clairvoyant. Within the hour they returned.

Belmond Local News

Oscar Ulstad of Holmes, representative from this county, and a candidate for the office again at the the coming primaries, was in town the first of the week greeting old acquaintances and making new ones. His announcement will be found in this issue of the Independent.

Spring is here; the signs are too many to fail. Chief among them lately have been the kites flying around town, big ones, little ones, and in-between ones. Among the big ones were two made and flown by Ned Packard, which were from 8 to nine feet long, and required a good husky man to hold in the stiff breeze. Joe White utilized the means for an unusual advertising scheme, and had "White Buys Eggs" painted on one. Monday one of the big kites carried a Morse sign for mayor.

Mrs. W. H. White is spending a week or so at Fort Dodge, visiting at the home of her son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Claire White.

He will doubtless poll a heavy vote in this community where he has many friends and is universally liked.

Carion had quite a bitter political fight at the municipal election, the scrap being between the old officials, who were out for re-election, and a new ticket. The slogan seemed to be "Why swap horses in the middle of the stream," and half page ads in the Clarion papers were used to bring the idea before the voters..

Young Men On Parole From Penal Institutions Pass Worthless Checks

TO BE SENT BACK AGAIN

The way of the transgressor is surely hard, and was found so last week by two young men, McDaniels and Hougham, when they were taken into custody by the authorities for forging checks.

The two men were paroled from state penal institutions, and had been employed on farms in this vicinity the past several months. Apparently they were attending strictly to business making good on the job, but it proved otherwise.

For several months checks have been turning up in Belmond stores, and in business establishments in surrounding towns, given for goods purchased, and signed by ficticious names. In many instances, the checks called for more than the bill of goods purchased, the balance being received in cash. Investigation disclosed that the two men named were the guilty parties, and they were hauled into the city jail, where Sheriff Lang and County Attorney Rogers came to get them last Friday. They were taken to Clarion, where they will be sent back to serve out their respective sentences. Another heavy sentence could, however, be added to the ones they now have.

WIRELESS OUTFIT IS DELAYED

The radiophone outfit which the Belmond Battery Station Co., Clem Cannon, and the Independent are installing, has been delayed, and the parties in the deal are waiting for Iowa's mud roads to dry sufiiciently so that the outfit can be gone after. It was originally planned and expected to have the autfit in working order this week, but owing to inability to go after it, and the condition of the roads, it is expected now to have it when it can be secured, whenever that may be. The demand for radiophone outfits is so immense that every factory in the country is working 24 hours a day to fill orders, and yet are from two to four months behind. Over 23,000 outfits are in use in Iowa, or ordered, now. The outfit to be installed by the three parties named is much more powerful than the ordinary amateur outfits, and can be tuned to 825 meters, which would catch messages from either coast.

NOTED RILEY ENTERTAINER COMING WED. APRIL, 12

Mr. C. J. McCalley, an interpreter of James Whitcomb Rileys' poems and a violinist of ability, has been secured by the Junior class to appear here at the H. S. auditorium April 12. Testimonials from other schools and societies who have employed him are unanimous in praise of the high yet popular quality of his seclections.

We have made the prices 35c and 25c so that everyone may feel that he can afford to come. The Juniors will make a thorough canvas of the town next week. Remember the date. Riley's philosphy is good for what ails you now.

ANNOUNCE BATTERIES FOR RADIO WORK

A storage radio "B" battery has been recently announced by the Willard Storage Battery Company of Cleveland, Ohio. Instructions to its service stations state that productoins will begin at once and the first deliveries will be made during the early part of April.

A quiet "B" batery will be received by the million and more radio fans of the country with open arms. Too many of them have overhauled their receiving sets on the quest for the cause of the "noise" and finally found it in the slowly polarizing dry cells they were using in the plate circuit. The well informed know the difficulties caused by the internal action that is constantly taking place in the "B" batteries generally used at present.

A big market is assured this new rechargable "B" battery as soon as it reaches the dealers salesrooms. Individual cells are enclosed in covered glass jars, each separated from its neighbors by partitions in the case The ample space between cells prevents electrical leakage from too close contact. The well known Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation is used between plates and unusual thickness of the plates themselves gives exceptional length of service without repairs. The low demand of current with the phone circuit places in the "B" battery makes recharging seldom necessary.

April 1 was the April Fools date on taxes, and there was quite a rush at the last minute to avoid paying the penalty.

FARM BUREAU TO STAGE RAT KILLING

Officers and directors of our local county farm bureau decided at their last regular board meeting to ask the cooperation of the various commerical clubs of the country in putting on a county wide rat killing crusade.

Each commerical culb in the county is being asked to contribute towards the prize money which is being arranged for the boy who kills the highest number of rats between now and May 20th. The matter of determining the different prizes to be awarded has been left to a committee of three and announcement will be made later of the number of prizes and amount of each.

This contest is open to any boy up to and including 18 years of age in Wright county. Here's your chance boys to get some easy money. Prizes will probably range from $10 to $25 Boys who enter the contest will be required to bring their rat tails to the county agent's office a the end of each week until the contest is completed. Remember anything is fair in this war on rats. We have an account of one boy who backed his Ford up to a rat hole and with the exhaust of his Ford gassed the rats out of the hole.

Let's go boys! Te contest begins today and will close May 20th. If you wish to enter the contest all you need to do is to report to the county agent at the end of each week, the number of rat tails to your credit.

MAKE WALL LAKE A STATE PARK

Eagle Grove Times: Local sportsmen and those interested in preserving some vestige of the fast disappearing lakes and woods of Iowa, were highly pleased Tuesday when it was learned that the Executive Council appointed to consider the Wall Lake controversy had voted three to one in favor of setting aside eleven acres on the east side of the lake to be used as a state park.

The controversy first came up last spring when several hundred people in Wright and adjoining counties put forth an effort to preserve the shore line of Wall Lake. In past years it has been impossible for anyone to gain access to the lake without crossing privitely owned property and some of the property owners have been anything but gracious in premitting hunters or others to cross their land.

Last spring a delegation of sportsmen visited the secretary of state and requested that about five acres be set aside as a state park so that free access to the lake might be had. In addition to this a subscription fund was started and volunary contributions from twenty-five dollars down swelled this fund to over twenty-eight hundred dollars. This amount was offered to the executive council to help pay for the condemned property.

This lake, which is situated in Wright county, comprises about 900 acres and is considered the finest lake for duck hunting in the northern part of the state, so that sportsmen all over the state are highly exuberant over the decision of the state board. This decision will end once and for all, all controveresy over the rights of hunters and others to use the lake as a pleasure ground, and will in addition preserve the lake for what wild life remains in the state.

BELMOND BOY IS HELD UP

In a recent letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Kenefick, Leo Kenefick, who is attending the government school at Ft. Collins, Colorado, writes that two thugs tried the hold up game on him. He was going to his room late one night last week, when two men in an alley ordered him to "put 'em up." "Kenny" says he didn't stop to talk it over with them but threw his speed gear into high and went away from that immediate vicinity. The night before a fellow student was relieved of a goodly sum. He writes of a shooting scrape between a cattleman and a sheep herder, in which the latter died. Evidently the west still retains a little of its wild and wooly character. Leo is coming aong very nicely with his studies.

DISTRICT COURT ENDS THE TERM

Large Number Of Cases Are Up For Trial At The Next Session

Monitor: Up to the present time Auditor Walker has sold 950 dog tags for which he has collected $1113.75. The fees thus obtained will create what will be known as the domestic animal fund, from which wolf bounties and the matter or reimbursing owners of sheep killed by dogs will be paid. In former years a tax was levied for this purpose, but of late money for this purpose was taken form the general fund.

Monitor: L. L. Sams of the firm of Severe & Sams of Dows, has served notice on A. D. Severe, the senior partner, renouncing the co-partnership, alleging fraudulent mis-representations at the time the partnership was formed, June 28, 1920. Two days later Mr. Severe filed suit against Mr. Sams seeking to enforce the terms of the co-partnership. He first requires a full accounting of the business, after which plaintiff asks for a decree to liquidat said co-partnership and dispose of the property. He further prays that said L. L. Sams be compelled to pay unto plaintiff the sum of $80,000 which he agreed to contribute as capital to the partnership and lastly that the defendant be enjoined from interfering with the plaintiff in disposing of the property pursuant to the authority prayed for herein.

The plaintiff and defendant entered into the business of buying and vending pure bred stock on the date above mentioned, said partnership to continue for a period of ten years. That on or about February 8, 1922, said defendant apparently abandoned said enterprise and removed from the premises and has since absented himself. The firm owns about 150 head of pure bred hogs and about twenty-six head of Holstein cattle, besides a large amount of other personal property. The debts of the firm aggregate about $3,200, consisting of a promissory note and current accounts. Defendant was to have charge of the books of the firm and during his management of the affairs has failed to render a full and complete accounting of the receipts. and disbursements. The firm was capitalized at $200,000, one-half of the real estate (95 acres) and the personal property being agreed at $100,000 of this sum $20,000 has been paid.. That by reason of said renunciation and abandonment the plaintiff is without any remedy save in equity to the end that a full account may be had and taken of the said partnership business, and to the end that the said L. L. Sams may be compelled and required by the decree of the court to make and render a full accounting in accordance with the contract, stipulation and covenants of the parties and to the end that the plaintiff may be committed with the authority to liquidate the said business under proper direction from said court and after the liquidation thereof, to the end that there may be enforced against any share and interest of the said L. L. Sams therein, or in the profits thereof, a lien for the payment of all indebtedness and obligations growing out of the capital contributions made by plaintiff to the said co-partnership; and in order that in the event of liquidation and loss or losses may be made good by the equal contribution of the partnership in accordance with said contract; and that there may be full and final accounting and settlement of all of the said partnership businesss, including an accounting and settlement requiring the said L. L. Sams to make good the deficiency in his capital contribution, and that the plaintiff may have judgment and decree accordingly.

Andrew Norem of Belmond is suing the Iowa Implement Mutual Insurance Co., of Nevada, Iowa, to collect $1,709.68, alleged to be due on a policy. He had bought a house from Jas. Kenefick of Belmond, and had applied for a policy asking that it be made to protect the equities of himself and Kenefick. Thru negigence or fraud, he doesn't know which he claims the policy protected Kenefick only, and when the house burned down the company paid Kenefick his equity and refused to pay him the balance on the $2,000 policy.

John Dorenkamp is suing Rube McFerren et al to foreclose on a farm, the SE qr 27, and the adjoining part of the farm, on which a total of $15,825 is now due. John Kenefick is also suing the McFerrens to foreclose on the same farm on which he has mortgaged a similar amount.—News.

Jameson bought some land in Wilkins county, Minn., at $24,000, but claims it was misrepresented to him. He asks cancellation of the note and a verdict for $8,000 damage.

Hester J. Moore is suing W. H. Anderson to recover $1,000, with interest and costs, due on a land contract. She sold Anderson a 42-acre farm, with $1,000 cash payment, $2,000 March 1, 1921, and $1,000 on March 1, 1922. The latter payment, with interest, is delinquent. ROBINSON FOR CONGRESS IS SLOGAN NOW

Purcell, publisher of the Hampton Chronicle, and Charlie Peterson, also of Hampton, and a former Belmond citizen, was in town Monday getting acquainted with the voters here. Mr. Robinson, whose photograph appears on this page, is a much more cheerful and jolly fellow than his picture shows him to be. He has been one of Hampton's and Franklin county's prominent bankers for many years, and is actively connected and interested in agricultural and business lines thruout this part of the country. He has many qualifications for the office to which he aspires, and is receiving earty support thruout Wright county from all classes. The Independent feels that in Mr. Robinson the people are getting a higher calibre man than political offices usually secure, and believes that he is the man for the job.

SANDS MEMORIAL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

We were glad to see a number who have not been able to attend services for awhile back in their places last Sunday. We hope soon that all will be well again.

Our new books for the Sunday School are here and the way the school took hold and sang the new selections Sunday was fine. Be on hand just a little before 10 a. m. so that we may have a short practice before opening time. Next Sunday is Palm Sunday and we hope to have a victorious day. The pastor will preach in the morning on the "Supremacy of Jesus." There will be no evening services on account of the revival services at the M. E. Church. We are glad to see so many of our people attending these services and also those of our Sunday School taking their stand for Christ.

A number have given their names to the pastor to be received into the church on Easter Sunday. We hope to receive many more. Make this Easter a great day in your life by joining with God's people in His church. The Easter Communion in the morning and in the evening the Eastor Contata, "The Living Christ" which will be rendered by the choir.

Every one at his post next Sunday promptly at 10:00 a. m. The quarterly business meeting of the church will be held on Tuesday, the 11th at 8:00 o'clock.

Chas. Luick, son of Louis Luick residing on a farm near Clear Lake, met with an accident a short time ago when he was hurt by a falling horse. Returning from Mason City on horse back, a dog ran out from a farm house and grabbed the horse by the heel, throwing the animal. In the fall, the horse fell on Charles, breaking his leg in two places below the knee. The bone was set, but did not seem to knit as expected, and had to be rebroken and reset. It is understood that the owner of the dog has agreed to stand all costs in the matter.

Contributions To Finance Concerts

Business Men Donate For The Expenses Of Summer Entertainment

CITIZENS TO BE ASKED

Concerts every Saturday evening this summer will be given by the Belmond Boys' Band, composed of boys in the high school and grades in Belmond.

This has been made certain by the voluntary subscriptions from the business men and citizens of the town, to defray the expenses of the entertainments. The minimum amount necessary has now been raised, but if the boys are to have anything for their services the citizens will have to do their share.

After the defeat of the band tax at the recent election, it would have been almost impossible to secure a lead nickel among the business men for anything but the boys' band. For this they were glad to do what they could to help out, and they have done their share. Enough has been raised to pay the expenses, so that the concerts are assured, inasmuch as the boys are willing to play for nothing. But we do not believe that anyone is willing that they should put in sixteen weeks for nothing, and it is desired to raise enough more so that each member of the band can be given something at the end of the season.

To this end, a canvass will be made of the resident districts of the city, for voluntary contributions from private citizens, and this money will go toward giving the boys something at the end of the season. You are asked to give whatever you wish, from a dime to a dollar. Help make the boys' band a real Belmond band. If 16 concerts are worth a nickel apiece to you then drop that much in the hat. All money raised will be accounted for by the editor of the Independent, together with all expenditures of the fund; the list of donations will be published, as well as the list of expenses, and at the end of the concert season what is left will be divided among the boys and used to keep them in music for practice purposes thru the winter. In this way the boys will be enabled to keep going thruout the winter and next spring, so that by next summer they will be in first class shape to give you real high grade entertainments.

It is believed that the public generally will heartly support the boys, and that their concert on Main street last Saturday was very favorably spoken of by everyone and, with two months' more practice before the season opens. Belmond will be treated to a good band.

Do your bit, therefor, when you are solicited, and give your donation and name to the solicitor, who calls upon you. If you want the boys to entertain you for nothing, turn them down; if you think they are entitled to a little something for their playing, help them out. Just a little amounts to much in the end, and it is now up to you.

COMMUNITY WELFARE CLUB

The Community Welfare Club met at the school auditorium last Friday afternoon. Mrs. W. I. Rosecrans, the new chairman, gave a nice little talk. Miss Baumgardener's fourth grade music class sang two songs which were enjoyed very much and Miss Baumgardener was given a vote of thanks for her work.

After a short business meeting the chairman introduced Mrs. M. N. Volding from Woodward, Iowa, who gave a splendid lecture on "Better Shoes and Better Health." The girls from the upper grades and high school had been invited to hear the lecture and Mrs. Volding had some of the girls wear samples of the right kind of shoes and act as models.

Mrs. Volding had very pleasing ways and her talk was exceedingly interesting. She also spoke a few words about their work in the State Epileptic Hospital, of which her husband has charge.

PLEASANT TOWNSHIP

Most of te schools have started their last month of school for this year.

The Misses Gladys, Virgie and Vida Jenison were Mason Ciy shoppers last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Halfpop were Sunday visitors at the parental W. A. Gartz home.

Little Ruth Frohling underwent an operation at the local hospital last Friday afternoon. The little girl had a gathering in the head, which was the after effects of scarlet fever from which the family was released last week.

Joe Scott was numbered on the list of sick folks last week, suffering from the more or less prevailing grippe.

GETTING STUNG

Why is it that the public generally expects the business men to "foot the bill" when there is anything to be financed? From A to Z, and half way back, it is put up to the man who is in business to "help out" on anything and everything from bands ball teams, bazaars, to plays, parades and parties. He is eternally and continually getting stung.

That's all right; the business man is perfectly willing to "help out," but when said helping comes frequent and often, not to say steady, it becomes monotonous and tiresome and he wouldn't mind being "helped out" some himself.

Business men every year are stung for a good many dollars on various affairs. If any society's solicitor comes to town the first place he or she, strikes for is the business house. A half dollar or a dollar is wheedled out of the pocket and into the other. As soon as one agent goes out another comes in; the b. m. gets it coming and going—and standing still. The roads need fixing; see the business men. The streets need sprinkling; see the business men. The town needs a band; see the business men. We ought to have a ball team; see the business men. Let's put on a play; see the business men. Wouldn't some more lights look good; see the business men. The hill ought to be paved; see the business men. What abut a short course; see the business men. The business man is "George," and "let George do it" must have originated thru some business man who was digging down that he might dig up.

For affairs of public welfare and benefit, the business men will cough up promptly and willingly. They are as a whole a progressive and public-spirited bunch of citizens. But the public generally does not realize how often and how much they are being stung for donations; in any business the year's total mounts into money. The public asks too much. Business men are only human, and not in business just for health; if there are any who are groaning under their income taxes we would like to meet them—they are as rare right now as the dodo. Be reasonable with them and they'll come across, but "have a heart," folks; "have a heart."

The business men have put up their share for the boys' band, now do your part. When the solicitor calls around, ask yourself whether the sixteen concerts are worth six and one-fourth cents each. If they are, drop in a dollar. Don't ask someone else to carry the full burden; be willing to help.

But said business men were certainly peeved over the way the band tax vote went. They thought that if folks wouldn't put up 40 to 80 cents, why should they put up 40 dollars?

Had the voters known what the tax meant, we do not doubt but what it would have carried. But they didn't; some of them had wild ideas of 15 to 20 dollars added to their already heavy burden. Which goes to prove the value of advertising.

That restless, uneasy, irritable manner you have noticed in your wife the past week doesn't mean that you are losing her affections; it just signifies that housecleaning time is here.

Will someone please tell us, why is housecleaning?

It's chicken time, too; never saw so many chicken enthusiasts as there are this year. Nearly every back yard has a flock of 'em.

As one of the first things to be taken up by the new administration, we suggest the cleaning off the streets.

Whether you were for or against, get behind the new city officials and boost. Bickering and post mortems, grudges and grouches will do no one any good. Give them your earnest support.

We heard a bright one the other day; fellow wanted to know what would happen if you bumped into one of these wireless waves.

CLIPPINGS

Mrs. Charles Burns, of Atlantic, Cass county, is thought to be the champion chicken picker of the state. She has a record of 250 chickens a day. With the assistance of her husband, who is not an expert, the daily average for some time past has been 300 chickens, and as they received 3½ cents a bird they earn a nice daily wage. Mrs. Burns works with lightning-like rapidity, taking a chicken from the coop, sticking it, attaching the blood cup, looping the legs in a rope, and a few deft movements the chicken is stripped clean but still flapping its wings in the death struggle.—Exchange.

HAMPTON MAN RECEIVES STRONG OFFERS OF SUPPORT

Waterloo, Iowa.—T. J. B. Robinson, of Hampton, the Franklin county candidate for congress in the Third district, gave an address at the regular meeting of the Kiwanis club in Waterloo last Tuesday noon. The fact that the announcement had been made a few days previous that Mr. Robinson would address the club brought out just about the entire membership.

He was given a big reception following the address, and from reports gleaned from members of the club, who were among prominent and leading citizens of Waterloo, it it certain that Mr. Robinson will receive a large vote in Blackhawk county. Members of the Farm Bureau and the Legion members thruout this county seem to be especially strong for Mr. Robinson. Leading business men also say that they not only want a strong, clean man in congress, but they are supporting Mr. Robinson because he has the ability to represent the old third district as it should be represented.

GETTING OUT NOTICES TO DELINQUENTS

News: This week County Treasurer Allen is getting out notices to automobile owners who have not as yet paid the 1922 license due on their cars. The delinquent list is published May first, in the official newspapers of the county, and prior to that Treasurer Allen is endeavoring to collect from as many delinquents as possible in order to save the expence of publication.

Practically every county in the state reports slower payments this year. This is because of the financial stringency. Last year was the first year the present law concerning publication and collection of delinquent licenses was in effect, and it was thot once the people became familiar with it payments would speed up, but this has not generally proved the case.

WOULD STOP PAYMENT

Britt News: That a petition has been circulated and freely signed by men residing in the Independent District of Britt asking that the matter of payment of bills contracted during the erection of the new school building be taken into district court, has been a matter of common knowledge in the community for some time.

There will be some of the best Iowa legal talent, Senneff, Bliss, Witwer & Senneff appearing for plaintiffs and Attorney Kelleher, of Fort Dodge, will appear for the school board. Other attorneys will represent other of the defendants. There will probably be twelve or fifteen attorneys connected with the case before it is disposed of.

Farm Bureau News

FarmBureau Picnic July 4

Officers and directors of the county farm bureau decided at their last regular meeting that the county wide farm bureau picnic would be held this year on July 4th.

No definite arrangements have been made for a speaker for this occasion but an effort will be made to secure Mrs. Ellsworth Richardson, the lady farmer lecturer, who has become so popular throughout Iowa because of her exceptional ability as a public speaker. Definite plans for the program for this affair, the place of meeting, etc., has been left in the hands of a program committee, who will report later.

Mouldy Seed Corn in Wright

Farmers throughout central and northern Iowa have been warned against the presence of dry rot mould and our local farm bureau is now running a germination- test to determine ehe condition of Wright county seed corn.

Five 100 kernel samples are being collected from each township in the county and a test will be made by the county agent for the germinating quality of this seed corn and it is hoped that this test will determine the general condition of Wright county seed corn.

Judging from the result of tests which have been made in other parts of Iowa it would be well for every farmer in Wright county to see individuals ear tests made on all seed corn this season. In a test of 790 ears in Iowa county, made recently twenty-one per cent of the ears were found to be dead or too weak to grow, due to the presence of dry rot mold.

Successful Board Meeting

One of the most interesting and successful board of director meetings ever held by our local county farm bureau took place at the county agent's office Tuesday, March 28. This meeting which would ordinarily have been held Saturday, March 25, was postpomed until Tuesday in order that the county agent leader might have the opportunity to meet with the officers and directors of our local farm bureau.

I. W. Van Nice, assistant state county agent leader, was present at this meeting and went over the program for the year with the board members. Mr. Van Nice, who has had a wide experience with other farm bureaus and officers, directors and county agents, succeeded in giving a great many valuable suggestions for carrying forth the work in Wright county. He spent considerable time in explaining definitely why the farm bureau should have the support of county and federal taxes. Mr. Van Nice is an interesting speaker and a man who has made a thourough study of the farm bureau and all problems connected with the organization. All members in attendance felt that they were greatly benefited by his presence in the meeting and expressed the hope that he might be able to meet with us some time again.

A great many important problems came up for discussion at this meeting and definite action was taken by the board in questions which have an important bearing upon the success of the organization. It was voted that the county wide twine purchase should be handled in the same manner as last year. The county agent was authorized to plan and organize the boys' and girls' poultry clubs throughout the county. It was decided that the poultry culling should be done on a commercial basis this coming season. The matter of holding a county wide picnic was brought up for discussion with a result that July 4th was set for the day of the farm bureau picnic. The matter of purchasing a moving picture machine was discussed and it was decided to arrange to have a representive of the Visual Instruction department meet with us at the next regular board of directors meeting. The rat killing campaign was discussed and a committee appointed to make arrangements for the work. Other problems of general interest were brought up and discussed at this meeting without any definite action being required.

It is interesting to note that twenty-five officers and directors were in attendance at this meeting with a result that all townships except three(Iowa, Wall Lake and Belmond) were represented at the meeting. This is evidence that more interest is being taken by the officers and directors in the organization and execution of the work of our pganizationr. Let's hope that interest in the farm bureau will continue to grow and that all director meetings will be as well attended as the regular meeting for the month of March.

Poultry Culling Planned

The matter of poultry culling for 1922 season was discussed at the board of director meeting and it was decided that the culling work should be conducted on a commerical basis this year.

The culling work will be done by a poultry specialist who will charge a small amount perhaps two or three cents per bird for his work. He will plan to schedule so as to hold two demonstrations per day until each township has had at east two demonstrations. The party at whose farm the demonstration is held will be charged the regular fee for the culling. With this arrangement the man who does the culling work will be able to cover the entire county in sixteen days, after which he will work in culling individual flocks throughout the country.

The first two members from each township who put in their application will be served first in that township. All others will have to take the poultry culler when he can arrange to come. A great many people have expressed a willingness to pay for the culling work on a commerical basis. If you are planning to hire this man to cull your flock this year—here is your opportunity to get your application in early. Remember a demonstration will be held at your farm if you are one of the first from your township to apply for the work.

RURAL CARRIER EXAMINATION

The salary of the rural carrier on a standard daily wagon route of 24 miles is $1,800 per annum, with an additional $30 per mile annum for each mile of major thereof in excess of 24 miles. The salary on motor routes ranges from $2,450 to $2,600 per annum, according to length. Separate examinations for motor routes and wagon routes are no longer held. Appointments to both positions will be made from the same register. The examination will be open only to citizens who are actually domiciled in the territory of the post office where the vacancy exists and who meet the other requirements set forth in Form 1977. Both men and women, if qualified, may enter this examination, but appointing officers have the legal right to specify the sex desired in requesting certification of eligibles. Applications should be forwarded to the Commission at Washington, D. C. at the earliest practicable date.

DOES PROHIBITION PROHIBIT?

Is prohibition successful?

Look at these figures. In 1917 the per capita liquor was 20 gallons. In 1921 it was less than 1½ pints per capita.

These are the official governmnt statistics quoted in a report issued by Supt. R. N. Holsaple of the Iowa Anti-Saloon League, showing the progress made in liquor law enforcement since prohibition went into effect. In his survey of the presnt booze situation throughout the country, th dry leader declares that prohibition has been more successful and effective than any other reform ever passed in this country. It took the south 40 years to completely abolish slavery, so we have nothing to worry about if all bootleggers and boozerunners do not disappear immediately, Holsaple says.

"People complain about the bad quality of liquor now-a-days as compared with what was sold before the country went dry. As a matter of fact they don't know what they were talking about. A large part of liquor sold then was just as bad as the liquor made now.

"The league has a letter from a U. S. government guager in 1915 which shows that rectifying establishment under him purchased but 50 gallons of pure bonded brandy in that year. But of this 50 gallons of brandy the plant sold 6000 gallons of "pure" brandy, 8000 gallons of bonded distillate and 6000 gallons of blended distillate. The output of this company was made from demarara rum, a product from the refuse of a sugar factory, water and essences.

"Regarding the claim that prohibition laws are commonly violated—the liquor trafficers were always law-breakers, and you cannot expect anything else from them now. In the old days the distiller was not even allowed to keep the keys to his own factory. Government officials locked the plants every night and kept the keys themselves. This precaution was taken by the revenue department to prevent the distiller from evading the $1.10 government tax on every gallon of whiskey.

"Then as soon as the whiskey was made it was put into bonded warehouses under government control for safe-keeping. This is how whiskey got its name "bonded" goods.

"The blind pigs so widely charged against prohibition, are not a prohibition product at all but were flourished throughout the country during the saloon days. At one time before prohibition there were over 3,000 blind pigs in Chicago, in addition to 7,000 saloons. In Des Moines with 86 licensed saloons there were more than 100 blind pigs including booze-selling drug stores."

The Iowa dry leader declares in his statement that national prohibition has been more rapid than the enforcement in any state under the old "local option" and state prohibition plan. In Kansas, a state where prohibition is claimed to have been most successful, it was over 15 years before any attempt was made to arrest liquor law violators. Blind piggers came in once a month and paid a penalty of $50 and continued in business. Now they are running from cover to cover. Slowly being driven out of business, sent to Leavenworth or leaving the country.

"We need not be surprised if it takes a generation before we have throughly effective prohibition but from results already obtained prohibition is the most astounding success in all history" Holsaple's statement declared.

TEST—DON'T GUESS

Plant disease experts at the Iowa State College, Ames, say that much of the seed corn throughout the state is low in vitality owing to a mold known as dry rot. The disease does not show in the ear, but it does damage when the seed is planted. In some counties the amount of poor seed corn runs as high as 21 per cent. The only safe way is to test your seed corn.

It costs no more to own the best cream separator; in fact it costs less to own a Primrose than some other separators considered among the best. GET A BETTER STAND

Do you know that the biggest cause of low yields is a poor stand—that the average stand does not exceed 62 per cent, and that a perfect stand will increase the yield on most farms 25 to 50 bushels an acre? The most effective way to insure better stands is to use a thoroughly reliable planter—one that does not crack kernels, miss hills or double hills; one that puts every hill in its place with every hill a full hill. What better investment could you make this year than to buy an International planter and get the profits of good planting?

VOCATIONAL AGRICULTURE

Instructor C. C. Christie.

The Vocational Class of the Belmond High School will submit from time to time topics written by the students of the class which we feel are of interest to the surrounding community. The sole aim of Vocational Agriculture is the teaching of practical agriculture by drawing the school work into closer relationship with the individual's work on his home farm. The articles printed under this heading will be the work of students enrolled in vocational agriculture. We hope that the readers will consider these articles as the work of high school students and not the agricultural experts.

Grain Farming vs. Livestock Farming

Different experts differ in their opinions as to which is the best method of obtaining the most profit on the farm, by grain farming, or by diversified farming, which is the raising of livestock. Livestock farming, if carried on in the proper manner, will keep up the fertility of the soil and enrich the farmer, as well as the soil, because he will be able to attain better crops.

The Iowa farmers are turning more and more livestock farming each year for they have found out that the once rich soil of Iowa is becoming poor under the extensive method of grain farming.

The average number of livestock on the farms of each vocational agriculture student is greater than the average number per farm in Wright county (as shown by Iowa Year Book)

The average number of horses per farm in Wright county is 8.1, while for the farms of the agricultural class it was 8.5, for cattle the average number per farm in Wright county was 21 and for swine the average number per farm in Wright county was 48.8, while the agriculture class had an average per farm of 65.4 hogs. The average number of chickens for every farm in Wright county is 134, and from the farms of the agricultural students, the average per farm was 196.

Livestock on the farm means more legume crops such as alfalfa, clover, soy beans etc. It means marketing the crops through livestock, or in other words, selling the crops in the form of beef, mutton, pork, and saving the fertility in the form of manure. Livestock will utilize all cheap ruffage, such as fodder and straw, which as a general rule is allowed to go to waste. To be a successful livestock farmer one must also be a grain farmer to a certain extent. Buying feed for cattle or any kind of livestock is hardly ever a paying proposition.

The kind of livestock to raise depends upon the local conditions. First the preference of the farmer, second the environment. The different kinds of livestock that offer a large range and fit in many conditions are dairy cows, hogs, horses, mules, beef cattle, and sheep.

Dairying is perhaps the surest method of livestock farming, it evens things up on the farm, and gives steady employment. It requires fewer acres to farm, and consequently leads to more neighbors. To be successful in dairing a farmer must keep milk records, to find out if a cow really is paying for her feed. Milk the good cows and sell the boarder cows for beef.

Statistics show that livestock farming is the most profitable as shown on ten average livestock farms of Iowa which produced 52 bushels of corn per acre against a 38 bushel yield on ten average grain farms. These figures speak for themselves.

Grain farming decreases the yield every year. In grain farming the products from the farm are sold and very little in returned to the soil, while in livestock farming the crops are fed to the livestock and soil fertility is maintained by the return of manures and by rotation of crops. Some have the idea that fertiliy can be returned to the soil by commerical fertilizers, but this fertilizer will not add humus to the soil and manure, Clover or alfalfa will.

Livestock and legumes are the basis of permanent agriculture. It would probably be interesting to know that when you market 50 bushels of corn you rob your soil of 12 dollars in fertility value. But if you feed the corn and alfalfa to a steer, hog, or dairy cow, 70 to 80 per cent of the fertility will be returned to you in the form of manure, which will go back to the land if saved.

The silo should be a part of every livestock farm, because it saves the whole crop, prevents waste in feeding can keep more livestock on less acreage, makes cheap milk, saves storage space, helps utilize cheap ruffage, insures succulent feed winter and summer, tides over the drought and clears the land for plowing. Therefore have a silo; it is a paying proposition.

In conclusion we may say that livestock farming is better for six good reasons; first it enriches the soil, second it makes better yields, third, it utilizes all cheap ruffage, fourth, it gives steady employment, fifth, it leads to more neighbors, last and best of all it insures a steady income. Let livestock do half of the farming for you. A good wife and some calves, pigs, and chickens make farm life both pleasant and profitable.—Written by Cecil C. Riley.

MINIMUM TEACHERS' WAGES

The main problem discussed by school boards at the present time is teachers' wages for next year. This is a matter of vital importance as it eventually reacts on the children in school and seems, as a rule, to effect the rural schools more adversely than it does the town schools as the latter usually adjust the wages so as to attract the more competent teachers, while so many rural boards seem not to understand the minimum wage law and thus very often fix wages that discriminate against the best qualified teachers. This need not be so as the law is very simple and easily applied as the following illustration will show. As rural boards deal principally with "Uniform County" and "Normal Training" certificates, I shall use them as an illustration, while the same principle applies to any certificate. For the above named certificates the minimum wage law prescribes monthly wages as follows:

Third Grade	$50.00
Second Grade, inexperienced	60.00
Second Grade, experienced	65.00
Normal Training, inexperienced	65.00
First Grade, inexperienced	75.00
Normal Training, one year experience	75.00
First Grade, experienced	80.00
Normal Training, two years experience	80.00

It is easy to be seen from above that

$60.00 is $50.00 plus 20 per cent.
65.00 is 50.00 plus 30 per cent.
75.00 is 50.00 plus 50 per cent.
80.00 is 50.00 plus 60 per cent.

Hence, in the fixing schedule of wages, all that the board has to discuss and to decide is what wages it will pay for Third Grade, then, to comply properly with the minimum law, the wages for the other and higher grades must be fixed by adding the proper per cent (as suggested by the law) to the basic wage decided on for Third Grade as follows:

Second Grade, inexperienced --
Third Grade wages plus 20 per cent.
Second Grade, experienced ----
Third grade wages plus 30 per cent.
Normal Training, inexperienced
Third Grade wages plus 30 per cent.
First Grade, inexperienced --
Third Grade wages plus 50 per cent.
Normal Training, one year experience
Third Grade wages plus 50 per cent.
First Grade, experienced ----
Third Grade wages plus 60 per cent.
Normal Training, two years experience Third grade wages plus 60 per cent.

But it is not only between Third Grade and the higher grades that the per cent of spread must be observed, but also as between the second grade and the first grade. For instance, between $60.00 second grade and $75.00 first grade is a spread of 25 per cent. Likewise, between $65 experienced second grade and $80.00 experienced first grade there is a spread of practically 25 per cent. Last year many school boards erred in as much as they failed to maintain these different per cent of spread in wages as prescribed by the minimum law and reports coming in from meetings of school officials held this spring to suggest schedule for next year, indicate that the same error is it times made this year. The law intends that the spread in wages must be observed as well as the minimum amount, and that the spread must be maintained between the higher grades as well as between the third grade and the next higher. Last year some boards allowed only $10.00 difference between second and first grade which is only about 13 per cent spread, while the law prescribes practically 25 per cent and thus the first grade teachers were deprived of nearly half the spread that the law aims to secure to them.

The law also prescribes a penalty of at least $25.00 fine and expulsion from office of any school official who violates the provisions but violation of the law consists in contracting for or paying LESS than the law prescribes and not in paying MORE, as the law states specifically that any board has the right to contract with any teacher for higher wages, provided said teacher is not already under contract to teach some other school. This right, of course, means the right to increase the amount or to increase the spread over the minimum. Teachers will take notice that the state department holds that the law applies to them as well as to the board so that they violate the law in accepting less than the minimum wage.

Observing faithfully the provisions of this law, is the only way the rural districts can retain their best qualified teachers or hope to have the lower grade teachers work up into the higher grades and our rural children need them so badly. Not only the children who aim to take up high school work, after graduating from the rural eighth grade but much more so the greater number of children who never get any school beyond the rural eighth grade. I therefor urge all rural directors and teachers to study carefully the above illustration so as to work out the schedule properly when the board meets next July to fix the wages for the coming year and when the time comes to sign up the contracts.

HOW A SAFE MILK SUPPLY IS INSURED FOR SMALL CITIES

Milk inspection is of prime necessity. In most of the larger cities laboratories are maintained where bacteria counts and chemical analyses are frequently made on samples collected from retail delivery wagons, stores, and restaurants. But the small cities and towns that can not afford the expense of a tester and laboratory find it hard to give proper supervision to their milk supplies.

The United States Department of Agriculture suggests that a practical way for such cities and towns to insure a safe milk supply is through the cooperation of two or more adjacent towns in hiring a milk inspector and maintaining a laboratory. The cost of supervising such a plan may be prorated among the different towns on the basis of population without the expense being burdensome to any one of them. State and Federal authorities are always willing to cooperate in work of this sort.

This plan of town cooperation in milk and dairy inspection has been carried out in different parts of the country, probably the most conspicuous example being the group of towns in northern New Jersey known as "The Oranges." In these towns the plan has been in use for a number of years with results that have been very satisfactory to all concerned.

By William MacHarg
and Edwin Balmer

Brothers-in-law frequently make good team mates, especially in literature. One of the best novels bearing the name of Rudyard Kipling was written in collaboration with Wolcott Balestier, the brother of Kipling's wife.

When two such capable fiction writers as the brothers-in-law MacHarg and Balmer decided to join forces, it was evident that some good stories would result. The stories came out and their success has been attested by the large measure of public approval bestowed upon: "The Achievements of Luther Trant," "Surakarta," "The Blind Man's Eyes" and "The Indian Drum."

The latter is such a particularly absorbing tale that, the opportunity presenting itself, we secured the privilege of printing in serial form and now intend to give it to the readers of this publication.

DOWS MINISTER EXPLAINS

News: A recent meeting was held in Dows, the News is informed, at which time Rev. Mr. Belsheim met with Rev. Mr. Holm and Rev Mr. Jansen, of Belmond and church officials, in another effort to adjust the difference in the Dows Luthern church arising out of the refusal of Rev. Belsheim to conduct the funeral of an American Legion boy.

Rev. Mr. Belsheim's contention that the creed of the church upholds him in such a refusal was upheld as the creed has nothing to say about such practice, but we understand that Rev. Mr. Jansen of Belmond insisted that any Luthern minister could conscientiously co-operate with the American Legion in the conduct of a funeral service, and that there was nothing irreligious in such co-operation. Rev. Holm, we understand, offered no personal opinion, but was dealing solely with the church creed, or law.

To Co-Operate in Future

At this meeting, it is reported, a motion was made that in the future the minister should conduct the religious part of the services should the occasion arise, and the American Legion the military part of the funeral. The Legion members present it is said, intimated that as far as they were individually concerned they wanted none of this kind of cooperation.

Fourteen Members Drop From Church Rolls?

During the meeting, we have hard, fourteen members voluntarily surrendered their membership in the church organization. If this report is true, it would seem that the trouble arising out of the funeral of the Legion member is wrecking the church.

Outsiders Complicate Matters

The Dows Post of the American Legion, has, from the beginning, acted toward Rev. Mr. Belsheim in a fair and impartial manner. The Post and its members, have regretted the difficulties, and have taken no drastic steps in any way. But outsiders, members of the Legion of purporting to be such, have written Rev. Mr. Belsheim telling him to resign. He has ever been threatened. This makes his friends and partisans more inclined to side with him.

The unfortunate episode has been regretted by many of the best people in Dows, for the town has come in for some unfavorable comment.

Since prices have gone up corn may again wear silk without feeling overly extravagant.

THE WANT-AD OF MY SOUL.

My need, which is my creed, I write upon this scrol—
Be pleased, oh gracious Lord, to heed the want-ad of my soul.
A cheer that does not lean upon digestion or the sun—
Supports itself and never asks a boost of anyone.
To laugh whole-heartedly—or should ill-fortune crowd me in,
Cause me to smile—give me oh Lord
  at least the gift to grin.
Not quite too proud, oh Lord, to fight, but if the thing's to do,
Then tutor me to battle clean—until the round is through.
If I have good to speak of men, then may that good be said—
Let me not hold like miser's gold
  my say until they're dead.
And Lord, I would be schooled to do with neither pomp or fuss,
Some decent thing and yet not feel so thundering virtuous.
Should gossip drop around to claim
  my hospitality,
May I not send him forth again but bid him stop with me.
And if I have to foreflush, Lord, to keep up with the brood
Of Fortune's darlings, then give me
  the eagle's solitude.
Make this Almighty me to know that as I trudge along,
Perhaps once in ten thousand times
  I'm likely to be wrong,
And that by some miraculous, unprecedented flight
Of lucky stars that shelter him, my neighbor may be right.
Forbid it that my soul grow stale
  —let me not be defiled
Nor cloyed with surfeit—let me
  keep the ardor of a child.
Give me imagination, Lord, to see the unseen things—
To know the yonder, far-off feel that comes when some bird sings.
Help me to be square with all the best traditions of my clan—
Make me, oh Lord, a downright unadulterated man.

—The Open Road.

Mrs. Lofty keeps a carriage,
    So do I;
She had dapple grays to draw it,
    None have I;
She's no prouder with her coachman
    Than am I,
With my blue-eyed, laughing baby,
    Trundling by.
I hide my face lest she should see
The cherub boy and envy me.

Her fine husband has white fingers,
    Mine has not;
He could give his bride a palace—
    Mine a cot;
Her's comes home beneath the starlight;
    Ne'er caresses she;
Mine comes in the purple twilight,
    Kisses me,
And prays that He who turns life's sands
Will hold his loved ones in His hands.

Mrs. Lofty has her jewels,
    So have I;
She wears hers upon her bosom,
    Inside I;
She shall leave hers at death's portal
    By-and-by;
I shall bear my treasures with me
    When I die;
For I love, and she has gold;
She counts her wealth—mine can't be told.

She has those who love her—station,
    None have I;
But I've one true heart beside me—
    Glad am I,
I'd not a chance for a kingdom,
    No, not I.
God will weigh it in His balance,
    By-and-by;
And the difference He'll define
'Twixt Mrs. Lofty's wealth and mine.

PHONE WAR IS STARTING IN HAMPTON

Chronicle: The Northwestern Bell Telephone Company the first of the week notified the Hampton business men, and some of the party line subscribers. that telephone rates in Hampton would be raised the first of May. It is understood that the company has a well "edited" sheet of paper on which it figures to show that it is losing about $80 a month in Hampton and it wants that $80 taken off the red side of its book. Of course, there are those who recall that old adage—that figures can't lie, but liars can figure.

At any rate there seems to be a fight on. In less than two hours after the receipt of the notice of the company's intentions, petitions were being circulated protesting the proposed raise. Dr. J. C. Powers, the new mayor-elect in an interview today stated that the city officials are strongly opposed to the raise of phone rates at this time, and the council will take the matter up at an early meeting and do what it can to prevent the phone company from putting the proposed rates into effect.

There has been a rumor current for some time that the phone company operating in Hampton does not have the franchise here which it seems to think it has, and that it has and is violating features of the franchise under which it is now supposed to be operating.

The general opinion seems to prevail that a raise in phone rates at this time is just another sort of graft, profiteering or holdup, which the telephone company hopes to get away with. Local phone subscribers believe they are paying exhorbitant prices at this time, to say nothing of any higher rates which may be asked of them.

F. C. Peer and family of Swaledale visited their daughter, Mrs. C. O. Walsh Sunday.

"FLIPPING

How often do you swing on a train after it has started to move? Probably with about one-third the frequency that you swing off before it has stopped. Getting on in this fashion it is more dangerous, no doubt: But either practice is bad enough.

In six years, the records of the Interstate Commerce Commission show, 450 people were killed and 6,857 injured getting on and off in this fashion.

Such statistics mean little. This week one conductor on the Northwestern was seen on three different occasions to pull would-be passengers frm certain injury, when they had tried for the moving step and swung under. If he had not been on the watch an accident would have been, in our judgment, certain in every case. And one of the reckless three was a girl.

The temptation to try getting on at the last second is considerable. But swinging off before the train has stopped is in ninty-nine cases out of a hundred simply asinine. It offers no excuse.

What good to the average citizen is a second of time saved? What will he do with it? When he has saved it? There are many expensive ways of being foolish. But getting on and off moving trains, is likely to be one of the most costly, for the least possiblity of return.—Chicago Herald Examiner.

PRIMARY TO BE HOT

Iowa's primaries this spring will poll one of the biggest votes in years, according to the forecasts being made by the various political camps, now preparing to swing into the real heat of the pre-election scrap.

A tabulation at the headquarters of Col. Leon W. Ainsworth, war veteran, farmer and candidate for the Republican nomination for State Treasurership, shows that interest in the primaries this year is developing earlier than ever before This has been stimulated partly by the grim fight which is certain to revolve around the senatorship and the unusual rallying of interest in the state treasurership battle. The treasurership has usually been one of the minor bones of contention. This year, however, the veterans in the Republican ranks look for it to draw unusual attention. Friends of E. H. Hoyt, former state treasurer, feel that Hoyt was deprived of a chance to run for a second term at the last election by bad play. They are preparing to stir things up, although Hoyt has not yet definitely announced his allegiance in the fight. Ainsworth has been at work on his campaign for more than two months and is said to have great strength in every part of the state, espcially among the farmers and service men.

Governor Kendall is said to have received more signatures to his nomination papers this year than any other candidate in the history of the state in recent years. He probably will have a clean sweep.

It will be a big primary year in Iowa.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs generally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is the skipper, Nells Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded, and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII.—Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.—Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer. Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

CHAPTER X.—Our three adventurers form a "syndicate,' with the gunboat, which they have renamed the Maggie II, as their base of operations. They sail for the South Sea islands, where they plan to obtain valuable black coral.

CHAPTER XI.—Going ashore with supposedly friendly natives, Gibney and Scraggs are taken prisoners, to be held for a cannibal feast.

CHAPTER XII. — McGuffey, believing his friends to have been killed, shells the island. Gibney and Scraggs escape, and reach the ship with two prisoners, the king of the island and his "prime minister." Utilizing the blacks as divers, the "syndicate" collects a valuable cargo of black coral and sails for home. With the double idea of punishing the cannibals for their treachery and having some fun with Scraggs, who is not fond of a fight, Gibney and McGuffey arrange a fistic combat with the prisoners, Gibney to fight one and Scraggs the other. The five land on a desert island, and while they are engaged in the fistic fun the steamer sails, leaving the five marooned.

CHAPTER XIII.—When the ship arrives in Honolulu, Nells Halvorsen, former member of the Maggie's crew, suspects foul play and, seizing the vessel while the white crew is ashore, obtains a crew of natives and sets out to find the owners, guided only by information he obtains from the ship's log. He reaches the island just in time to save the lives of his old friends.

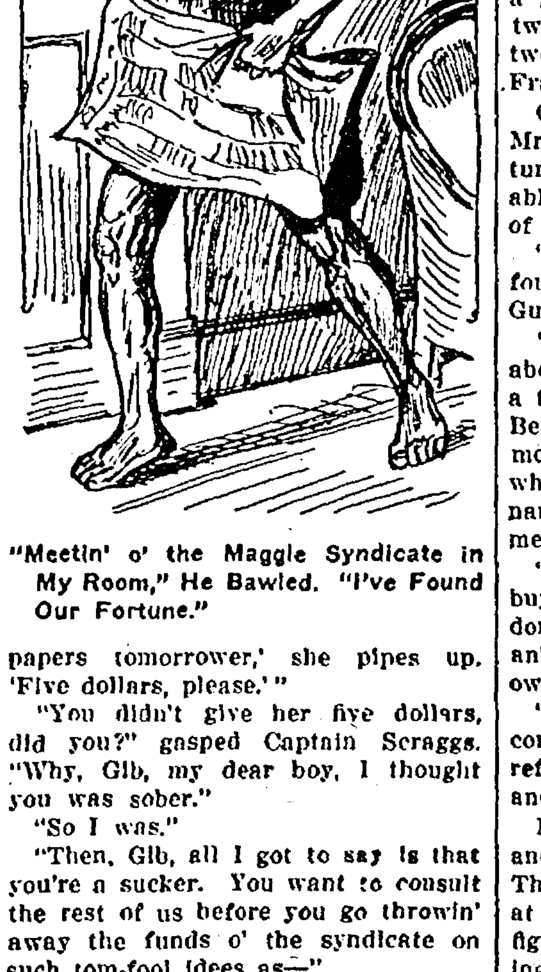
CHAPTER XIV.—In reward for his services, Nells Halvorsen is made a member of the "syndicate." At Honolulu the cargo is sold for a large sum and the owners of the Maggie II, fearing the Mexican government might cause trouble over the captured gunboat, present the vessel to the treacherous mate who had left them marooned on the island. In San Francisco the corporation plans the management of its wealth. Gibney purchases a derelict which turns out to be loaded with codfish, seemingly worthless, and resenting the bitter criticism of his associates for wasting their money, that gentleman resigns from the "syndicate." He and Halvorsen join hands and McGuffey and Scraggs, in partnership, purchase a small schooner, the Victor, planning to engage in coastwise trade. Gibney makes a contract with Scraggs to ship five hundred tons of "agricultural stuff" on the Victor. The "agricultural stuff" turns out to be the codfish, which by this time is an advanced stage of decay, and the shipment naturally would make the Victor worthless for passenger service, which the owners had planned. After natural acrimonious exchange of personalities, Mr. Gibney relents and releases the owners of the Victor from their contract. Scraggs, however, refuses to be pacified and withdraws from the "syndicate," announcing his intention of engaging in "chicken farming." With McGuffey and Halvorsen, Gibney purchases a power schooner and the three sail for the South seas, presumably to engage in occupations dear to their adventurous souls.

"Members o' the syndicate," the commodore announced, "we got an idea. Not a heluva good one, but fair to middlin'. Me an' Mac calls on this Madame de What-you-may-call-her an' the minute she gets a lamp at my mit (it is worthy of remark here that Mr. Gibney had a starfish tattooed on the back of his left hand, a full-rigged ship across his breast, and a gorgeous picture of a lady climbing a ladder adorned the inner side of his brawny right forearm. The feet of the lady in question hung down below the fringe of Mr. Gibney's short sleeve) she got up an' says: 'My friend, you're makin' a grave mistake remainin' ashore. Your fortune lies at sea.' Then she threw a fit an' mumbled something about a light-haired man that was goin' to cross my path. I guess she must have meant Scraggsy or Nells, both bein' blondes—an' she come out of her trance shiverin' an' shakin'.

"'Your fortune lies at sea, my friend,' she kept on sayin'. 'Go forth an' seek it.'

"'Gimme the longitude an' latitude, maam,' I says, 'an' I'll go out.'

"'Look in the shippin' news in the papers tomorrower,' she pipes up. 'Five dollars, please.'"



"Meetin' o' the Maggie Syndicate in My Room," He Bawled. "I've Found Our Fortune."

"You didn't give her five dollars, did you?" gasped Captain Scraggs. "Why, Gib, my dear boy, I thought you was sober."

"So I was."

"Then, Gib, all I got to say is that you're a sucker. You want to consult the rest of us before you go throwin' away the funds o' the syndicate on such tom-fool idees as—"

McGuffey saw a storm gathering on Mr. Gibney's brows, and hastened to intervene.

"Meetin's adjourned," he announced, "pendin' the issue o' the papers tomorrow mornin'. Scraggsy, you oughter j'ine the Band o' Hope. You're ugly when you got a drink in you."

Nells Halvorsen interfered to beg a cigar of Mr. Gibney and the affair passed over.

At six o'clock the following morning the numbers of the syndicate were awakened by a prodigious pounding at their respective doors. Answering the summons, they found Mr. Gibney in undress uniform and the morning paper clutched in his hand.

"Meetin' o' the Maggie syndicate in my room," he bawled. "I've found our fortune."

The meeting came to order without the formality of dressing, and the commodore, spreading the paper on his knee, read aloud:

"FOR SALE CHEAP

"The stern-wheel steamer Victor, well found, staunch and newly painted. Boilers and engines in excellent shape. Vessel must be sold to close out an estate. Address John Coakley, Jackson Street wharf."

"How d'ye know she's a fortune, Gib?" McGuffey demanded. "Lemme look at her engines before you get excited."

"I ain't saying she is," Mr. Gibney retorted testily. "Lemme finish readin'!" He continued:

"REPORTS PASSING DERELICT

"The steam schooner Arethusa, Grays Harbor to Oakland Long wharf, reports passing a derelict schooner twenty miles off Point Reyes at six o'clock last night. The derelict was down by the head, and her rail just showed above the water. It was impossible to learn her identity.

"The presence of this derelict in the steamer lanes to North Pacific ports is a distinct menace to navigation, and it is probable that a revenue cutter will be dispatched today to search for the derelict and either tow her into port or destroy her."

"Gentlemen o' the syndicate, them's the only two items in the shippin' page that looks likely. The question is, in which lies our fortune?"

Nells Halvorsen spoke up, giving it as his opinion that the fortune-telling lady probably knew her business and that their fortune really lay at sea. The derelict was at sea. How else, then, could the prophecy be interpreted?

"Well, this steamer Victor isn't exactly traveling overland," McGuffey suggested. He had a secret hankering to mess around some real engines again, and gave it as his opinion that fortune was more likely to lurk in a solid stern-wheel steamer with good engines and boilers than in a battered hulk at sea. Captain Scraggs agreed with him most heartily and a tie vote resulted, Mr. Gibney inclining toward the derelict.

"What're we goin' to do about it, Gib?" Captain Scraggs demanded.

"When in doubt, Scraggsy, old tarpot, always play trumps. In order to make no mistake, right after breakfast you an' McGuffey go down to Jackson street wharf an' interview this man Coakley about his steamer Victor. You been goin' to sea long enough to know a good hull when you see it, an' if we can't trust Mac to know a good set of inner works we'd better dissolve the syndicate. As for me an' Nells, we'll go down to the Front an' charter a tug an' chase out after that there derelict before the revenue cutter gets her an' blows her out o' the path o' commerce with a stick o' dynamite."

Forthwith Mr. Gibney and Nells, after snatching a hasty breakfast, departed for the waterfront, where they chartered a tug for three days and put to sea. At about ten o'clock Captain Scraggs and McGuffey strolled leisurely down to Jackson street wharf to inspect the Victor. By noon they had completed a most satisfactory inspection of the steamer's hull and boilers, and bought her in for seven thousand dollars. Captain Scraggs was delighted. He said she was worth ten thousand. Already he had decided that heavy and profitable freights awaited the syndicate along the Sacramento river, where the farmers and orchardists had been for years the victims of a monopoly and a gentlemen's agreement between the two steamboat lines that plied between Sacramento, Stockton and San Francisco.

On the afternoon of the third day Mr. Gibney and Nells Halvorsen returned from sea. They were unutterably weary and hollow-eyed for lack of sleep.

"Well, I suppose you two suckers found that derelict," challenged McGuffey.

"Yep. Found her an' got a line aboard an' towed her in, an' it was a tough job. She's layin' over on the Berkeley tide flats, an' at lowtide tomorrow we'll go over an' find out what we've got. Don't even know her name yet. She's practically submerged."

"I think you was awful foolish, Gib, buyin' a pig in a poke that way. I don't believe in goin' in blind. Me an' Mac's bought a real ship. We own the Victor."

"I'm dead on my feet," growled the commodore, and jumping into bed he refused to discuss the matter further and was sound asleep in a jiffy.

Mr. Gibney was up bright and early and aroused the syndicate to action. The tide would be at its lowest ebb at nine thirty-one and the commodore figured that his fortune would be lying well exposed on the Berkeley tide flats. He engaged a diver and a small gasoline launch, and after an early breakfast in a chophouse on the Embarcadero they started for the wreck.

They were within half a mile of it, heading right into the eye of the wind, when Captain Scraggs and McGuffey stood erect in the launch simultaneously and sniffed like a pair of—well, sea dogs.

"Dead whale," suggested McGuffey.

"I hope it ain't Gib's fortune," replied Scraggs drily.

"Shut up," bellowed Mr. Gibney. He was sniffing himself by this time, for as the launch swiftly approached the derelict the unpleasant odor became more pronounced.

"Betcher that schooner was in collision with a steamer," Captain Scraggs announced. "She was cut down right through the fo'castle with the watch below sound asleep, an' this here fragrance appeals to me as a sure sign of a job for the coroner."

Mr. Gibney's eyes flashed, but he made no reply. They had rounded the schooner's stern now, and her name was visible.

"Schooner Kadiak, Seattle," read Scraggs. "Little old three sticker a thousand years old an' cut clear through just abaft the foremast. McGuffey, you don't s'pose this here's a pirate craft an' just bulgin' with gold."

"Sure," retorted the engineer with a slow wink, "tainted wealth."

Mr. Gibney could stand their heckling no longer. "Looky here, you two," he bawled out angrily. "I got a hunch I picked up a lemon, but I'm a-willin' to tackle the deal with Nells if you two think I didn't do right by the syndicate a-runnin' up a bill of expense towin' this craft into port. I ain't goin' to stand for no kiddin', even if we are in a five-hundred-dollar towage bill. Man is human an' bound to make mistakes."

"Don't kid the commodore, Scraggsy. This aromer o' roses is more'n a

SPECIAL EASTER APPEAL FOR STARVING CHILDREN

Thrilling adventures and first hand encounters with hunger, and horrors succeeded one another with bewildering rapidity in the experiences of Miss Elsie Kimball, a Mt. Holyoke College graduate in the Near East.

She has just returned to this country, but she wants to return to the famine regions overseas as soon as her private affairs make it possible, she told Charles V. Vickrey, General Secretary of the Near East Relief, under whose auspices she has been working in Transcaucasia for the past two yars.

The Mt. Holyoke girl had hardly arived in Transcaucasia when her adventures began. She was among the women workers hastily evacuated from that region in the face of a threatened Bolshevist attack. This episode over, Miss Kimball went back on the job of feeding the thousands of orphans in Transcaucsia who are being cared for by American relief workers. She was in Kars, Armenia, when that city fell before an attack of Kurds. These fierce tribsmen attempted to steal blankets from the orphanage which Miss Kimball had charge of, but she routed them with a whip.

For several months prior to her return to this country, Miss Kimball was stationed at Alexandropol, where the relief workers have concentrated about 25,000 of the 100,000 youngsters in Near East Relief orphanages in the Levant.

"There has never been more suffering in Armenia than there is at present," Miss Kimball said. "Children, for whom there is neither the room nor the supplies inside the orphanages, wander about like little animal in search of food. Famine and disease are rapidly carrying them off for relief funds are insufficient to meet the need. Conditions were bad enough when I left early in the winter; now it must be many times worse." Miss Kimball said there is practically no food at all in Transcaucasia except that brought in by the Near East Relief. She endorsed the appeal now being made to the women of the country by an emergency committee headed by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, which is nationwide campaign to supply the deficiency of relief funds that threatens to cut off one out of every four of the children of the Near East who are dependent upon American aid for their existence.

SHERIFF DRINKS BOOZE CAPTURED IN RAIDS

News: The sheriff of Hamilton county is facing ouster from office, the county attorney there having filed a petition in district court. Drunkeness and inattention to duty is charged. It is alleged the sheriff drank booze seized in his raids, and the petition specifically states he had been drunk the past week. A few days ago the sheriff was in Clarion, pretty well lit up, and he could hardly drive his car out on the main road west of town, but whether it was the Hamilton man or not the boys did not know, but in view of the ouster proceedings it is likely it was the Hamilton man. They tried to get him to resign, but he refused to give up the office. Wm. Neekins is the man the county attorney is after.

Circumstantial Evidence.

"Do you think Miss Spinnix cheated at the ouija board?"

"I wouldn't go so far as to say she cheated?" replied Miss Cayenne. "But I couldn't help noticing that it misspelled some of the words the same way she does."

Does one always tell the whole truth? Remember that when you are listening.

A safe guess is that they will neither go up nor down.

FACTORY OPERATION PLANS COMING NICELY

Good Fellowship Address Is Notable

"Substitution" Meeting Proves To Be One Of The Best We Have Had Yet

C.H. McNIDER IS THE NEXT

The Good Fellowship meeting held last week Wednesday evening in the library basement was among the best yet, and was very highly enjoyed by the crowd of about ninety men present.

Owing to various things the program all through was one of substitution, but the substitution was certainly a good one. Instead of the quartette, the opening program was a couple of readings by high school students. Alfred Wilkinson gave a splendid reading, "The March of the Flag," which was highly appreciated. Bill Butts then told the crowd "What the Janitor Heard." And the janitor heard a plenty. Rev. Ludgate very kindly favored the men with some music from his concertina—not accordion—and brought the crowd in on the chorus of the songs he sang.

Following this Rev. Brooks, from Fort Dodge, entertained the audience with one of the best addresses ever delivered in Belmond. His subject was "Three Months in Europe," and he dealt largely with the battle fields of France. His talk was a biting indictment of war, and the dramatic comparisons he drew brought home to his audience the waste, the bitterness and the useless destruction which war always causes, and left with them a serious thought of what te future would be. Rev. Brooks gave a most remarkable speech and the pity is that more could not have heard it.

After the address, Rev. Ludgate again favored the crowd with music and songs, following which some good eats were enjoyed. It was a huge success as a meeting, and may there be many more like it.

MOVED TO BUY FAIR GROUNDS

A movement is now on foot at Clarion to have the city call an election for the purpose of purchasing the fair grounds, to be used as a public park. It is proposed to vote a bond for $15,000 to purchase the land. A mass meeting was held last week to discuss the proposition, and the sentiment of those present was highly favorable to the plan.. The question is to be thoroughly discussed and brought before the voters of Clarion before an election is called, so that it will be thoroly familiar to all. It is probably the last resort to save the fair for the county, and as the county fair is one of the best events that any county can have, it is to be hoped that some arrangements will be made to save it.

HARD STORM HERE THURSDAY

The storm last Thursday evening was a real one for awhile, with a heavy wind, rain and hail. The hail broke a few windows about town, and the wind ripped off shingles on several buildings, taking part of the roof from the Griecy store and tipping over some small buildings. The day had been unusually hot and sultry for this time of the year. The storm evidently gave Belmond a side swipe as much more damage was reported in other localities, while in some places there was loss of life and heavy damage to property. South and east of town the storm was reported harder than in town.

HAVING TELEPHONE FIGHT

Eagle Grove is numbered among the towns served by the Northwestern Telephone Co., who are putting up a roar over the proposed increase in rates placed in effect by the company. The Charles R. McCalley program sponsored by the Juniors last evening (Wednesday) is spoken of in highest terms wherever this versatile entertainer has appeared. You were the loser if you missed it. Says the Sioux Falls Argus Leader "As an interpreter of James Whitcomb Riley's droll poems, Mr. McCalley certainly has no superiors, and as an all around versatile entertainer he stands alone. He is not only a gifted reader and impersonator, but he is a splendid violinist and has sense of humor knows no bound. When a performer can hold the attention of five hundred high school students for one hour and twenty minutes and leave them clamoring for more, it certainly is worth the while and the price."

Following is a speciman program, from which you may judge of its variety, its humor, its seriousness, its novelty.

1. READINGS—
a "My Philosophy" ----- James Whitcomb Riley.
b "Tradin' Joe" -------- James Whitcomb Riley.
2. VIOLIN SOLOS—
a "Fantasie L' Enchantresse" ------------------------ Singalee

c "The Ho'ss Trade" ---- James W. Foley.
d "Farmer Whipple" -----. Riley.

b "Traumerai" ------- Schumann
5. PIANOLOGUES—
a "In May" ---- Edwin M. Stern
b "That Old Sweetheart of Mine" ------------------------ Riley.
c "Out to Old Aunt Mary's" ..... ------------------------ Riley.
6. IMPERSONATIONS—
a "When Grandfather Went to Town"
b "Political Burlesque"
7. VIOLIN IMITATIONS—

In which the instrument was made to speak words almost as plainly as the human voice.

Helen Walrod entered the fourth grade Monday.

CYCLONE KILLS WOMAN

The Register last Friday carried an account of damage caused by the storm at Granger, Iowa, and described the fatal injuries of Mrs. Wm. Tiernan, wife of a farmer, who was killed. Mrs. Tiernan was a sister-in-law of Attorney Tiernan, formerly located at Belmond. She had rushed to the attic to close the windows when the storm struck the house lifting the roof, and throwing Mrs. Tiernan to the top of a tree. Her husband managed to get her down, but she died shortly after. Six children were left. The storm caused around $100,000 worth of damage at Granger.

Acreage and Money Are Being Secured

Pres. Tyrrell Reports Everything As Going Along In Very Nice Shape

ACREAGE IS INCREASING

Operation plans of the sugar factory, under the Iowa Valley Operating Company are progressing very nicely in every way. Acreage is being written every day, and interest is developing rapidly among the farmers towards raising sugar beets this year. Inasmuch as every prediction is for a wet summer, with soft corn, and the prices of corn and oats are nothing to brag about, it would appear like a wise thing to do to raise beets. The money will be needed next year to pay 1922 taxes.

The financing of the operation of the plant is reported progressing favorably. Subscriptions are being received daily, and the prospects for securing the necessary amount are gratifying.

Work on getting the plant in shape is in the hands of the Dyer Company and operations along this line will doubtless commence in the not distant future. Everything in general connected with the campaign seems to be coming nicely, and while an immense amount of work and detail remains to be settled, the main idea is going over.

RUTH SHIRLEY JENISON

Ruth Shirley Jenison, baby daughter of Harold and Irva Jenison, was born March 5th, 1922 and died at the hospital at Rochester Minn., April 3, 1922.

Baby Ruth was getting along nicely for the first two weeks of her life when some intestinal trouble developed and she was taken to Rochester where she was operated upon and for a few days after the operation it seemed that she might recover but on the third she gave up the battle and was carried by the angels to her Father's bosom.

Thus another little blosom of earth has been plucked for the Master's home in glory, where she will await the coming of her loved ones of earth.

A short funeral service was held at the home on Tuesday afternoon and was conducted by Rev. Leinbach after which the little body was laid to rest in the Franklin Grove Cemeary.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their help and sympathy in the illness and death of our beloved baby, Ruth Shirley.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHEER UP!

Which do you like to meet best; which do you take the most pleasure in greeting—the person who meets you with a happy, cheerful grin, or the one who approaches looking like the third carriage in a funeral procession? Foolish question? Not at all, folks; not at all. Next time you go down the street, count the people you meet nad see how many there are af each kind.

When you meet a grin, you sorta feel like it yourself; your mouth starts to crinkle up at the corners, your eyes wrinkle at the sides, and a crease spreads up each side of your face. You immediately feel better. You acquire a subconscious idea that this isn't such a heck of a world after all—and you gossip about the weather, the garden, the kids and the neighbors. You part with another grin—and go on your way with a little spryer step, a little lighter tread, traces of the grin still lingering around your eyes and mouth.

And then you meet another person, with a face d-r-a-w-n down until the chin digs a hole in the chest, the lower lip in danger of catching on a vest button, eyes drawn in and wearing a pathetic look, and a general appearance of the fce that resembles a hard boiled egg—thirty minutes at least. You half look around for the funeral, with the idea that the family surely have died from the flu. The said person glances up at you; manages to partly lift his chin, for a solemn nod; and mutters something between a grunt and a growl which is meant to be "Good morning" but which sounds like "Gdmg." The chills creep up your back, you hug your cloak closer, you have a miscellaneous feeling inside as tho you had eaten too many pancakes for breakfast, and Doc over across the street was headed your way. You feel like something the cat had dragged in and the dog worried around, and you go on your way with a pessimistic viewpoint that sees nothing but rain and snow and mud.

Which person are you?

A subscriber wants to know what makes a blind pig blind. Drinking its own hootch, principally.

If April favors us with many more days like those of the past week, Louie Tokman will have to quit selling Fords and go to handling boats.

There is one big answer to those folks who say prohibition doesn't prohibit. In 1915 $30,000 was spent in Belmond for booze—how much in 1921?

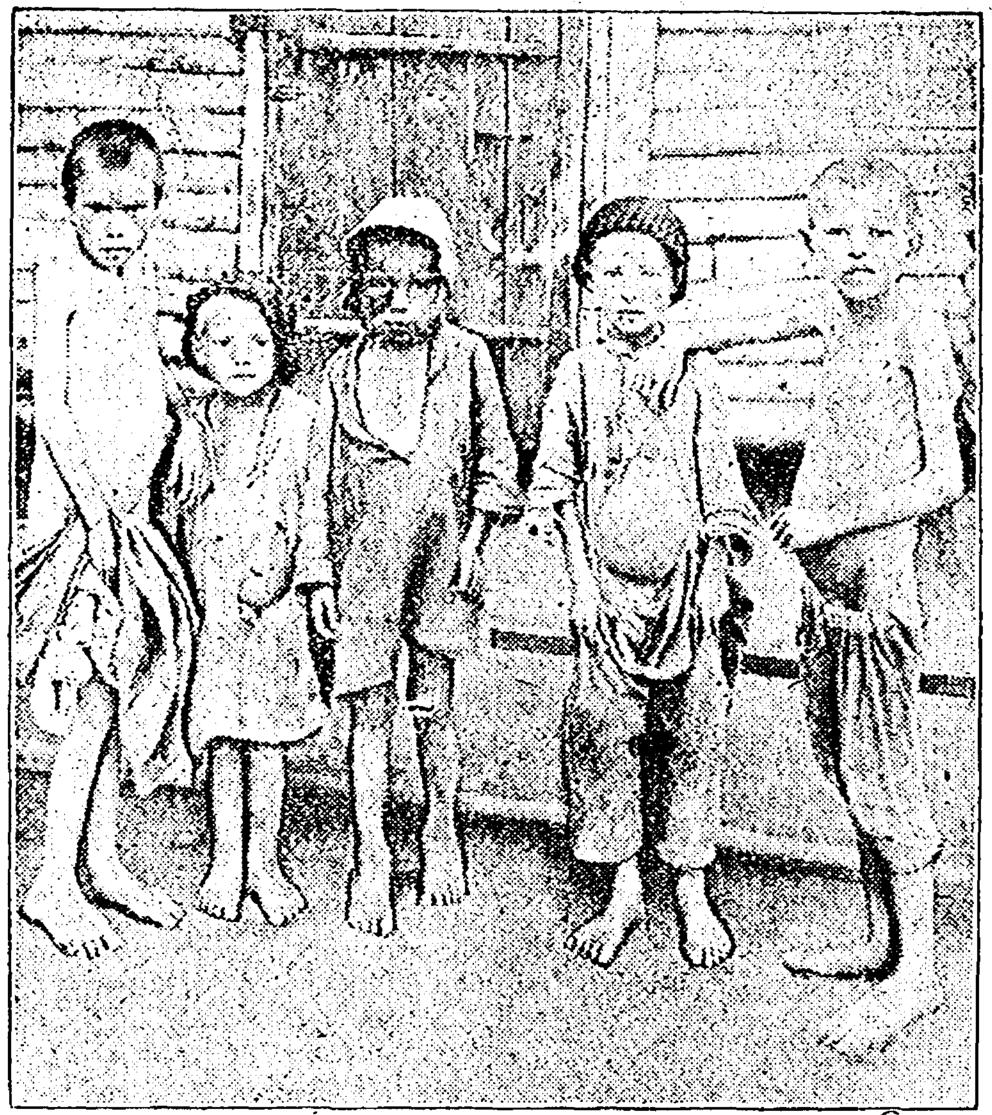
$30,000 turned loose in the channels of trade—groceries, shoes,, and clothing—is quite a nice little year's business for one store.

We presume, as the base ball season approaches, that Bro. Africa is oiling up his typewriter. The "I" key must be pretty well worn.

Editorial desks are flooded with mail from grafters seeking something for next to nothing. Our latest is an offer from a Minneapolis hotel offering four days' room rent at $3 per day for running a "little" ad—which runs to only $60. Which is one big reason why the "devil" has to empty the waste basket twice a day.

That Genoa conference, like the old fashioned aid societies, will doubtless talk about the missing member.

IN WAKE OF RUSSIAN FAMINE



This picture showing results of famine in the Volga valley was taken outside one of the refuge camps. The emaciated half-nude bodies are made grotesque by swollen abdomens, caused by a diet of grass, bark, clay, manure and other ingredients of famine "bread." Executives of the American Committee for Russian Famine Relief, 405 Steinway building, Chicago, say most of the pictures they have received from Russian Red Cross workers in Russia are too horrible for reproduction. One dollar, it is estimated, will save a life in Russia.

Middleton Re-Elected Director

The first annual convention of the U. S. Grain Growers, Inc, ended on Friday, March 24th. The administration forces led by President C. H. Gustafson, are in control. The situation at present in several states is confused.

The conference committee of eleven men, one from each state, appointed to effect a compromise on the issue of each district's right to elect as well as nominate its directors, could not agree. The report of the rules committee, which permitted the writing in by the convention of any name, was accepted. The election took place Friday morning.

A. L. Middleton of Eagle Grove, was re-elected director from Iowa for a period of one year. Mr. Middleton has made an eviable record in the past as a director. It will be remembered that he was appointed by Jim Howard, one of the original members of the committee of seventeen and he has made a careful study of the grain marketing problem. Mr. Middleton's advice and good horse sense on grain marketing is sought in all parts of the grain belt of the middle west.

After adjournment the new board of directors met in the grain growers' office. Eleven of the twenty-one members were present. C. H. Gustafson was re-elected president and Frank M. Meyers secretary. The directors had up for consideration the immediate employment of a general manager and the establishment of sales agencies. An emergency committee, J. D. Pan ike, J. K. Mason and C. H. Gustafson, was appointed to consider all emergencies arising in finance, organization, etc.

Guard Against Mouldy Seed Corn

Farmers of Wright county are warned against the presence of dry rot mould in the seed corn in various sections of the state. Farmers in this community should heed this warning which comes from our agricultural experiment station and look after the important matter of making a thorough test of seed corn, preferably an individual ear test which is the only method of determining definitely the condition of the corn.

Five 100 kernel samples have been gathered from each township in Wright county and a germination test is now being made by the county agent to determine the vitality of the seed corn in this section of the state.

Farmers who wish a germination test made of their seed corn are invited to select 100 kernels of their best seed from 100 ears of their best corn and send to the county agent who will make the test and report the result of same.

Lively Program at Lincoln

The Lincoln Township Farm Bureau social which was held at the Lincoln church Friday evening, April 7th, proved to be the most interesting and instructive meeting. The seats of the church were packed to overflowing with interested folks of the community who supported this community affair with their attendance.

This program included some very interesting numbers and it should be noted that all talent was furnished by people wihin the township. The people of this particular township have long since realized the fact they have plenty of talent within their township boundaries and the successful monthly meetings which are being held in this community would indicate that these people are able to make use of the talents which they possess.

The success of this social meeting was due in a large measure to the efforts of Miss Hazella Downing, one of the local teachers, and a program committee who assisted her in planning the program. This program was put on by people of the north half of the township and they are now waiting to see what kind of entertainment will be furnised by their neighbors of the south half of the township at the next regular monthly social.

Play at Wall Lake Church

Farm Bureau members of Wall Lake township and surrounding community met at the Wall Lake church Friday evening, April 7th, for a township social and general good time. The community church was crowded to overflowing by people of the community who came out to enjoy the plays which were planned and put on by talent from the surrounding territory.

Two very interesting plays were put on by these loyal community boosters who have spent considerable time in the past few weeks in preparing for this occasion.

The evening's program started off with a play entitled "Too Much of a Good Thing." Those who took part in this play were: Mrs. Jay Waters, Mrs. Chas. Tillman, Mrs. Byron Blackman, Mrs. N. E. Schroder, Mr. and Mrs. John Chapman, Ed. Smith, Robt. Goslin and Mrs. Clark McNeal

The play entitled "School Days" was also put on by Mr. and Mrs. J. Carmichael, Mr. and Mrs. Clark McNeal, Mr. and Mrs. John Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Tillman, and Robt. Goslin. These plays were "chuck full" of excitement and fun and those who took part should be congratulated upon the splendid showing which they made in their presentation

We understand that the people of the Wall Lake community are planning to remodel the Wall Lake church which they expect to use for a community meeting place. The proceeds from the auction which is being held Wednesday, April 12th, are to go entirely for the remodeling of this church.

JUST ADVERTISING

Every successful business man today is making a study of advertising. Newspaper advertising is only one method of many, but it has been found by experience that it is the cheapest and most effective of any known form.

The Chicago Apparel Gazzette, and which is published in the interests of the clothing trade, and therefore is not at all interested in the newspaper side of the question, has the following which will interest every merchant in the country:

"A good deal has been said of late for the substition of mailing list, direct for advertising.

"It is too bad—because this is wrong expensive, and will cause a lot of skeptical feeling about advertising and its abilities and the proper use of it.

"Except in a very few exceptional cases direct mail advertising should always be a supplement to newspaper advertising. There are exceptions to everything and these exceptions include the merchant with a general store, selling a few articles each week, located by the township's old creamery, at a cross roads, six miles from the nearest town.

"Every big merchant in the country began as a small merchant. And practically every big retail merchant of the country will tell you that newspaper advertising is the best, the first method of advertising to use—and that mailing lists are secondary.

"Hundreds of merchants, large and small—old and young in the business—will tell you that after experimenting with all forms of advertising to use in the major way it has always proven out that newspaper advertising is the cheapest and the most influential in the long run.

"No merchant could ever gain anything by foolishly stopping newspaper advertising to get even with the newspaper for having misquoted him or wrongly presented price conditions. The newspaper appears weekly—year in and year out—with editorials, its local news and the advertisments of competitors. If it wished it could destroy the prestige and good will of any one of class of merchants in no time—simply by constantly pointing him out in a truthful way, but not in the same light as that occupied by their competitors. No merchant or store exists but what has its weak spots—as soon as one is strengthened another appears somewhere else—a store is as human and as imperfect as the individual.

"If you must choose between the two you will not be making any mistake if you select the newspaper in preference to the mailing list."

It's true. And the man who wants to eliminate the troubles that follow crop failures and years of short prices should learn a lesson from the dairy farmer and begin milking cows. GOING UP

Corn reached 52 cents Wednesday. A volume might be written on this fact,, when one stops to consider the fact that last fall the wise ones were predicting that the spring would see the price of corn down below two bits the bushel. Fifty cent corn in normal times is considered as being good. Then, why does it not follow that we we are now entering into a period of normal times. With the price of hogs around the ten dollar mark; with the price of cattle well up over the prewar prices; and with corn bringing half a dollar, we cannot help but feel that the coming months are to be prosperous ones. The period of depression following the war has been shorter than most folks looked for; and it has not been so severe as the pessimists predicted. The depression was nothing to compare with the Civil War and has nothing compared with other depressions through which the country as passed in years gone by.—Iowa City Republican.

SCHOOL NOTES

The Seventh and Eighth grades chaperoned by their teacher, Miss Beringhausen, gave a party at the school auditorium last Friday evening. An enjoyable time was reported. This bunch always has a good time where there is plenty to eat.

The eighth grade Home Economics girls, treated the eighth grade Manual training boys and their instructor to strawberry short cake last Thursday at the class period hour. The wood-butchers are wondering what the treat will be next Thursday.

Mrs. Carl Bohlen visited the down stairs rooms last Thursday afternoon inspecting the work being done by her two sons, Burton and Myron.

The Misses Eva Whetstone and Jessie Bernard were the guests of Misses Alma and Ruth Johnson at the latter's home in Latimer last Friday night. They attended a play given by the Latimer High School.

One of our faculty, while out walking with a group of co-workers lost a valuable winter coat. The town mayor was promptly notified, and acting with his usual promptness, he soon apprehended the missing article and used it as an excuse for calling upon the young lady Tuesday evening instead of the conventional Wednesday evening.

We have received our new encyclopedias, the new International, and also the Dictionary and Atlas. Good use is being made of these new additions to our library. Our old Encyclopedia and Dictionary were very much out of date.

Our monthly weighing of the grade children revealed a remarkable improvement over last month's weight. Many parents are taking a special interest in bringing their underweight children up to normal. They are succeeding, too.

Several boys have discontinued school in order to assist with farm work. We do not like to see this. A temporary advantage of getting he crop in a few days earlier or getting in a few more acres of corn may be a temporary advantage but what about the future advantage?

A represenative from the Midland Lyceum Bureau, Des Moines, Iowa, called upon us last week Monday. The school did not purchase a course for next winter. Our past Lyceums have not been patronized in a manner to justify the time and expense in putting it over. Please do not tell that our last season's course was in arrears to the amount of eighty-five cents deficit for each signer. We raised over one hundred dollars in outside activities to pay the Redpath Vawter Lyceum Bureau. Had we not done this the deficit for each signer of the course would have been a little over eight dollars.

Our next movie program will show films entitled "The History of the Typewriter," "Island of the St. Laurence" and a comedy. Remember our picture show comes to an end May 2nd. There is some talk of continuing the shows during the summer and turning the profits over to the school. Fine!

TOWNS FIGHT PHONE RAISE

Eagle Grove Times: The increase in phone rates by the Northern Bell Telephone Company which was announced last week in a number of Iowa towns, has started a phone war which promises to be a phone strike unless a compromise is effected before the new rates go into effect.

The increased rates on phones in Eagle Grove will effect only the business houses. Under the new rates effective May 1st, individual lines are $3.50 per month and a two party line $3.00 per month. The increase effects about sixty business houses and gives an increased revenue to the company of $72.50 per month.

There has been no opposition up to the present time by the Eagle Grove merchants against the increase However, a boost is not being peacefully received. A business house must have a telephone but if opposition developes in all of the towns it is ot probable that the company will carry out the increase announced.

The Hampton Chronicle says:

"The Northwestern Bell Telephone Company, the first of the week notified the Hampton business men, and some of its party line subscribers that the telephone rates in Hampton would be raised the first of May. It is understood that the company has a well "edited sheet" of paper on which it has figures to show that it is losing about $80 a month in Hampton and it wants that $80 a month taken off the red side of its book. Of Course, there are those who recall that old adage—that figures can't lie, but liars can figure.

At any rate there seems to be a fight on. In less than two hours after the receipt of the notice of he company's intentions, petitions were being circulated protesting the proposed raise. Dr. J. C. Powers, the new mayor-elect, in an interview today stated that the city officials are strongly opposed to the raise of phone rates at this time, and the council will take up the matter at an early meeting and do what it can to prevent the phone company from putting the proposed rates into effect.

The people sooner or later will have to load up with facts and fight the rates charged by the phone companies. Tere is a little reason to doubt but that as a whole the telephone business is immensely profitable. The balance sheet of the Bell company proves it. Possibly by disregarding the toll business secured from the towns in which it operates it can show losses, but when the yearly report shows a profitable year, a series of rate advances in a territory like you find in this part of Iowa, admittedly the most prosperous in the country, would indicate that they are deliberately working a gouging game."

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. — Captain Phineas P. Scraggs has grown up around the docks of San Francisco, and from mess boy on a river steamer, risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Since each annual inspection promised to be the last of the old weatherbeaten vessel, Scraggs naturally has some difficulty in securing a crew. When the story opens, Adelbert P. Gibney, likable but erratic, a man whom nobody but Scraggs would hire, is its skipper, Neils Halvorsen, a solemn Swede, constitutes the fo'castle hands, and Bart McGuffey, a wastrel of the Gibney type, reigns in the engine room.

CHAPTER II.—With this motley crew and his ancient vessel, Captain Scraggs is engaged in freighting garden truck from Halfmoon bay to San Francisco. The inevitable happens, the Maggie going ashore in a fog.

CHAPTER III.—A passing vessel hailing the wreck, Mr. Gibney gets word to a towing company in San Francisco that the ship ashore is the Yankee Prince, with promise of a rich salvage. Two tugs succeed in pulling the Maggie into deep water, and she slips her tow lines and gets away in the fog.

CHAPTER IV.—Furious at the deception practised on them, Captains Hicks and Flaherty, commanding the two tugboats, ascertain the identity of the "Yankee Prince" and, fearing ridicule should the facts become known along the water front, determine on personal vengeance. Their hostile visit to the Maggie results in Captain Scraggs promising to get a new boiler and make needed repairs to the steamer.

CHAPTER V.—Scraggs refuses to fulfill his promises and Gibney and McGuffey "strike." With marvelous luck, Scraggs ships a fresh crew. At the end of a few days of wild conviviality Gibney and McGuffey are stranded and seek their old positions on the Maggie. They are hostilely received, but remain. On their way to San Francisco they sight a derelict and Gibney and McGuffey swim to it.

CHAPTER VI.—The derelict proves to be the Chesapeake, richly laden, its entire crew stricken with scurvy. Scraggs attempts to tow her in, but the Maggie is unequal to the task and Gibney and McGuffey, alone, sail the ship to San Francisco, their salvage money amounting to $1,000 apiece.

CHAPTER VII.—Independently rich, our two adventurers still have a kindly feeling for the Maggie, and, his crew having deserted him, Captain Scraggs induces them to return. At an "old horse" sale the three purchase two mysterious boxes which they believe to contain smuggled "Oriental goods." They find, instead, two dead Chinamen.

CHAPTER VIII. — Scraggs seeks to "double cross" his two associates, but Mr. Gibney outwits him and makes a satisfactory financial settlement with the Chinese company to whom the bodies have been consigned, leaving Scraggs out in the cold.

CHAPTER IX.—Gibney resents McGuffey's action in lending money to Scraggs without consulting him, and after a terrific wordy combat the three separate, McGuffey becoming assistant engineer on an oil tanker, Gibney disappearing, and Scraggs, forced to lay up the Maggie, takes a subordinate position on a ferry steamer. Senor Lopez, Mexican revolutionist, makes Scraggs a generous offer for transportation of munitions to Lower California. Scraggs accepts, and the old Maggie is once more put into commission. Arriving at his destination, Scraggs finds his old companion, Mr. Gibney, is the consignee. Time having softened animosities, the reunion is joyful. Gibney plans to steal the ammunition and convey it to revolutionists in Colombia. On their way they are attacked by a Mexican gunboat, which they capture, though the Maggie is damaged so that it has to be destroyed. On the gunboat, to which they transfer, they find their old friend McGuffey acting as engineer.

CHAPTER X.—Our three adventurers form a "syndicate," with the gunboat, which they have renamed the Maggie II, as their base of operations. They sail for the South Sea islands, where they plan to obtain valuable black coral.

CHAPTER XI.—Going ashore with supposedly friendly natives, Gibney and Scraggs are taken prisoners, to be held for a cannibal feast.

CHAPTER XII. — McGuffey, believing his friends to have been killed, shells the island. Gibney and Scraggs escape, and reach the ship with two prisoners, the king of the island and his "prime minister." Utilizing the blacks as divers, the "syndicate" collects a valuable cargo of black coral and sails for home. With the double idea of punishing the cannibals for their treachery and having some fun with Scraggs, who is not fond of a fight, Gibney and McGuffey arrange a fistic combat with the prisoners, Gibney to fight one and Scraggs the other. The five land on a desert island, and while they are engaged in the fistic fun the steamer sails, leaving the five marooned.

CHAPTER XIII.—When the ship arrives in Honolulu, Neils Halvorsen, former member of the Maggie's crew, suspects foul play and, seizing the vessel while the white crew is ashore, obtains a crew of natives and sets out to find the owners, guided only by information he obtains from the ship's log. He reaches the island just in time to save the lives of his old friends.

CHAPTER XIV.—In reward for his services, Neils Halvorsen is made a member of the "syndicate." At Honolulu the cargo is sold for a large sum and the owners of the Maggie II, fearing the Mexican government might cause trouble over the captured gunboat, present the vessel to the treacherous mate who had left them marooned on the island. In San Francisco the corporation plans the management of its wealth. Gibney purchases a derelict which turns out to be loaded with codfish, seemingly worthless, and resenting the bitter criticism of his associates for wasting their money, that gentleman resigns from the "syndicate." He and Halvorsen join hands and McGuffey and Scraggs, in partnership, purchase a small schooner, the Victor, planning to engage in coastwise trade. Gibney makes a contract with Scraggs to ship five hundred tons of "agricultural stuff" on the Victor. The "agricultural stuff" turns out to be the codfish, which by this time is an advanced stage of decay, and the shipment naturally would make the Victor worthless for passenger service, which the owners had planned. After natural acrimonious exchange of personalities, Mr. Gibney relents and releases the owners of the Victor from their contract. Scraggs, however, refuses to be pacified and withdraws from the "syndicate," announcing his intention of engaging in "chicken farming." With McGuffey and Halvorsen, Gibney purchases a power schooner and the three sail for the South seas, presumably to engage in occupations dear to their adventurous souls.

strong man can stand, so cut out the josh."

"All right, Mac. I guess the commodore's foot slipped this time, but I ain't squawkin' yet."

"No. Not yet," cried Mr. Gibney bitterly, "but soon."

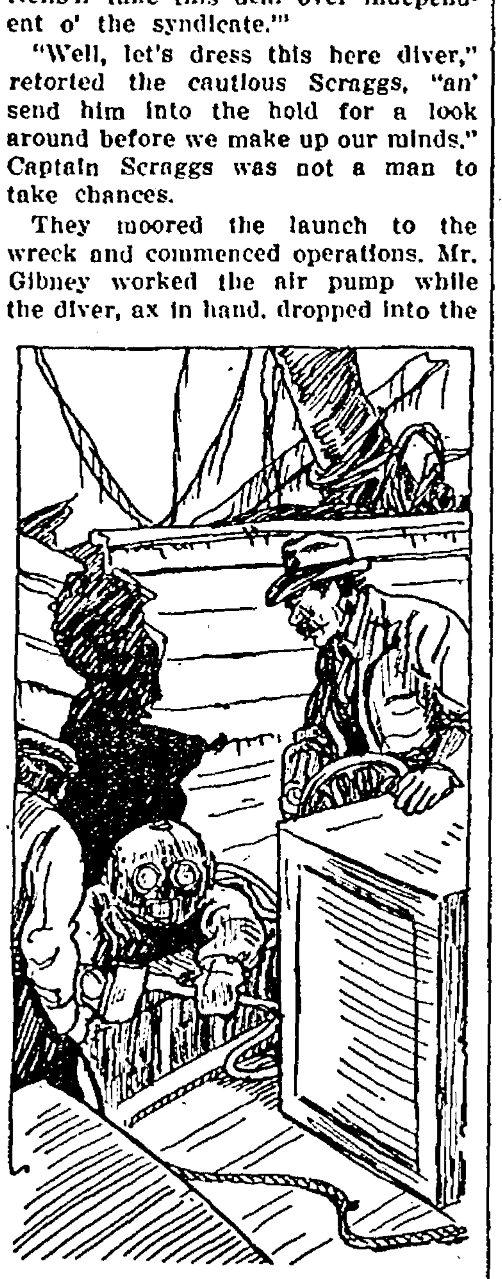
"I ain't, nuther," Captain Scraggs assumed an air of injured virtue. "I'm a-willin' to go through with you, Gib, at a loss, for nothin' else except to convince you o' the folly o' makin' this a one-man syndicate. I ain't a-kickin', but I'm free to confess that I'd like to be consulted oncet in a while."

"That's logic," rumbled the single-minded McGuffey.

"You dirty welchers," roared the commodore. "I ain't askin' you two to take chances with me. Me an' Neils'll take this deal over independent o' the syndicate."

"Well, let's dress this here diver," retorted the cautious Scraggs, "an' send him into the hold for a look around before we make up our minds." Captain Scraggs was not a man to take chances.

They moored the launch to the wreck and commenced operations. Mr. Gibney worked the air pump while the diver, ax in hand, dropped into the murky depths of the flooded hold. He was down half an hour before he signaled to be pulled up. All hands sprang to the line to haul him back to daylight, and the instant he popped clear of the water Mr. Gibney unburdened himself of an agonized curse.



Ax in Hand, Dropped Into the Murky Depths of the Flooded Hold.

In his hands the diver held a large decayed codfish!

Captain Scraggs turned a sneering glance upon the unhappy commodore while McGuffey sat down on the damp rail of the derelict and laughed until the tears coursed down his honest face.

"A dirty little codfishin' schooner," raved Captain Scraggs, "an' you a-sinkin' the time an' money o' the syndicate in rotten codfish on the say-so of a clairvoyant you ain't even been introduced to. Gib, if that's business, all I got to say is: 'Excuse me.'"

Mr. Gibney seized the defunct fish from the diver's hand, tore it in half, slapped Captain Scraggs with one awful fragment and hurled the other at McGuffey.

"I'm outer the syndicate," he raved, beside himself with anger. "Here I go to work an' make a fortune for a pair of short sports an' pikers an' you get to squealin' at the first five-hundred-dollar loss. I know you of old, Phineas Scraggs, an' the leopard can't change his spots." He raised his right hand to heaven. "I'm through for keeps. We'll sell the pearls today, divvy up, an' dissolve. I'm through."

"Glad of it," growled McGuffey. "I don't want no more o' that codfish, an' as soon as we git fightin' room I'll prove to you that no near-sailor can insult me an' git away with it. Me an' Scraggsy's got some rights. You can walk on Scraggsy, Gib, but it takes a man to walk on the McGuffey family."

Nothing but the lack of sea-room prevented a battle royal. Mr. Gibney stood glaring at his late partners. His great ham-like fists were opening and closing automatically.

"You're right, Mac," he said presently, endeavoring to control his anger and chagrin. "We'll settle this later. Take that helmet off the diver an' let's hear what he's got to report."

With the helmet removed the diver spoke:

"As near as I can make out, boss, there ain't a thing o' value in this hulk but a couple o' hundred tons o' codfish. She was cut in two just for'd o' the bulkhead an' her anchors carried away on the section that was cut off. She ain't worth the cost o' towin' her in on the flats."

"So that codfish has some value," sneered Captain Scraggs.

"Great grief, Scraggsy! Don't tell me it's sp'iled," cried McGuffey, simulating horror.

"No, not quite, Mac, not quite. Just slightly. I s'pose Gib'll tack a sign to the stub o' the main mast: 'Slightly spoiled codfish for sale. Apply to A. P. Gibney, on the premises. Special rates on Friday.'"

Mr. Gibney quivered, but made no reply. He carefully examined that portion of the derelict above water and discovered that by an additional expenditure of about fifty dollars he might recover an equal amount in brass fittings. The Kadiak's house was gone and her decks completely gutted. Nothing remained but the amputated hull and the foul cargo below her battered decks.

In majestic silence the commodore motioned all hands into the launch. In silence they returned to the city. Arrived here, Mr. Gibney paid off the launch man and the diver and accompanied by his associates repaired to a prominent jeweler's shop with the pearls they had accumulated in the South seas. The entire lot was sold for thirty thousand dollars. An hour later they had adjusted their accounts, divided the fortune of the syndicate equally, and then dissolved. At parting, Mr. Gibney spoke for the first time when it had not been absolutely necessary.

"Put a beggar on horseback an' he'll ride to the devil," he said. "When you two swabs was poor you was content to let me lead you into a fortune, but now that you're well-heeled, you think you're business men. All right! I ain't got a word to say except this: Before I get through with you two beachcombers I'll have all your money and you'll be a-beggin' me for a job. I apologize for soakin' you two with that diseased codfish, an' for old sake's sake we won't fight. We're still friends, but business associates no longer, for I'm too big a figger in this syndicate to stand for any criticism on my handlin' o' the joint finances. Hereafter, Scraggsy, old kiddo, you an' Mac can go it alone with your sternwheel steamer. Me an' The Squarehead legs it together an' takes our chances. You don't hear that poor untootered Swede makin' no holler at the way I've handled the syndicate—".

"But, Gib, my dear boy," chattered Captain Scraggs, "will you just listen to re—"

"Enough! Too much is plenty. Let's shake hands an' part friends. We just can't get along in business together, that's all."

"Well, I'm sorry, Gib," mumbled McGuffey, very much crestfallen, "but then you hove that dog-gone fish at me an'—"

"That was fortune hittin' you a belt in the face, Mac, an' you was too self-conceited to recognize it. Remember that, both of you two. Fortune hit you in the face today an' you didn't know it."

"I'd ruther die poor, Gib," wailed McGuffey.

The commodore shook hands cordially and departed, followed by the faithful Neils Halvorsen. The moment the door closed behind them Scraggs turned to the engineer.

"Mac," he said earnestly, "Gib's up to somethin'. He's got that imagination o' his workin'. I can tell it every time; he gets a foggy look in his eyes. We made a mistake kiddin' him today. Gib's a sensitive boy some ways an' I reckon we hurt his feelin's without intendin' it."

"He thrun a dead codfish at me," protested McGuffey. "I love old Gib like a brother, but that's carryin' things with a mighty high hand."

"Well, I'll apologize to him," declared Captain Scraggs and started for the door to follow Mr. Gibney. McGuffey barred his way.

"You apologize without my consent an' you gotta buy me out o' the Victor. I won't be no engineer with a skipper that lacks backbone."

"Oh, very well, Mac." Captain Scraggs realized too well the value of McGuffey in the engine room. He knew he could never be happy with anybody else. "We'll complete the deal with the Victor, ship a crew, get down to business, an' leave Gib to his codfish. An' let's pay our bill an' get outer here. It's too high-toned for me—an' expensive."

For two weeks Captain Scraggs and McGuffey saw no more of Mr. Gibney and Neils Halvorsen. In the meantime, they had commenced running the Victor regularly up river, soliciting business in opposition to the regular steamboat lines. While the Victor was running with light freights and consequently at a loss, the prospect for ultimate business was very bright and Scraggs and McGuffey were not at all worried about the future.

Judge at their surprise, therefore, when one morning who should appear at the door of Scraggs' cabin but Mr. Gibney.

"Mornin', Gib," began Scraggs cheerily. "I s'pose you been rolled for your money as per usual, an' you're around lookin' for a job as mate?"

Mr. Gibney ignored this veiled insult. "Not yet, Scraggsy. I got about five hundred tons o' freight to send up to Dunnigan's landing an' I want a lump sum figger for doin' the job. We parted friends an' for the sake o' old times I thought I'd give you a chance to figger on the business."

"Thanky, Gib. I'll be glad to. Where's your freight an' what does it consist of?"

"Agricultural stuff. It's crated, an' I deliver it here on the steamer's deck within reach o' her tackles. No heavy pieces. Two men can handle every piece easy."

The copy for the Annual is nearly all at the printers. Many of the engravings are back. It will not take long before the second annual of Belmond High School will be out. The Senior pictures are especially good this year. M. J. Thoe did the photography again this year. The Herald Press are doing the printing this year.

The Senior Class Play has been selected. It is Booth Tarkington's "Clarence." This is one of the cleverest plays that can be given with the amateur stage today. Those who will find as many laughs in "Clarence." The parts will be given out and practice will begin in a few days.

The first real base ball game of the season will take place on the local diamond Friday afternoon promptly at 4 o'clock when umpire will call "Play Ball." And Kanawha and Belmond will cross bats for the first time this season.

Kanawha is out for blood, but Coach Gruetzmacher and our boys are not asleep and we will show them some game.

Come out and boost the team. We have a real team this year and they are worthy of big crowds.

This week closes the second six weeks of the semester, and students are busy with tests. Only six more weeks of school and everybody is working hard.

The Home Track Meet will be held the last week of April. The exact date has not yet been set. This meet is one of keen competition between classes and is preparatory to later dual meets with Clarion and Goldfield.

Rip Van Winkle is Coming Monday

It comes recommended as a clean, wholesome film, worth seeing. All grade children will be admitted to the matinee for 10 cents, and will secure their tickets from their teacher on Monday. The regular prices of 10 and 25 cents will be charged at night.

BACK TO THE FIRST LINE

Backward, turn backward, oh time in your flight, I am blue as they make 'em tonight. I have been blessed with an appetite rare, equal to that of a cinnamon bear. Now I'm lopsided, dyspeptic and lank, living on stuff that makes me a crank.—O, for some gravy like ma used to make—, pass me the steak, brother, pass me the steak.

When I hark back to the smokehouse of yore, loaded with goodies from exit to door. Think of the pantry, and springhouse and cave, bursting with viands an angel might crave. Now I front up some vulcanized meat, doped and embalmed till it ain't fit to eat. O, for some corn bread, and hog-jowl and greens—Pass me the beans, brother, pass me the beans.

Once we ate hominy, finer than silk. Now it's ground cornstalks with racket store milk. Stuff that was never inside a cow—made out of whitewash, the devil knows how! I have grown weary of "crispies" and "flakes"—copyright wafers and patented cakes—factory-made fodder that ain't worth a ————! Pass me the ham, brother, pass me the ham!—Exchange.

MAYOR PRITCHARD SOAKS FIRST OFFENDER $100

Wednesday evening at about 8:00 o'clock, Mayor W. S. Pritchard had his first experience as a police court judge. Complaint had been filed with him that H. F. Sporaa, who resides in the east and south part of town, had been disturbing the peace by using profane and obscene language, and handling certain members of his family rather rough. Mayor Pritchard ordered his arrest, and Sporaa was brought up for hearing. Before a fair sized congregation, the mayor listened to the evidence, at the conclusion of which he casually remarked: "$100 and costs." Sporaa refused to pay the fine, but as failure to pay it carried a jail sentence of 30 days, he made up his mind just before he reached the city bastile, that the balmy spring air partaken of in the open would be preferable to being caged up, and informed Marshall Jack MacNichol that he would like to have further words with the mayor. He was returned to the mayor's office where he laid down $50 in cash. Upon good behavior, the remaining $50 will be remitted. From the attitude assumed by our new mayor, we take it that offenders are to be dealt with sternly, and that those who make a pastime of abusing their families need beware.—Leader.

The Sodality girls, of St. Francis church, gave a shower last week Saurday evening, in honor of Miss Alberta Pierce, who was united in marriage to Robert Beckett, of Clarion, Monday. The shower was held at the home of Mrs. Matt Sullivan, and was attended by some 20 young ladies of the society. The guest of honor was the recipient of many useful gifts, the shower being a kitchen one. Refreshments were served.

VERNON TOWNSHIP FARMER IN TROUBLE

Teacher Refuses Demand To Advance Girl—County Attorney Takes Hand

County Recorder Edith Vaughn was off duty the past week on account of an attack of influenze. Mrs. B. C. Clark had charge of the recorder's office during her absence.

Judge Thompson of Webster City convened the April term of court at Clarion on Monday. The time so far has been devoted to preliminary matters and assignment of cases for trail for the coming week.

Policeman Fred Johnson of Clarion has appealed from the decision in Squire Williamson's court. The case will come up for trial at the October term, being filed too late for the present term.

The several highway patrolmen of the county met with the supervisors and Engineer Hilton Saturday in conference over the 1922 road upkeep. Eighteen or twenty patrolmen were present at the school of insruction.

The grand jury organized by choosing the first named as foreman: D. McBride, E. Bock, John Beyer, A. W. Moseley, H. J. Whitten, Albert Schroeder, J. H. Flurer. Their first work was to reconsider the former indictments, which were set aside by Judge McCall owing to a technicality in the selection of the grand jurors.

County Attorney Rogers, Sheriff Lang and Miss Blanche Bock were called to Vernon township Saturday for the trial of a case coming under the compulsory education law. Four children belonging to the J. W. Specht and Chas. Kahler familes are the ones involved. The Spechts started the trouble because it is alleged the teacher, Miss Edna Williams, refused to advance their daughter from the fourth to the sixth grade on the request of Mrs. Specht. The child was not qualified for advancement according to the teacher, who is supported in this view by those in authority. The case was postponed until June 1st, as the county attorney was unable to look after the same until after the present term of court. It will be remembered the Spechts's were summoned before the war board a few years ago.

New School for Norway

The E. B. Benton Co. of Randall was the successful bidder for the erection of the four new school houses in Norway township. The price of the above company was something near $13,000. Work on the buildings will comence about the first of May.—Monitor.

Our Store at Clarion is to be sold at sheriff's sale on May 4th, Sheriff Lang having closed the doors last week. Judge Thompson ordered a special execution in favor of the seven directors, Thos. Shillington, F. W. Pohlman, Barney Benson, B. B. Suiter, F. W. Zastrow, T. K. Whipple and Alf. Huntley, who signed a joint note to procure funds for the operation of the store When the case came up for trial no one appeared to defend. The amount involved is $4170.67.

New Citizens

The following applications for citizenship in these United States were granted by Judge Thompson last week, the first three being soldier boys.

Asmus N. Sorenson, Blairsburg.
John Halverson, Eagle Grove.
Martin Tesdahl, Eagle Grove.
Anton Espeland, Eagle Grove—Norway.
Martin Hudecek, Eagle Grove—Austria.
Pual E. Marchal, Eagle Grove—Germany.
Luke Wessels, Eagle Grove— Germany.
Erick Stueland, Eagle Grove—Norway.
John Carstens, Galt—Germany.
John P. Waltzing, Belmond—Luxemburg.
Bjarne Hoagensen, Belmond—Norway.
Karl P. Arne, Eagle Grove—Norway.
John Carlson, Eagle Grove—Norway.
Chas. H. Payne, Clarion,—United States.
Adolph Hisler, Woolstock—Alsace Loraine.
Karl H. Elberg, Clarion—Sweden.

In granting the application of Chas. Payne of Clarion Judge Thompson referred to him as the "prodigal son." Several years ago this applicant along with Clifford and Caryl Goslin, Ed. Schumpp and Glen Tullar went to Canada and became subjects of the king in order to take up a homestead. Mr. Payne was the last to return to the fold, the other boys having taken out papers while in the army.

Petition of Carl John Kalvig of Clarion was continued and that of Geo. H. Vivian of Eagle Grove denied.

The 1923 auto plates are already on hand, having arrived last week. Treasurer Allen has them safely stored in his vault at the court house. There were ninety boxes in the shipment, a total of 4500 plates, weighing two and one-fourth tons. When asked if he might not put on a special on the new plates, offering reduced rates to early buyers, Mr. Allen said he now had his hands full collecting delinquent auto taxes for 1921, in addition to numerous other duties. Miss Viola Banks is assisting in the office during the period of increased business.

LIDDIA SHAFER WICKHAM

Liddia Shafer, was born near Cassopolis, Mich., February 18, 1845 and died at her home in Belmond, Iowa April 12, 1922. She was married to A. J. Wickham at Eldora, Iowa in 1862 and to this union seven children were born, four of whom survive their mother's death. Charles E. Wickham, Minneapolis, Minn.; Jacob Wickham, of Belmond, Iowa; Mrs. Mabel Brooks, Bird Island, Minn.; and Winefield Wickham of Minneapolis, Minn.

Mrs. Wickham moved with her parents to Iowa when she was seven years old and her father bought a farm from the government. Her husband moved to Belmond about twenty-nine years ago and this has been their home ever since. Mr. Wickham died about twenty-six years ago and for the past few years she has lived with her son, Jacob. Mrs. Wickham has been affucted with asthema for the last ten years during which time she has never been able to sleep in a bed. She had been quite poorly for some months but was not thought to be in a critical condition until the first of the week since which time she was unable to speak and her relatives were sent for.

Mrs. Wickham had the privilege of seeing this state develop from a barren prairie to the first place among the states of the Union in agriculture as well as in many other respects. She was a member of the Disciples church but has been unable to attend services for years.

Besides the four children she leaves three brothers and one sister.

Funeral services were held at the home on Friday afternoon and were in charge of Rev. S. U. Leinbach. Those from away were Mrs. Jas. Beadle and daughter, Mrs. Wm. Suer, of Fort Dodge, Mr. Henry Shafer and daughter, Mrs. Henry Klipstein, of Eldora, Mrs. Hazel Hawley, Hayfield Iowa, Charles E. Wickham and daughter and Winefield Wickham of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Mabel Brooks of Bird Island, Minn.

DRUGS

We buy punk drugs in large stone jugs; to cure our ills we buy green pills and noor them in our faces. We drink brown suds distilled from buds, stovewood and water lilies, consume such dope and vaguely hope that it will cure the willies. The doctor romps through dismal swamps and gathers toadstools blooming, and makes a brew of mottled blue for invalids' consuming. The learned men chase to every place, in search for drugs to cure us; they bill up rock, make pills of chalk, that they may reassure us. The faith and hope we place in dope no knowledge ever throttles, what faith we have in pills and salve, and everything in bottles! The wise men say. "Throw drugs away and you'll feel better than if you drink some bottled ink, or something worse and wetter. Eat wholesome food, like oatmeal stewed, go roostward with the chickens, quit chewing pills, and soon your ills will vanish like the dickens." The learned men speak, their wise words leak through lips that spring no folly; but all things sane give us a pain and cause us melancholy. We pin our hope on bottled dope, on pills in crates and baskets; we'll drink our drugs from flasks and jugs until we're in our caskets.—Walt Mason.

BEG YOUR PARDON?

The following clipping is from the Centerville, (Iowa) Iowegan, and pertaining to Belmond's sugar factory will be of interest to local people, especially as the Iowegan mentions a "problem" which never has arisen here in any way, shape or manner that we have heard of: The problem of Russians farming while the people objected to their presence. A few, a very few, Russians have engaged in farming in a small way here, but if there were ever any hard feelings over it, we haven't yet heard of them. The Iowegan is talking at random, or else has been sadly misinformed, because there is not, and hasn't been, any "problem." A knock by any other name would be as sweet.

The item says:

Farmers of Wright and adjoining counties are signing contracts for the growing of sugar beets the coming season and it is now planned that the big factory at Belmond will handle the entire crop. The factory was closed last year and the beets had to be shipped to Mason City. The contract with farmeds calls for a price adjusted on a share basis. At the present price of beet sugar in New York at $5.50 per hundred the beet grower will receive $6.55 per ton. It is not believed the price of sugar will drop below the present level. If it does the farmer will receive less for his sugar beets. Those who have been growing beets state that $6.55 a ton is a very good price. The factory management furnish the help to cultivate the crop but the farmer must foot the bill. The help is mostly Russian, the whole family moving into shacks provided and every member of the family old enough is put to work. A problem has developed. The Russians get tired of working for others, save their money, rent a farm and become permanent residents of the cummunity over the protest of those who live there.

SANDS MEMORIAL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH NOTES

We are glad of the good services of last Sabbath and we hope that it may be but a foretaste of the good things which will follow. It was fine to have so many of the scholars back in S. S. who have been out during the bad weather and roads. We hope to see many more follow the example of those young people who took their stand for Christ and came into the church. Every member of the Sabbath school a Christian and every member of the church a worker is our motto.

The Cantata on Sabbath afternoon was great inspiration to all who were able to attend. The thanks of all go out to the Chorister, Mrs. Boughton, and the members of the choir and especially to Mr. H. F. Luick who so ably helped when Mr. Wm. Nelson was not able to take his part.

The Association is now in session and we want all who can to attend the remaining sessions.

Be on hand next Sunday at 10:00 o'clock and for all the services of the day. Miss Elizabeth Leinbach will lead the young people at 8:00 o'clock and this will be followed by a short illustrated sermon on the Life Saving Service of the U. S. Come to these services.

The Webster City Association of Congregational churches is holding meetings in Belmond this week, in the local Congregational church, the meetings being held Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sufficient Contracted To Assure Operation

Many Farmers, Viewing A Wet Cold Spring, Are Increasing Their Acreage

FINE PROGRESS IS MADE

Contracts on acreage for sugar beets for the Belmond factory, are coming in excellent shape, and sufficient acreage has now been contracted to assure a successful campaign of operation. The present beet acreage contracted to date is very satisfactory, and is increasing daily. A great many farmers, in view of the cold, rainy weather and the prospects for a bad corn year, have been increasing their sugar beet acreage, and this increase has been very gratifying to the officials of the company. It shows that the farmers in the surrounding territory are co-operating and are convinced that sugar beets are a crop that is going to give them very good returns in a financial way this year.

Reports from the surrounding territory, from Independent reporters, are that the farmers are taking very kindly to acreage and the contract offered by the sugar company, as they more fully understand it. Work is going forward rapidly and thoroly towards the operation of the factory, and there appears to be no longer any question of a successful operating campaign. Everything is in favor of success and with the co-operation and pushing of the entire community, Belmond will see its greatest industry once more humming, with work for its people, and more money to meet the costs of living.

PIERCE—BECKETT

Miss Alberta Pierce, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Pierce of Belmond, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Beckett, of Clarion, at the St. Francis Rectory in Belmond on Monday, April 17, at 3:00 o'clock p. m.

They were attended by Miss Lyna Pierce, a sister of the bride, and Mr. Leo Porter, of Clarion. Following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served at the bride's home, after which the couple departed on a short honeymoon trip. They will be at home to their friends at Clarion after May 1.

The bride is a graduate of the Belmond high school, and of the Dramatic Art course at Mt. St. Clare College, at Clinton. She is a very charming young lady of many accomplishments.

Mr. Beckett is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Beckett, of Clarion, and was born and raised in that community. He attended Clarion high school, and is a veteran of the World War. For several years he has been assistant to County Engineer Hilton.

The friends in Belmond, with whom the Independent takes pleasure in joining, extend their congratulations and best wishes.

OLAF NEWS

(Held over from last week)

Mrs. Geo. Baxter accompanied her grandmother, Mrs. John Windecker, to her home in Iowa Falls, Monday night, returning Tuesday morning.

It seems that work is very scarce in southern Iowa, as several from that vicinity have been here looking for work.

The Ladies Aid will hold their next meeting with Mrs. G. Halverson, April 26, instead of April 19.

Orpha Anderson, wife and baby were over Sunday visitors with relatives in Belmond.

S. O. Windecker came home from Iowa Falls, last Monday. He had been there on a business mission.

Mrs Guy Barton has been on the sick list, having had a siege of the flu.

Mr. Moe and a gang of tilers were in our burg Monday looking for a boarding place.

Gertie Delger is helping Mrs. S. O. Windecker with her housecleaning.

Clarence Scott and wife spent Sunday in Belmond.

We understand that Henry Anderson has secured contracts for a large acreage of beets in our community.

Arthur Olson has been enjoying a visit from his cousin, Herchel Nelson, of Fort Dodge.

Chas Baxter spent Easter at the Geo. Baxter home.

With farmers busy in the field, and their wives busy at housecleaning, news is scarce.

Ole Scott came out from Belmond to help with the farm work last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Orpha Anderson will entertain the 500 club this week, Thursday.

"BEG YONR PARDON"

The Humboldt Republican last week carried a "Beg your pardon" paragraph, and explained a recent editorial headed "Rats in Business." Seems that the competitor in Humboldt, or another print shop anyway, took the exception to the remarks, and acquired the idea that he was being called a rat. Probably didn't want to get in danger during the rat killing crusade. We can't see this beg your pardon idea on such writings. Now matter what is printed, somebody is going to take exception to it, and if a newspaper apologised every time someone did get huffy, the sheets would be nothing but "beg your pardons." In case of error it is different, but as for apologising for your viewpoints—"Rats."
